Roosevelt Won't Quit Illinois Race, Friends Say

Expected to Cruise Southern Seas As Deadline Passes For Removing Name

By Cecil B. Dickson.

His plans guarded with the closest secrecy, President Roosevelt will leave the Capital either late Wednesday or Thursday for a two-week vacation trip in the South.

Mr. Roosevelt told intimates yesterday that during his absence he will continue to maintain silence on the third-term issue.

It was pointed out that Mr. Roosevelt has until February 24 to withdraw his name from the Democratic primaries in Illinois.

On high authority it was learned that Mr. Roosevelt would probably be aboard a vessel in Southern waters until after that date and that no move would be made to withdraw the President's name from the Illinois contest which comes on April 9.

That Mr. Roosevelt would continue to withhold his intentions toward a third term until March 4, the seventh anniversary of his first inauguration as President, was intimated by this reliable source. There is a possibility, however, that Mr. Roosevelt may announce his plans then.

With third-term advocates booming Mr. Roosevelt, and Vice President Garner and Postmaster General Farley openly seeking the Democratic Presidential nomination, a move among other party leaders to bring about a showdown between the three is developing.

These leaders said yesterday that unless Mr. Roosevelt, Garner and Farley "get together" soon, the party's chances of continuing in power after 1940 would be endangered.

Cancels Conference

The group discussing this move includes both old-line Democrats and New Dealers in Congress. Their talk revolves around a suggestion that a group representing both wings of the party "wait" on the President early in March and ask him to call a conference of Garner and Farley.

This talk was further stirred yesterday after President Roosevelt canceled his regular Monday morning conference with Democratic Congressional leaders. Only Representative Rayburn, of Texas, House majority leader, was called to the White House. Sunday, Vice President Garner, Senate Majority Leader Barkley and Speaker Bankhead were notified the regular meeting had been called off.

This sudden departure from custom caused many Democratic chieftains to raise their eyebrows, particularly since Garner has entered in the Illinois and Wisconsin primaries in opposition to the President.

Word to Farley Claimed

New York, Feb. 12 (AP).—The World-Telegram says that "Postmaster General Farley has told Mr. Roosevelt he is strongly opposed to a third term" and that "in reply he (Farley) has received from the President what he regards as assurance that Mr. Roosevelt will not be a candidate."

The World-Telegram's story continues:

"Mr. Farley's intimates said Mr. Farley agreed to the use of his name (in the Massachusetts primary) only after deciding to take Mr. Roosevelt's word that he had no intention of being a candidate for the third time."

In Chicago, Farley's only reaction to the story was "no comment."

Republican Big Guns Open Fire On New Deal at Lincoln Dinners

Dewey, Taft, Bridges, Hoover, Martin Talk; 700 Dinners Held

(See Pages 8 and 9)

Lincoln's Birthday last night brought bitter denunciation for the New Deal as Republican leaders throughout the country called for a return to what they called the principles of the Great Emancipator.

Addressing, in person or by radio, some 700 Lincoln Day dinners in most of the States, outstanding party figures pointed to unsolved domestic problems and pictured the danger of dictatorship here unless they were solved.

Speakers included Herbert Hoover, and such Republican Presidential possibilities as Thomas E. Dewey, of New York; Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan; Senator Taft, of Ohio; Senator Bridges, of New Hampshire, and Representative Martin, of Massachusetts.

Taft, at Greensboro, N. C., asserted that "if the New Deal were licensed to proceed in the 1940 elections," forces would be unloosed which would carry the Nation inevitably to "a modern streamlined totalitarian dictatorship."

From Dewey, at Portland, Oreg., came a statement that the last seven years had seen a "constant erosion of capital." A capital outlay of $36,000,000,000 would have been necessary to offset wear and tear on industrial plants and equipment, he asserted, while only $29,000,000,000 had actually been spent for this purpose. The New Deal, he added, totally fails to recognize this factor.

Bridges told an Oklahoma City audience that Lincoln would deplore "the economic power of the Government over its citizens as a trend toward making the citizen a ward of the state in the guise of benevolent paternalism."

A Democrat to whom Presidential aspirations are widely accredited, Senator Wheeler, of Montana, made a Lincoln Day speech at Jersey City, N. J. He said the country was engaged in "economic and social warfare," of a type that "destroys the souls and the moral fiber

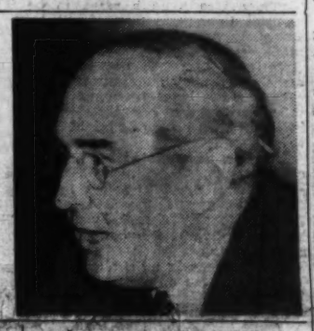
HERBERT HOOVER, listed "three wrong notions . . . (1) the whole system is wrong . . . (2) the Government can plan, direct or operate the economic life of the people . . . (3) the Government can spend and spend and borrow and borrow without thought of tomorrow"

THOMAS E. DEWEY lambasted the New Deal with a charge that it had shackled business initiative by a policy of "rule or ruin" to the point where the American productive plant is "running down at the heel" at the rate of more than a billion dollars a year.

SENATOR TAFT, "In 1940 we face a fundamental decision—whether this country shall remain the kind of country which our fathers made, and Lincoln preserved . . . or a totalitarian Executive with unlimited and undivided power over the lives and activities of individuals . . ."



SENATOR VANDENBERG, "It is the responsibility of Lincoln's party to save the American system of free enterprise and free men under the renewed spirit of constitutional democracy," the Michigan Senator declared.

House Votes Easier Paying Of D. C. Tax

Two Installments A Year Approved; Bill Puts Off Date Of Filing to April 15

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

Drastic amendment of the District income tax and possible reopening of the entire local revenue problem was indicated at the Capitol yesterday as the House passed a bill to allow payment of the levy in semi-annual installments.

Protests on the House floor against triple taxation of Federal employes who retain legal residences in the States brought a promise from Chairman Randolph, of the House District Committee, that an amendment to exempt them from the local tax will be considered promptly.

Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, chairman of the fiscal affairs sub-committee, said the present difficulty proved that an income tax could not be imposed equitably on local residents.

Once the revenue issue is reopened, he said, proposals to substitute an outright sales tax or a dual sales-income tax as recommended last year in the Pond report may be considered.

Date Postponed to April

Exemption of Washingtonians who maintain voting residences in the States will all but wreck the District income tax, officials said, as some 42,000 will escape payment regardless of how long they have lived in the National Capital and of the fact that they enjoy all municipal services accorded bona fide District residents.

Before passing the semiannual installment amendment to the income tax law, the House tacked on another amendment to exempt all pensions to veterans despite a plea from District Committee members that the proposal be withheld until other revisions of the act are considered.

The bill, which now goes to the Senate, postpones the filing date of the income tax return from March 15 to April 15, and allows the second half of the levy to be held up until October 15.

It also authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to make advances to the District to make up whatever deficit is created by spreading the tax payments over two fiscal years.

Five other amendments to the income tax act will be presented to Congress soon by Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal, he disclosed after the House action. The revisions are needed to remedy errors made in the hasty drafting of the law last year.

Provisions Listed

Briefly, they provide for:

Elimination of the present requirement that a tax return be sworn to, but extension of the penalty provisions to cover false returns.

Relief from payment of the $25 filing fee by corporations which make no net income in the District.

Cancellation of the penalty provision of one-half of 1 per cent a month for extension of time for filing returns.

A primary exemption of $100 on the net income of trust funds and

Casual Baby Placements Imperil Foster Families

Too Young to Know What the Future Holds

By Lucia Giddens,

The tragedies of the District's "boomerang babies"—who don't stick in haphazard placements—can't be counted, because not all of them come to light. But enough of them show up in the police records to hint at the amount of human havoc in this problem.

Capt. Rhoda Milliken, director of the Woman's Bureau, Metropolitan Police, tells incident after incident about the tragic aftermath of casual placements, which no law now prevents in the District.

"A family here had taken in a baby which had been passed back and forth. They didn't even know who its mother was. She was just the friend of a friend," Capt. Milliken said.

"One night, the man in the household said he was tired of having the child there, eating up what he earned. At 9:30 o'clock that night, the man and his wife brought it to the Woman's Bureau and said they wouldn't keep it any longer.

Millions Under Arms

By Edward Kennedy,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Istanbul, Feb. 12.—Arrival of a large contingent of Australian and New Zealand troops at Suez today and increased military activity of four Balkan nations heightened the strong belief that a new war front will be opened either in the Caucasus or the Balkans this spring.

The landing of the Anzacs at Suez—they were said here to number 30,000—brought the total strength of British, French and Turkish forces in the Near East to nearly 1,000,000 men. Altogether the three Allies, Turkey being a nonbelligerent partner, are estimated to have a potential Near Eastern strength of 3,000,000 men.

Pilots to Be Added

In addition to the Anzacs who arrived today it was understood that Australian and New Zealand air force pilots now training in England would join the Near East forces soon. The Anzacs were expected to be moved to Palestine.

This military activity in the Near East was matched by similar action in the Balkans. Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Greece and Hungary called up men for "spring training," while Rumania, whose oil is coveted by Germany as well as by Britain and France, prepared to swell her army to 1,600,000 by March 1.

In addition, advices from the frontier town of Jesenice, Yugoslavia, said that Italy was speeding fortifications in the Udine region opposite Yugoslavia and in the Brenner Pass zone opposite Germany.

With Germany and the Allies stalemated on the Western Front behind the greatest fortifications the world has ever known, military experts turned special attention to the strategic southeast as the key to Europe's back door, and, specifically, to Rumania's oil.

Thousands to Be Massed

Competent military observers state on the basis of carefully checked figures the British-French forces in the Near East now total at least 570,000 men. Turkey has 350,000 men under arms, making the tri-power strength 920,000 men.

Sources close to the Allied military missions here say that France plans to have 700,000 more men in Syria before long, and it is also reported by competent authorities that Britain is planning to mobilize 100,000 Arabs and 40,000 Jews in Palestine.

Turkey could bring her total force to 1,500,000 men, it is said, and thus the potential Near Eastern strength

President Places Wreath At Memorial

5,000 Bare Heads In Birthday Tribute To Union's Preserver

President Roosevelt placed a wreath in the memorial to President Lincoln yesterday in the presence of 5,000 persons who stood with bared heads while the United States Army Band sent echoing back from the marble "His Soul Goes Marching On."

The crowd that paid tribute to Lincoln on the 131st anniversary of his birth crowded the sides of the Memorial steps and formed in a half moon on the sidewalk across the thoroughfare. Many had been there at least an hour before the President, in formal dress, arrived at 12:15 p. m.

In his open car were Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. David Gray, Mrs. Roosevelt's aunt, and Brig. Gen. E. M. Watson, presidential secretary and military aide. The party alighted and stood beside the car as the band struck "Hail to the Chief," followed, in a moment, by a bugler sounding "To the Colors."

The rifles of soldiers, sailors, marines and coast guardsmen went to present arms and the President fixed his glistening top hat across his heart. Capt. Daniel J. Callaghen, presidential naval aide, placed the White House wreath by one of the columns.

The Presidential party resumed their seats in the car and as it moved away the crowd applauded.

Follow Faith Of Lincoln, Pastors Urge

"With malice toward none . . .
"With charity for all . . .
"With firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right . . ."

Four spiritual leaders of the Nation's Capital, leaders of Christian and Jew, white and colored, last night called upon America to seek in Lincoln's imperishable words the unswerving path to faith, freedom and tolerance.

Their pleas were broadcast via N. B. C. in a Lincoln's Birthday program sponsored by the Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital. Participating were the Rev. H. B. Taylor, Fifteenth Street Presbyterian Church; the Rev. Dr. John K. Cartwright, Church of Immaculate Conception; Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, Washington Hebrew Congregation, and the Rev. Dr. Albert Joseph McCartney, Covenant-First Presbyterian Church.

Plea for Tolerance

"If Lincoln's plea that we have malice toward none' has vitally important meaning for us today," said the Rev. Mr. Taylor, "it is that we should not entertain ill-will in our hearts toward our fellow citizens, simply because, with regard to some things, they happen to differ radically from us.

"His plea brings to us the realization . . . . that if we allow malicious indefensible prejudice against our fellow countrymen—because of their race or color—to becloud our vision, we can never hope to see the glorious democracy which, by faith, our fathers saw, and for

House Group Renews Probe Of D. C. Home

Mrs. Roosevelt Urges Congressional Wives Visit Welfare Agencies

A House subcommittee prepared to resume investigation of the Home for the Aged and Infirm at Blue Plains today following another attack on the institution by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and a plea for a solution to the budgetary problem by Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana.

Robert E. Bondy, public welfare director, and Frank B. Haskell, superintendent at Blue Plains, will testify before Chairman D'Alesandro (Democrat), of Maryland, and his subcommittee, beginning at 10:30 o'clock in the District Committee room.

Not Placing the Blame

Mrs. Roosevelt indicated a willingness to appear before the Senate and House subcommittees on District appropriations when they take up the supply bill at her press conference. She later urged wives of Congressmen to visit the Home for the Aged and Infirm and the Children's Receiving Home.

After relating her visits to these institutions and to the Industrial Home School, Mrs. Roosevelt, in an address at the Congressional Club's annual breakfast at the Raleigh Hotel, said:

"I'm not putting any blame anywhere, but I imagine it's we who are to blame for these conditions."

Mrs. Roosevelt said she would like her listeners to visit the receiving home and "look those children over and think how you would feel if they were yours."

At her press conference she said she felt the District budget definitely inadequate to meet the needs of the District. She said her investiga-

Virginia Bill to Tax U. S. Workers Is Ruled Legal

Richmond, Va., Feb. 12 (AP).—Attorney General A. P. Staples had advised Chairman Aubrey Weaver of the State House finance committee that House bill 96, taxing the incomes of Federal office holders and employes under the Virginia income tax law, is constitutional.

The finance committee, which meets tomorrow morning, deferred action on the bill last week until it would inquire into the constitutionality of the measure. Especially challenged at the committee hearing last week was the provision making the State income tax applicable to the taxable year 1939.

Brown to Push Investigation Of Baby Sales

House Committee Orders Inquiry Into Gasoline Condition

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, said last night he would order an immediate investigation into activities of Washington baby brokers.

The police head's announcement followed by a few hours a House District Committee resolution demanding a full report on the baby adoption business, as a result of exposures in the series of articles on "Babies for Sale" appearing in The Post.

"The moment I get official word from the House Committee in the morning," said Brown, "I'll have police investigators prepared to dig up the facts. We'll comply with the House resolution to the limit and try to get a report ready just as quickly as we can."

The inquiry was the third ordered by the committee yesterday and the fifth to be started this session. A subcommittee was appointed to probe gasoline sales. An offer to expose clairvoyants as fakers was accepted and turned over to the subcommittee on police and firemen's affairs.

Representative Vreeland (Republican), of New Jersey, suggested the investigation of baby brokers.

"I notice that The Washington Post has been charging that there is a market here for peddling babies," he said, "and I think we ought to look into it."

Reds Renew Fierce Drive Over Isthmus

Copyright by New York Times

Helsinki, Feb. 12.—The Russian offensive against the Mannerheim Line on the Karelian Isthmus went into its twelfth day today with increased fury.

The prodigality with which the Red army command is spending men and equipment is now taken as a sign the Russians really hope to break through, whereas it had been assumed earlier that the drive was intended only to occupy and tire the Finns, who lack reserves.

Tonight's Finnish official communique reports that the Russians, despite appalling losses throughout the fighting which began in earnest on the isthmus on February 1, threw several divisions yesterday against the Finnish lines, supporting them with tanks, artillery, and airplanes.

The Summa sector, on the direct line southeast from Viipuri toward the Soviet border, was the main objective.

At the same time, however, a tremendous attack supported by 150 tanks was launched to the east between Lake Moula and the Vuoksi River. This battle is still in progress. Fighting on the isthmus is going on night and day.

Another Soviet attack was launched at Taipale on the Lake Ladoga side of the isthmus. An indication of its violence is given in the Finnish report that four hours' artillery preparation preceded the

'Have a Heart Week' Parties Help to Swell Blood Bank Fund

"Have a Heart Week" began in Washington yesterday, and kind persons with warm hearts gathered in large parties and small parties, public and private, to play games to bring new life to children.

Nearly $200 was raised in two parties last night to swell the funds of the blood and serum bank at Children's Hospital, maintained by annual Valentine parties sponsored by The Washington Post, Station WJSV and the American Contract Bridge League.

With Valentine's Day due tomorrow, the number of announcements of parties held or planned grew to a flood last night. One announcement came from as far away as Culpeper, Va.

Every penny raised by these parties will go to purchase blood and serum for the life-saving bank, where it is always instantly available when need arises. No time is lost looking for donors with the right type of blood when danger strikes.

Experience of the "splendid work done by Children's Hospital" in cases in which the Ladies of Charity were interested was cited by Mrs. Frank Schwoerer, president of the society, as the reason her group wants to participate in the blood

Richmond, Va., Feb. 12 (AP).—Gov. Price's alcoholic beverage tax proposals designed to produce more than $2,000,000 a year in new revenue was approved by the House of Delegates today

White Slave Story Of Girl Holds 3

Two men and a woman were held to the grand jury yesterday on white slave charges.

James Richard Piercy, 30, Sam Harris, 35, and Mrs. Dorothy Dalton, 29, were accused of bringing to Washington from Waynesboro, Va., last December a 16-year-old girl who said she was forced into an immoral life here. She accused Piercy of shooting at her last Wednesday after she refused to help him in a robbery.

I. C. C. Passenger Chief Dies Fighting Fire in His Home

Overcome just as he reached the telephone to call for aid, Levi C. Morris, 53, chief of the passenger branch of the Interstate Commerce Commission, was found dead yesterday on the floor of his bedroom, the victim of dense smoke fumes from a burning divan.

Morris lived alone in a five-room bungalow at 2836 Twenty-seventh street northeast, since the death of his wife a year ago. He was found there by his cousin, Alton E. Morris, of 4831 New Hampshire avenue northwest, and a friend, Edward H. Cox, of 4915 Western avenue northwest, who were perturbed by his absence from work yesterday.

Forcing a window, they entered and found Morris, dressed in his underclothes, lying on the floor of the smoke-filled bedroom, an arm's length from the phone. The divan, in the living room, was badly burned, but no longer on fire.

Police believed Morris fell asleep smoking a cigar, probably Sunday night. The pillows of the couch caught fire and smoldered. They deduced Morris awakened by smoke, dashed into the kitchen with one of the pillows and threw it into the sink. As he returned for another, he felt faint and moved toward the bedroom to reach the telephone, but was suffocated.

A native of Ithaca, N. Y., Morris was a World War veteran. His parents and a brother, Ben Morris, of Buffalo, N. Y., survive.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

THE HAUNTED HOOSIER

Such things are very secret, so no one has revealed yet that it was the discovery—he had not concealed it—that Paul McNutt has invested $10,500 in bonds that started the hue and cry about his income tax.

Harlan Miller

It probably won't prove anything except that McNutt is thrifty.

• • • •

But the McNutt incident illustrates the Capital's infantile jealousy of any man who is frankly and unashamedly a candidate for the Presidency; its petty malice to a man not as physically homely as most politicians, and its readiness to ruin, for trivial reasons, a useful man gifted with the all too rare leadership and effectiveness.

• • • •

McNutt's income the last 20 years has been comfortable, but never colossal. The $10,500 investment represented moderate savings by a man who has always lived modestly within his means and believed in putting by something.

• • • •

When his salary at the University of Indiana was $5,000 a year, he lived with his wife and baby in a small apartment rented for $28 a month. The McNutts owned no car, and Mrs. McNutt did her own housework, took care of the baby.

• • • •

"If I'm going to get ahead," he said, "I've got to have a stake." So he saved half his salary.

His first car was an antiquated jalopy presented to him by his father, who wasn't rich either.

"—they want to mask him"

Until just before the innocent $10,500 investment was discovered, McNutt's name was not dragged into the investigation. Another Hoosier gentleman who has soured on McNutt, and who is having income tax trouble of his own, sicked the investigators on him. The $10,500 proved a false alarm.

Unofficially, Treasury officials have already said McNutt is clear.

Most of the money McNutt has earned in his life has been tax exempt—as a teacher and dean at a State university, as Governor, and so far as the State income tax is concerned, as High Commissioner to the Philippines.

• • • •

This tax-exempt income has amounted, all told, to about $190,000 since he left college. This averages less than $10,000 for 20 years.

The Legion paid him $10,000 for one year as commander.

As Indiana's Governor he got $8,000 a year.

His Philippine job paid him $18,000 a year and a house.

The rest of his income came largely from making speeches—at $25, $50 and $75 a speech at first, later at $100, $200 and $300.

Once he got $300 for a speech in Arizona, and his traveling expense exceeded that. His speaking income has never reached $5,000 a year.

McNutt's friends are not worried about the income tax gossip.

They're more worried about his breezy good looks which make him a target for so much sniping.

"Sometimes," said one of his friends, "I want to perform a surgical operation on his face, or make him wear a mask."

"—he felt two calls"

When McNutt left the Governor's mansion there were several weeks when he didn't know where his next pay check was coming from. But he wasn't worrying. He turned down two big money offers.

"My career," he told friends who remonstrated with him, "lies between education and politics." Then FDR sent him to Manila.

McNutt has never earned over $20,000 a year—and has approached that only while Philippine High Commissioner. He discusses his income with candor, and it is impossible to know him and entertain the notion that he would gyp the Government out of a few hundred dollars.

• • • •

Even to many who are not enthusiastic about the McNutt candidacy, it is apparent that the sin that has made him such a target is a candid, forthright and non-hypocritical desire to be President.

If it's a crime to aspire to the Presidency, then the White House must be occupied by criminals.

• • • •

The McNutt strategy board is far from dismayed by the recent blasts leveled at him.

They think that in a few weeks, when the Indiana investigation is ended, officialdom will do the fair thing and make an official statement to dispel officially the faint amenities of gossip.

Then, they are confident, the reaction will set in, and will be all in favor. They think he's still a leading 1940 contender.

Supreme Court Averts Test In Power Case

Findings of NLRB Are Held Conclusive As to Facts at Issue

By Robert C. Albright

Post Staff Writer

A constitutional test of the Government's flood control and hydroelectric program was narrowly averted yesterday by a 4-to-4 vote of the United States Supreme Court.

Over protests that the $54,000,000 Denison, Tex., dam would "irreparably injure" Oklahoma State interests, the equally divided court refused to receive a bill of complaint from the State.

Action had the effect of blocking a test of the program and gave the go-ahead signal for work on the Red River dam.

Busy Decision Day

In one of its busiest decision days, the court also:

Ruled the findings of the National Labor Relations Board are conclusive as to facts, even though the facts are disputed, and warned against encroachment by the courts "upon this exclusive power of the board."

Sustained the board's order for reemployment with back pay by the Waterman Steamship Corporation of Mobile, Ala., of 43 members of the crews of two vessels allegedly discharged after changing their membership from an A. F. of L. to a C. I. O. union.

Set aside death sentences for four Florida colored men in an opinion by Justice Black, vigorously condemning police methods of obtaining confessions and asserting: "The exalted power of some governments to punish manufactured crime dictatorially is the handmaid of tyranny."

Affirmed a decision enjoining Arkansas from imposing a tax on gasoline carried in interstate buses if the gasoline is for use in other States. Dissenting, Justices Black, Frankfurter and Douglas said the courts should leave to Congress the question of "the constantly increasing barriers to trade among the States."

Ruled the Federal Housing Administration is subject to garnishment for money due an employe. Justice Douglas deciding that Congress gave permission for the FHA to sue or be sued.

Sustained by an equally divided vote a lower court decision denying this Government is sole claimant to the $1,080,399 surplus after liquidation of the old Moscow Fire Insurance Co. The lower court decided the Government obtained no title from the Soviets by reason of assignment of Russian claims to the United States under the Litvinoff agreements.

Murphy Took No Part

In refusing Oklahoma permission to file suit to prevent construction of the Denison Dam, it was announced only that the court was "equally divided" and that Justice Murphy took no part in the decision. How the remaining eight justices divided was not disclosed nor were reasons advanced for refusing to take jurisdiction.

Oklahoma had argued that the dam over the Red River at a non-navigable point would serve no public purpose, would flood rich farm lands and highways, force 8,000 persons to move, reduce State revenues and invade State rights. It charged the dam was designed primarily for hydroelectric power, with flood control secondary.

Defending the 1938 flood control act authorizing the project as a "valid exercise of Congressional authority over interstate commerce," Attorney General Jackson had argued that the court lacked jurisdiction in the case. He invoked the general welfare clause of the Constitution and contended diminution of State revenues does not affect validity of Federal legislation.

In upholding the NLRB orders in the Waterman Steamship Corporation case, Justice Black rebuked the lower court. He said "the Court of Appeals' failure to enforce the board's order resulted from the substitution of its judgment on disputed facts for the board's judgment—and power to do that has been denied the courts by Congress."

Intent of Congress Cited

Citing the NLRB Act's provision that the findings of the board as to facts shall be conclusive, Black said:

"It is of paramount importance that courts not encroach upon this exclusive power of the board if effect is to be given the intention of Congress to apply an orderly, informed and specialized procedure to the complex, administrative problems arising in the solution of industrial disputes. As it did in setting up other administrative bodies, Congress has left questions of law which arise before the board—but not more—ultimately to the traditional review of the judiciary."

Directing reinstatement of the crews of the company's two ships, Bienville and Fairland, Justice Black said, "There can be no doubt of the substantial support for the board's finding that the crews (and two other men) all lost their jobs because of C. I. O. activities."

The court likewise sustained the board's finding that the company discriminated against the C. I. O. affiliate by refusing its representatives' passes to board the ships, while issuing passes to A. F. of L. representatives.

Denouncing "secret, inquisitorial" police methods, the court chose Lincoln Day to set aside the death sentences against four Broward County, Fla., colored men and to rededicate Federal courts "as havens of refuge for those who might otherwise suffer because they are helpless, weak, outnumbered, or because they are nonconforming victims of prejudices and public excitement."

Warren H. Willner, Patent Examiner, And Wife Protest Alley-Paving Assessment Of $265 Before Court of Appeals

Warren H. Willner, patent examiner who is continuing his law studies while waiting to learn whether he won admission to the bar in the December examinations, won his first case yesterday before the Court of Appeals, the District's highest tribunal.

Willner and his 30-year-old wife, Helen, acted as their own attorneys in a lawsuit protesting an assessment by the District Commissioners for paving alleys adjacent to their home at 4030 Nineteenth street northeast. The assessment was $265, according to a law which provides for half the cost of paving being paid by owners of the abutting property.

The District court dismissed the Willners' complaint last year. They appealed to the higher court and were heard by Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner, Justin Miller and Fred Vinson.

The court's opinion referred to the complaint filed by Mr. and Mrs. Willner, which included a chart showing that their assessment was 222 per cent higher than the average against other lots bounding the same alleys. This was because the Willner lot faced on two alleys.

"There must be a relative equality in the value and depth of the abutting property," said the court. "The front-foot rule may not be applied to situations of this kind. We think appellants (the Willners) stated a case within the scope of our former decisions and were entitled to a trial on the merits."

Accordingly, the case was returned to the District Court for trial.

Willner studied law at Georgetown University and Washington College.

Roosevelt Reported Staying in Primary

A. Farley was picked today by the Democratic State chairman with the announced assumption that if President Roosevelt seeks reelection "Farley and the Democratic Party as a whole will support his candidacy."

William H. Burke, jr., chairman of the Democratic State committee, notified the men of their choice in telegrams.

Former Gov. Charles F. Curley said: "No man has had closer contacts with the President than Mr. Farley, and I am sure he would not authorize the selection of pledged delegates if he were not satisfied of the real desires of his chief. It is a clear indication to me that the President is not a candidate for another term."

Another former Democratic Governor, Joseph B. Ely, also expressed belief that the Postmaster General had some assurance of the President's plans.

Pennsylvanians Confer

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt consulted with a half dozen prominent Pennsylvania Democrats yesterday in two meetings and was quoted by one leader as anxious to avoid a knockdown battle over the Senatorial nomination and not declaring a preference for any avowed or potential candidate.

John B. Kelly, Philadelphia Democratic chairman, after leaving the White House, would say only, "the President doesn't want a fight." Kelly refused to interpret that as meaning Mr. Roosevelt favored Senator Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, who is up for renomination, or that he wanted a substitute candidate. Guffey has said he would not withdraw under any conditions.

Later the President saw other Pennsylvanians, including Representative Boland (Democrat), Pennsylvania; Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers and former lieutenant governor of Pennsylvania; Dennis J. Driscoll, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, and Judge Guy Bard, of Lancaster.

Boland and several others conferred in Guffey's office after the White House meeting but none would comment. Kennedy, en route to the White House, said he had heard nothing of reports that he might run for the nomination as a compromise candidate.

Hanes Urged For Trustee Of A. G. & E.

Former SEC Member Confers With Frank On Utility Proposal

By Felix Cotten.

Post Staff Writer

John W. Hanes, former Undersecretary of the Treasury, is being promoted for the trusteeship of the Associated Gas & Electric Corporation, key holding company in the billion-dollar Associated Gas and Electric utility empire, it was learned yesterday.

The Securities and Exchange Commission has suggested that two trustees be named, one for Associated Gas & Electric Corporation and the other for the Associated Gas & Electric Co., both of which are in Federal court under voluntary bankruptcy proceedings.

The commission recently refused to act as trustee for the companies, although it is empowered to do so under the 1935 utility holding company act. Associated Gas & Electric Co. is the top or "parent" holding company in the giant utility system. Associated Gas & Electric Corporation, although the second holding company from the top, is regarded as the key company since through it the SEC hopes to bring about a reorganization of the system to conform to the so-called "death sentence" requirements of the holding company act.

It appeared likely that a law firm would be appointed as trustee for Associated Gas & Electric Co. The job of reorganizing this company under the Federal bankruptcy statutes is regarded as one for a lawyer. Associated Gas & Electric Corporation, however, it is said, will need the services of a manager.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, urged yesterday that the trustee be a man "whose fearlessness and independence and disinterested judgment cannot be subject to question because of past intimate associations with the management of a utility operating or holding company."

"The creditors and investors of Associated Gas have suffered terrible losses," he declared. "They have a right to be protected against exorbitant fees and charges for supernumerary trustees and counsel.

"They also have a right to be assured that their claims will be fearlessly pressed against management or other interests with which Associated Gas has not dealt at arms' length. That assurance the creditors and investors cannot have if a trustee has any interlocking relations with people he might have to prosecute."

Wheeler, who piloted the holding company act through the Senate, agreed with the SEC action in refusing to accept the trusteeship. Senator Norris, Nebraska, previously had criticized the commission's refusal.

Hanes, formerly a member of the SEC, has set up offices in the Mayflower Hotel and has been engaged in putting his own personal affairs in shape. Inquiry last night revealed that he had gone to New York City for a couple of days and thereafter planned to go West for a vacation of about three weeks.

He is said to be receptive to the trusteeship proposal and to have discussed the matter with Chairman Jerome Frank of the SEC.

Frank, in informing Judge Vincent L. Leibell of the Federal Court for the Southern District of New York that the SEC would not accept the trusteeship, said he would be available at any time to confer on the appointment of another trustee. He pointed out that the court cannot under the law name another trustee without giving the commission an opportunity to be heard.

Trustees for both companies will have to be named before March 8, since at that time Judge Leibell will hear objections by creditors to the trustees named. Objections must be based on legal grounds.

Abe Fortas, formerly with the SEC and now general counsel for the Interior Department Bituminous Coal Division, has been mentioned as a possible choice for trustee.

Army to Build $4,000,000 Alaska Air Base To Teach Pilots, Test Ships in Arctic Flying

By John G. Norris

Post Staff Writer

Establishment of an Army air base near the Arctic Circle to carry on experimental work of great importance to aviation and to the defense of Alaska was announced yesterday by the War Department.

In revealing plans for two new Alaskan bases, the Army said one would be a major fortified establishment at Anchorage, in the southern part of the Territory and the other near Fairbanks, would be used primarily for testing subzero flying operations.

Military men here noted that the Fairbanks base will be closer to Europe—over the top of the world—than any other American defense installation and would afford the Army an opportunity of testing practicability of aerial attacks upon the United States launched from Europe across the North Pole.

Flights made by Russians across the polar regions, including one from Moscow to the United States over the Arctic region, have brought forcibly to mind the existence of an unused approach to the American continent.

Officials stressed the importance of obtaining definite data on operation of planes in extremely cold temperatures and declared all types of Army aircraft will be sent to the Fairbanks base. Reports of air operations in the Far North, particularly those from the Finnish-Soviet war, have been studied in connection with the new experimental station, it was said.

These tell of rivets popping out of wings when planes are taken out of heated hangars into 60-below zero weather, of ice forming in carburetors and pilots freezing in their cockpits. American Army fliers must learn to meet the hazards of aerial operations in the Far North, the high command decreed.

Construction of the Fairbanks base, which will provide facilities for 356 officers and men, will be started within a few months, under a $4,000,000 appropriation made by Congress last year. It will cover a tract of 1,000 acres just north of the city, which is at the northern end of the Alaskan railroad just below the Arctic Circle.

It will be named Ladd Field, in honor of Capt. Arthur K. Ladd, who was killed in an air crash in 1935.

Establishment of the anchorage base is dependent upon Congressional action on a $12,734,000 request in the 1941 budget. The 1,400-acre tract would be named Eimendorf Field in honor of Capt. Hugh M. Eimendorf, an Air Corps flier killed in 1933.

Two naval bases also are being set up in Alaska to guard against an attack from Asia or Europe. They will be at Kodiak and Sitka, and a third is planned later near Dutch Harbor in the Aleutian Islands.

Meanwhile, the Army announced delivery of the first model of a new bombardment airplane, designated as "XB-24." The four-engined bomber, manufactured by the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation, it was said, is expected to have a speed of more than 300 miles an hour, a range of 3,000 miles and be capable of carrying 4 tons of bombs.

Patterned after the present B-17 bombers, called the best in the world, the new craft runs 2 tons heavier and is expected to excel them in performance.

Youths Visit Capitol to Boo And Applaud

End Session Here By Planning Rallies For Peace April 6

The American Youth Congress will have a Nation-wide demonstration on April 6, anniversary of United States entry in the World War, to protest against future involvement in war, it was decided at the closing session of the group's national assembly here yesterday.

While the assembly was setting up a program of action, some members of the Youth Congress created brief flurries by heckling and applauding in the Capitol.

Hisses sounded in the House galleries when Representative Lambertson (Republican), of Kansas, said he approved of the Republican national chairman's refusal to take part in the youth meeting.

Hoffman Gets "Thumbs Down"

Representative Rayburn (Democrat), of Texas, acting as Speaker, threatened to have the galleries cleared if there were any other demonstrations.

Later some of the youths made a "thumbs down" sign when Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan made critical remarks about the C. I. O. In another section of the galleries, the youthful visitors ventured to applaud Representative Marcantonio (American Labor), of New York, when he said Lincoln would not be "throwing stones" at young people but would be giving thought to the problem of finding work for those who are unemployed.

The assembly voted for the Youth Congress to cooperate with the Washington Youth Council in the fight for suffrage in the District.

First steps toward a possible working agreement between the Youth Congress and Labor's Non-Partisan League will be made today, when a new committee of the youth group will confer with C. I. O. leaders. The assembly of approximately 100 youth leaders authorized the committee to work with organizations, including union and farm groups, who might be interested in joint action on legislative aims.

Plans for the peace demonstration in April call for the setting up of two ballot boxes in a public place in each locality where there are Youth Congress members. The public will be invited to put their ballots into the peace box, or into the other box draped in black and labeled with an invitation to join in the war.

Before this demonstration, three "peace caravans" will make a tour, touching all 48 States, to hold meetings and make speeches.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., attended the session of the assembly yesterday in the Public Health Service Auditorium, with Jack McMichael, chairman of the congress, presiding.

The assembly voted to seek a Senate committee hearing on March 15 for the American Youth bill, which would call for a $500,000,000 annual appropriation for jobs, vocational aid and aid to education. Squads of Youth Congress members will circulate petitions in their communities in favor of the bill, it was decided at the assembly.

The assembly voted to push a bill for the abolition of poll taxes in Federal elections and to demand closed debate on the antilynching bill in the Senate.

Mrs. Roosevelt Thanked

Youth Congress members will be urged to set up civil liberties committees in their communities to be on guard against violations, to keep an eye on the Department of Justice and to watch for evidences of anti-Semitism, the assembly decided.

The assembly framed a message to the youth of the world, stressing peace and friendship. The message said to young people of neutral countries: "Let us help our brothers out of the trenches and let's not help outselves in."

The assembly made no pronouncement on communism, one of the issues raised repeatedly in connection with the three-day institute of the Youth Congress. Leaders pointed out that it was not a policy-making meeting, but a session to plan action on policies already in motion.

The assembly came to its feet with cheers on a vote of thanks to Mrs. Roosevelt for her cooperation in the three-day meeting, which brought an estimated 5,000 young people here.

Mrs. Roosevelt entertained the assembly at a tea at the White House yesterday afternoon, as a climax to her attendance on sessions, her speaking at the Sunday night meeting and her efforts to help find living quarters for delegates.

At her press conference Mrs. Roosevelt said that while some of the young people arrived at communistic conclusions because of personal problems, she did not feel that they were communistically controlled. They want their futures assured and would be willing to jump through hoops to get jobs, private jobs if possible, she said. But failing that, they expect Government assistance, she said.

Pelley Freed For a Month On $2,500 Bail

Judge Casey Reduces Amount From $10,000 For N. C. Extradition

His bail reduced from $10,000 to $2,500 and his plaid cap tilted at a jaunty angle, Silver Shirt Chief William Dudley Pelley strolled out of Police Court yesterday to enjoy 30 days of freedom before facing proceedings to extradite him to North Carolina.

Bail was cut by Judge Walter J. Casey after he heard Attorney T. Edward O'Connell charge Pelley was a victim of "string-pulling, skullduggery and a frame-up." Pelley said he will remain in the District, but refused to say where.

Hearings on extradition proceedings will be hel dbefore Chief Justice Wheat, of the District Supreme Court, March 12. The 50-year-old former stock promoter was arrested Saturday as he left a Dies Committee witness stand. He was jailed at request of Asheville, N. C., officials, who charge he violated a parole granted five years ago after a stock fraud conviction.

Pelly was his dapper self in court yesterday after spending the weekend in a cell at First Precinct Station. His face, however, was covered with a white stubble that matched his goatee and grizzled moustache.

"I hold no brief for the Silver Shirts," O'Connell shouted above the murmur of a crowded courtroom. "I represent Pelley, the man, and speak for him as an American citizen." He called upon Judge Casey not to "cater to the public prejudices against this man," and asked that he "lean backward to protect Pelley's rights."

"I will not lean backward," said the judge, moving forward in his chair.

Assistant District Attorney Karl Kindelberger said bail originally had been set at $10,000 because he feared "$2,500 would be a mere deposit and Pelley would go back to hiding." He said, "North Carolina wants Pelley, not the $2,500."

Counsel Defends Youth

T. Edward O'Connell, counsel for Silver Shirt Chief William Dudley Pelley, told Police Judge Walter J. Casey yesterday that he also is defending "a Jewish boy who is on trial for his life in New York, charged with killing an Irish policeman."

O'Connell made the statement in asking a 30-day continuance for a hearing on extradition proceedings against Pelley. The Silver Shirt leader was labeled a "self-styled Hitler" who carried on anti-Semitic propaganda in the Dies Committee's annual report.

The New York boy, The Post learned, is 25-year-old Bennie Ertel, who was arrested here in July, 1938, as a fugitive from justice. Ertel is charged with being one of six young men who took part in the shooting of a Manhattan detective in a New York restaurant.

The other five already have been convicted. Two were electrocuted recently. Sentences of three were commuted to life imprisonment after their mothers camped in Gov. Lehman's office and pleaded that they be allowed to offer their lives in exchange for their sons'.

Igor Cassini Elopes With Warrenton Girl Who Stuck By Him Despite Oil and Feathers

Count Igor Cassini, Washington gossip columnist who was oiled and feathered in Warrenton, Va., last summer, yesterday eloped to Fredericksburg, Va., with Austine Byrne McDonnell, the girl who stood by him in the day of his trouble.

The marriage appeared to be a surprise to the bride's mother.

They were married by the Rev. James H. McConnell, of St. Mary's Catholic Church.

at Warrenton on a Saturday night last June, when three socially prominent young men lured him from the hall into a car, drove him into the country and smeared him with road oil and feathers.

The bride's parents, Maj. and Mrs. Austin McDonnell, were his hosts during that week-end. Cassini had been a frequent guest at the McDonnell home, but was not seen again in Warrenton until the trial in September, where his three assailants were fined at total of $500.

Mrs. McDonnell at first refused to believe the news when informed of the wedding yesterday by the Associated Press. Later she told The Post she had "not been officially informed," and when asked if she had taken steps to verify the news, she declined to answer.

Friends of Maj. and Mrs. McDonnell said "Bootsie's" parents had opposed Cassini's courtship ever since it began nearly two years ago.

Miss McDonnell studied dramatics at the King-Smith Studios in Washington in 1937. She is 21.

Igor Cassini is the son of Countess Marguerite Cassini and Alexander Loiewski, and the grandson of a former Russian Ambassador to the United States. He is 24, and arrived in this country four years ago.

Cause of the attack on him last summer were items about prominent Warrentonians appearing in his daily gossip column. The assailants were Ian Montgomery, 39, Ian's 28-year-old brother Colin, and Alexander Calvert.

Ian Montgomery said road oil had been poured on Cassini's body, but the prosecution described the oil as "the worst kind of tar."

Best man at the wedding yesterday was Gassin's brother, Oleg, fourth husband of "Madcap" Merry Fahrney, patent medicine heiress, who divorced him in New York last week.

Senate Expected to Kill Nichols Amendment On Job Apportionment in Ramspeck Bill

A determined effort to rid the Ramspeck bill of its controversial Nichols rider probably will meet with success when the legislation is considered in the Senate, it was indicated yesterday.

Close observers said:

First, that prospects for passing the bill in the Senate were very favorable;

Second, that the Senate in general and the Senate Civil Service Committee in particular had no love for the rider, and Third, that a conference report, with the amendment eliminated would be accepted without difficulty by the House.

The amendment, proposed by Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, when the bill passed the House Friday, provides that persons from States that hold more Federal jobs in Washington than they are entitled to under the apportionment act, may not be covered into civil service, or enjoy any promotions, in agencies affected by the Ramspeck bill.

The rider's effect would fall heaviest on employes who hail from the District, Maryland, Virginia and ten other States that are "overapportioned," and West Virginia, the quota of which was exactly filled at the end of January, the last date on which an apportionment list was issued.

Solid Administration support of the bill was seen yesterday in civil service circles as being sufficient to insure the bill's acceptance by the Senate. At the same time, a heavy campaign by the Civil Service Commission, backed by the White House, to excise the Nichols amendment was being prepared.

Senator Bulow (Democrat), of South Dakota, chairman of the Senate Civil Service Committee, revealed he had grave doubts about the amendment and was not unwilling to believe the commission's assertion that the rider is unworkable.

The constituency of his committee, is, in itself, an indication that the rider will not meet with approval. The chairman, as well as Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, and Republicans Gibson, of Vermont, and Frazier, of North Dakota, are from States now overapportioned. Senator Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia, is from a State the quota of which is exactly filled.

Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, is from a State only slightly in arrears; Senator White (Republican), of Maine, is from a State which has only one less Washington job than the number to which it is entitled. This leaves only Democrats George, of Georgia, Downey, of California, and McKellar, of Tennessee, from underapportioned States.

Assuming passage of the bill in the Senate without the rider, no difficulty would be experienced in conference, it is believed, since the House conferees all would favor the bill as originally written.

Further study of the rider over the week-end did nothing to sway commission experts from their original conviction that the amendment would cause an "impossible situation." They pointed out that if an agency not now under civil service were covered by the Ramspeck bill, and noncompetitive examinations were given to employes, only one employe from Maine, for example, could achieve classified status.

Other Maine employes, who also passed the tests, would be deprived of the benefits. By the same token, seven natives of Massachusetts, and no more, could be covered into the classified service.

"If it had to be done," one commission expert commented, "I suppose we could carry on under the amendment. After all, persons who have lost their arms still can survive and do what they have to with their legs."

One observer asserted that by his action Nichols should be considered the national hero of the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico. Under his amendment, before promotions could be given to employes from 13 States and the District, Washington jobs first would have to be found for nine natives of the Virgin Islands and 579 Puerto Ricans.

In seeking to remove the amendment the commission's line of attack,, it was indicated, will not be against the apportionment system itself. Instead, it will seek to show that, under the New Deal, substantial corrections of the unbalanced quota system have been made.

First thrown out of kilter by the World War, the unbalance continued through 12 Republican years. As of February 28, 1933, Oklahoma, for example, Nichols' own State, held only 30 per cent of the positions to which it was entitled. Now, it holds 62 per cent.

The District, on the other hand, held more than 10,000 positions in February, 1933, when it was entitled to only 132. Now, entitled to 197, it holds 8,837, a substantial reduction.

Except for the District, Maryland and Virginia, it may be noted, the States now in excess of their apportionment quotas are predominantly Republican.

The President's Committee on Civil Service Improvement has been called together for what may be its final meeting before issuing its long-awaited report. The meeting is scheduled for March 18 but may be advanced.

British, Turks Sign Treaty To Boost Trade

England Is Hopeful Of Ousting Reich As Best Customer

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 12.—Britain today announced a new trade accord with Turkey would go into effect February 19 in an effort to boost commerce.

Britain hopes to oust Germany from her position as the leading salesman to Turkey and Turkey's best customer as part of the Allies' economic warfare against the Reich.

Under the new pact, which is to run a year and subsequent one-year periods unless a signatory terminates it with at least three months notice, Britain will send airplanes, machinery, cotton and other war materials and in return will get raw materials, including tobacco and dried fruit.

U. S. Tobaccos to Lose

Big slices of Britains' normal tobacco purchases from the United States will be diverted to Turkey, since in war time Britain considers her dollar resources too valuable to use for tobacco. Instead she buys American planes, trucks, and other war manufactures.

The pact provides that Turkey's imports from Britain will not exceed 80 per cent of the products sent to Britain, leaving Turkey a favorable trade balance.

The agreement supplements the mutual assistance pacts which link Turkey with France and Britain and other economic agreements giving Turkey financial assistance to buy armaments.

(Official quarters in Istanbul, reporting conclusion of an Italian-Turkish trade agreement yesterday, predicted Italy would oust Germany completely from the expanding Turkish market. The agreement is expected to be signed shortly.

(Trade circles in Istanbul said Italy could supply just what Turkey needs to become fully independent of Germany.)

Britain Plans Campaign

London, Feb. 12 (AP).—A program to organize a group of super-salesmen around the world to fight Britain's economic battle against Germany was drawn up today for the new export council of economic experts at its first full meeting.

The council's two tasks are to strangel German trade and find new markets for British goods. One trade specialist said Britain was buying large quantities of goods from the Balkans, not so much for her own needs, but to deprive Germany of them.

Thomas, Met Baritone, To Appear Here Feb. 22

Nazis Deprive Fritz Thyssen And Wife of Citizenship

Action Follows Break With Hitler, Whom He Helped to Power

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Feb. 12.—Following the confiscation of his fortune in Germany, estimated at more than 100,000,000 marks, Fritz Thyssen, whose vast influence and financial backing paved the way for Adolf Hitler's accession to power, today was deprived of his German citizenship.

This final step in the expulsion of Thyssen from the German racial community was announced in a special decree signed by Minister of the Interior Frick and published in the Reich Gazette. Mrs. Amelie Thyssen, his wife, was expelled with him.

Expulsion Based on Absence

The expulsion was based on the decree of July 14, 1933, which provides that "Reich members who stay in foreign countries may be deprived of their German citizenship, if through behavior that violates the duty of loyalty to the Reich and the people, they have damaged the German interest. The same applies to Reich members who refuse to comply with a demand to return addressed to them by the Reich minister of the interior with reference to this provision."

Thyssen left Germany shortly after the outbreak of war and after he had addressed a telegram to Marshal Goering notifying the latter as Reichstag president that he would not participate in the Reichstg session of September 1, in which Hitler announced the invasion of Poland. He had been living in Switzerland ever since.

158 Others Lose Citizenship

His prominence was given due recognition, however, by the issuance of a special decree for his case, signed by Frick himself, which was also printed ahead of another decree signed by a subordinate in Frick's ministry, depriving 158 other persons, mostly Jews, of German citizenship.

FRITZ THYSSEN

Thyssen Astonished at News

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Feb. 12.—Fritz Thyssen learned about the cancellation of his German citizenship tonight when the New York Times correspondent telephoned him in Locarno. Although he was clearly astonished and at a loss what to say, he indicated that it would make no difference to his plans.

"I cannot say why this has been done," Thyssen declared, "for I do not know anything about it. I think I will stay in Switzerland and perhaps later go to America. I had planned to go in May.

"I think I will get through all right. I have many friends. I can go to America after all."

Russians Increase Drive in Isthmus advance of the Soviet infantry. The Finns say the attack was repulsed, but give no details.

Russians Claim Forts

[Russia's communique reported the capture of 32 defensive fortifications yesterday on the Karelian Isthmus and said enemy losses in the past few days included 230 machine guns and 82 guns, the Associated Press said.

[The Russians previously reported taking 16 fortifications Sunday, while last Thursday's communique said 13 "artillery forts" had been captured. The Finns denied both of the earlier Soviet claims.—Editor's note.]

Island Attack Repulsed

Further fighting took place in the frozen bays and around the islands on the western shore of Lake Ladoga in another attempt to flank the Finnish line, but Finnish shore batteries broke up these essays. A similar operation, also defeated, is reported from the Gulf of Finland end of the Finnish defense line.

Russian heavy artillery tonight began long-range bombardment of the battered seaport of Viipuri, 20 miles behind the battle front.

The 150 tanks thrown against the Finns in a narrow sector between Lake Moula and the Vuoksi River is the largest concentration tne Russians have yet used.

Tonight's Finnish communique said 72 tanks were destroyed in yesterday's fighting on the isthmus front. This would bring to 139 the total number of Russian tanks officially claimed by the Finns since the beginning of the present Soviet drive.

Dead Put at 5,700

No estimates of Soviet casualties are given. Finnish authorities appear to have adopted a rather conservative policy in the reports of Rusisan dead and wounded. The total number of Russian dead in the present drive as thus far officially reported by the Finns is 5,700, which does not include reports of heavy Soviet losses in today's communique.

There has been a disposition in some quarters to criticize earlier Finnish estimates of Soviet casualtier as too optimistic from the Finnish standpoint. It should be borne in mind, however, that the Russians attack in mass. There is no doubt Russian casualties, whether exaggerated or not, have been heavy.

Follow Baltic Reports

Helsinki, Feb. 12 (AP).—Finnish leaders tonight showed intense interests in reports that Latvia and Estonia were growing restive under their new military agreements with Russia.

By the Associated Press

News reports reaching the capital said a possible crisis in the relations between the two Baltic states and Moscow was hinted at recently in a radio address by President Ulmanis of Latvia, who was quoted as saying that "if a decisive emergency occurs our entire nation is ready to take up arms."

Ulmanis was reported to have warned that "everyone must have at least two shirts packed, with extra underwear and a strong pair of shoes . . . If the situation were not serious I would not speak of these things at this moment."

Gen. Berkins, chief of the Latvian army, was reported to have gone to Estonia to negotiate with Gen. Johan Laidoner, commander in chief of the Estonian army, in connection with cooperation to strengthen the national defenses of the two states.

Visitors to Finland from the two countries said there was wide popular dissatisfaction with increasing Soviet pressure and with military agreements by which Russia last fall obtained the right to establish military, air and naval bases in Estonia and Latvia.

Thousands Reported Dead

Helsinki, Feb. 12 (INS).—Unofficial reports, tonight, indicated the Red army lost thousands of men Sunday and today in operations on two fronts north of Lake Ladoga and that an entire Soviet division is being heavily counter-attacked and faces possible annihilation.

The latter situation was said to prevail west of Aittojoki from which point a Russian division levelled repeated onslaughts on the Finnish stronghold at Lake Tolvaleveled repeated onslaughts on the in two days. Another 1,000 Russians were said to have fallen in futile attacks on the Kuhmo front farther north.

Creditors Barred From Intervening In McLean Divorce

Justice F. Dickinson Letts yesterday blocked efforts of creditors of Edward B. McLean to intervene in the District Court divorce proceedings which involve McLean.

Attorney Julius I. Peyser, suing for himself and other creditors whose claims were said to total more than $350,000, asked that the court reduce the $7,500 monthly allowed Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean and her three children.

Justice Letts agreed with Mrs. McLean's counsel, Howard Boyd and Nelson T. Hartson, that McLean's creditors had no right to intervene in the divorce suit, even though the allowance was paid out of the trust fund set up for McLean by his father, the late John R. McLean.

McLean is a patient at an institution near Baltimore.

THE CASE of the PILLOW

BOY, OH BOY! Do I know my clues? As Sherlock Holmes, my favorite detective always said: "It's elementary, my dear Watson." Now, you take the case of the pillow, for example. When homemakers do their own laundry work and their pillow cases, sheets and other white clothes come out a dingy gray, that's a tell-tale clue. It shows that they are still using old-fashioned washboards or that their washing machines are due for retirement. The solution of the problem is simple. Buy a new 1940 Electric Washer. It will wash your clothes snowy white—and for only a few pennies for current. A new Electric Ironer completes the home laundry . . . does ironing in much less than the usual time and at small cost. Do a little detective work of your own . . . Investigate the advantages of 1940 Electric Washers and Ironers, today!

Japanese Diet Member Hits Army Expense

Minister Refuses To Give Explanation Of Military Budget

By the Associated Press

Tokyo (Tuesday), Feb. 13.—Outright criticism of the army broke out in the Japanese Diet today, with a member of the House budget committee assailing bitterly the secrecy surrounding the military expense account and demanding a detailed explanation.

War Minister Hata bluntly refused.

The controversy became so heated that Hata ordered that stenographic recording of the proceedings be halted.

"The people are uneasy," the questioner, Ryozo Makino, Seiyukai party member, said "the people are barred from making political criticism, but they are criticising nevertheless in other ways. They still want to know why Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye had to resign."

Challenges Performance

Hata replied that army estimates were based on "common sense" and reiterated that hostilities were continuing in China on a large scale. He said the army budget was designed to meet the international situation "for three or four years hence."

"We cannot discharge our duties if the army continues to make such vague replies regarding this enormous expense," Makino retorted, "nor do I consider the war minister is discharging his. We cannot meet our tasks if all we have is the army's request to have faith."

"I cannot give further explanation," Hata replied.

On February 1 the army and navy presented for the approval of Parliament a seven-year program costing about $871,000,000, after which the war minister declared the army was keeping its eyes on Russia.

The appropriation, in addition to a total of $1,862,017,680 already approved for the purpose, was asked for "replenishment and rehabilitation of arms."

Treaty to Be Voided

Copyright by New York Times

The Hague, Feb. 12.—The Japanese minister informed the Netherlands government today that Tokyo would denounce the treaty of arbitration and conciliation concluded in 1933. This treaty has lost its value, according to the Japanese, because it referred to the World Court from which Japan has withdrawn.

Tokyo proposes to commence negotiations immediately for a new treaty in which all references to the League of Nations and the World Court will be omitted, and which is to be completed before August 13, 1940, when the present agreement expires.

U. S. Is Silent

Pending an official report on the Japanese treaty action no officer of the State Department would comment last night. Without informed advice from Tokyo, it was pointed out, it would be impossible to determine whether Japan's action indicates merely a technical revision as she says it does or frees her hands for possible aggressive action against the Netherlands Indies.

Norris Asks 'Moral Embargo' On All Goods for Soviet, Japan

Senator Fears Involvement Through Loans By Export Bank, But Pittman Says He Favors Making the Ban 'Legal'

By the Associated Press

Jay Pierrepont Moffatt, chief of the Division of European Affairs of the State Department, last night was selected to accompany Undersecretary of State Welles on the latter's visit to England, France, Germany and Italy.

The announcement was made amid a round of official foreign affairs conferences, in which the Welles' trip to report "as to present conditions in Europe" was a chief topic.

Joseph P. Kennedy, Ambassador to Great Britain, returned to the Capital from Florida by plane and conferred with Secretary of State Hull and William C. Bullitt, Ambassador to France, at Hull's hotel apartment.

Kennedy, who on Sunday forecast that "all hell" would break loose in Europe in the spring, is expected to see President Roosevelt, possibly today.

Welles, in preparation for his departure for Italy on February 17, conferred yesterday with the Ambassadors from Belgium and Spain and the Hungarian Minister.

Announcement that Moffett would accompany the Undersecretary on the several weeks' trip to belligerent and neutral capitals followed word from Secretary Hull that some one thoroughly competent to assist in observing and assembling the information obtained would be selected.

In addition to Moffatt, it was announced that Welles would have as his private secretary on the trip Hartwell Johnson, foreign service officer attached to the department.

Other phases of the Nation's foreign relations will receive attention today when the Senate is expected to vote a $100,000,000 increase in the capital of the Export-Import Bank to make possible new loans to Finland and China. The Senate vote is scheduled to come by 5 p. m.

In connection with the Russo-Finnish and Sino-Japanese wars, Senator Norris, Independent, of Nebraska, yesterday called for extension of this country's "moral embargo" to cover all products for Japan and Russia.

However, he said he probably would oppose the Export-Import Bank loan proposal.

Such a proposal would commit the Government officially, he declared, and might lead to involvement abroad.

Norris, one of three Senators who opposed the resolution to expedite Finnish bond issues here, said that it would be "perfectly justifiable" for individual citizens or groups to cease commercial dealings with Russia and Japan.

Hungary, Rumania Relations Cause Anxiety in Rome

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Feb. 12.—Strained relations between Hungary and Rumania are causing much anxiety in Rome and at the Vatican.

Italian newspapers are publishing alarming reports and a critical period is expected soon.

"Public opinion in Rumania is being prepared for new Draconian measures," writes the Budapest correspondent of the Lavoro Fascista today. "These measures contemplate the expropriation or forced sale of land near the frontiers owned by non-Rumanians and worked by non-Rumanian peasants.

"The proposal, naturally, is not calculated to please Budapest, which has interpreted the threatening tone used in Bucharest as a clear-cut refusal to open any discussions. It is also stated that at Sofia, Turkish Foreign Minister Saracoglu was able to promise that Bulgarian aspirations would be appeased at the end of the war. True or not, this report is making the Hungarians still more nervous."

Other newspapers print similar stories. The Tribuna, for instance, in a dispatch from Belgrade gives the report that Rumania has agreed to return to Bulgaria the purely Hungarian part of the Dobrudja after the war and says Saracoglu's mediation in that respect has aggravated the situation between Rumania and Hungary.

Nazis, Soviets Agree to Push Mutual Trade

Russo-Finn War Believed Likely To Slow Reich Goods

By Louis P. Lochner,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Feb. 12.—Germany and Russia signed a new pact today to speed up their mutual trade—an agreement likely to find Russia's preoccupation with the Finnish war a handicap in meeting the Reich's stiff war needs.

As originally conceived by German and Russian leaders, the pact was to give Germany a great share of the vast raw materials of the Soviet Union and to let Russia import the manufactured products of highly industrialized Germany.

In early negotiations it was assumed here the pact would be of greatest advantage to Germany.

Russia at War Now

But since the signature last fall of the German-Russian friendship pact which changed European politics, Russia has herself embarked on a war, which means she must greatly step up her munitions industry and provide herself with precision instruments of all kinds.

As a result, the Reich may have greater difficulty in supplying the Soviet with her industrial needs, than will Russia in sending her raw materials to Germany.

When the pact was first envisaged it was thought that Russia would need machinery chiefly for the production of consumer goods.

German Supplies Scarce

Now Germany is fighting for her existence and hardly can hasten production sufficiently for her own needs. Therefore she will have difficulty fulfilling Russian wishes.

There is an unbounded determination in Germany, nevertheless, to master this difficulty. The Reich has great need of Russian materials such as manganese, iron and other ores, oil, timber, grain, paraffin, hemp and flax.

What Russia needs more than anything else is spare and substitute parts for much of her munitions manufacturing equipment, especially for those lathes and molds which originally were supplied by Germany, but now have become shopworn.

Exceeds Earlier Pact

Authoritative sources said the treaty covers items beyond the $80,000,000 barter arrangement which has been in effect since August 20. That agreement provided for Russian sale to Germany within two years of about $72,000,000 worth of goods and the extension of a German credit to Russia of approximately $80,000,000.

Balkans Fear Nazi Drive to East; Troops Reported Moving

By A. R. Parker.
Copyright by New York Times

Belgrade, Feb. 12.—Insistent reports of German troop movements eastward give rise to suggestions that German preparations in eastern Europe might be for other than defensive purposes.

So great is the strain on the Czech railway system that trains available for normal passenger traffic are only announced 24 hours before running in special bulletins.

Further requisitions of horses were ordered in the protectorate yesterday and large orders of hand grenades have been placed with Czech firms which German officers have been heard to say jestingly were for use "in India."

Austrian Soldiers Happier

Austrian soldiers in the protectorate, who have recently shown dissatisfaction with a future which might take them to the Siegfried Line, indicated a rise in spirit as rumors were circulated that their line of advance may be easterly.

As if to confirm these rumors, hitherto reliable sources report equipment for 15 classes of Slovak troops has been deposited in local gendarmerie stations in preparation for mobilization.

Meanwhile, precautions are being taken to hold the dissatisfied Czechs should the war enter a more active phase. Germans who have completed six months' military training are being allowed to keep their uniforms. Arms are stored locally and can be easily distributed.

Departments of the German military command are said to be transferring from Prague to the country, while the city's German residents have been making arrangements for evacuation.

Reports from Black Sea ports, Soviet Poland, Istanbul and Prague indicate the existence of a military and economic agreement between Russia and Germany in the Ukraine, Caucasus and the Black Sea.

The gist of these reports, which deserve to be taken with all seriousness, is as follows:

German military engineers are reported to be supervising the construction of fortifications at Odessa, Mariupol, Novorossijsk in the Ukraine, at Batum in the Caucasus, and on the Russian bank of the Dniester River on the Rumanian-Russian frontier.

German military forces are stationed on the Lwow-Odessa railway as far as the old Russian frontier.

Believed in Caucasus

Whether German military units have been sent further east, to protect the Baku-Kiev line, is not known, but reliable Prague sources assert that on January 13 some 2,000 Reichswehr officers and men left the protectorate eastward, believing they were being sent to the Caucasus.

On January 20 several score more Reichswehr officers left the protectorate with the same belief. The Yugoslavja press gives great prominence to news from Berlin that Britain and France are attempting to organize a Black Sea pact with Turkey, Bulgaria and Rumania and that Germany is putting pressure on Rumania to sabotage this pact with the threat that Russia would be displeased with such a pact.

Diplomatic circles here, who are skeptical that any such pact has been suggested, interpret these messages from Berlin as an attempt to persuade Russia that further German collaboration in the defense of South Russia is desirable.

Rail Sabotage Reported

At the same time, some confirmation of the extent of German measures to protect communications with Russia was received.

From Prague it was learned troops have been detailed to protect the main line from Maehrisch-Ostrava to Brno, a part of the principal route between Austria and Krakow, where transport from Russia would normally be switched southeastward toward the Hermann Goering Iron Works at Linz and the arms factories of Styria. Acts of sabotage on this line are reported.

Elaborate precautions are being taken to prevent sabotage on Danube shipments, which will be resumed within the next six weeks if weather conditions are normal. It is rumored that when German transports again appear on the Danube they will be guarded.

Nazi Freighter Is Overtaken And Scuttled

Crew Sets Her Afire In South Atlantic, Say British Seamen

By the Associated Press

Rio de Janeiro, Feb. 12.—Crewmen from the British cruiser Hawkins declared tonight the German freighter Wakama was set afire by her own crew when three British warships overhauled her. Presumably she sank.

The seamen said the Hawkins and the cruisers Shropshire and Dorsetshire were close by when the torch was put to the Wakama.

One told this story:

"We were proceeding toward Rio, expecting to arrive at 8 a. m., Monday, when I suddenly realized we were going rapidly in the opposite direction.

Plane Asks Surrender

"One of the officers told me, 'we must be chasing the Wakama.' Then we saw her. But soon we saw fire coming from her, and we turned around and came back. I found out that the Dorsetshire, which has planes aboard, sent one of them over the Wakama and told the German ship to surrender.

"She didn't surrender, but the crew got into lifeboats, and the boat was set afire. We saw both the Dorsetshire and Shropshire afterward.

"As far as I know, the crew of the Wakama is still in small boats because in wartime when a ship sets herself afire or scuttles herself a warship has no obligation to rescue the men. At least, definitely they are not aboard the Hawkins."

The Hawkins was the only one of the three British cruisers to put into Rio de Janeiro.

The 3,771-ton vessel, which slipped out of Rio de Janeiro harbor last midnight, broadcast an S O S this afternoon, and shortly afterward two rescue ships which raced to the scene reported they found nothing afloat. They were searching for survivors.

Soon after her SOS was heard by the Brazilian government radio, the 9,800-ton British cruiser Hawkins nosed into harbor with her guns cool, but British sailors coming ashore declared:

"We think one of the other British warships got her today, but we really do not know."

[The United Press quoted Hawkins sailors as saying the Wakama had been set afire and scuttled.]

The Wakama was the eighth German merchantman to leave a Brazilian port this year. Nine others remain in this country's ports.

Shortly before the Wakama sailed, the 5,846-ton Nazi freighter Uruguay sailed from Recife with a large quantity of foodstuffs.

Six other Nazi ships, the Koenigsberg, Sao Paulo, Wolfsburg, Bahia, La Coruna and Santos, have sailed from Brazil since the first of the year, presumably with the intention of reaching Germany. Of these, only the Koenigsberg has been reported and she was off Gaivotas Island yesterday, at the mouth of the Amazon.

Holland Ship Sunk

By the Associated Press

Amsterdam, Feb. 12.—The sinking of the Holland-Amerika Line's 6,853-ton freighter Burgerdijk—fourth Netherlands vessel reported torpedoed during the war—caused dismay and indignation today in the Netherlands.

Meanwhile, sinking of two other neutral vessels, apparently by German submarines, was reported unofficially in London. The crew of the 1,213-ton Estonian Stamer Linda, en route from England to Sweden with coal, reached a Norwegian part, and reported their ship was sunk by a German torpedo Sunday.

(The Swedish steamer Orania, 1,854 tons, was sunk in the North Sea today, reportedly by a torpedo. Ten men were rescued, but one lifeboat carrying an undetermined number of the crew was missing.)

The Burgerdijk was stopped by a submarine at 6:35 p. m. Saturday 15 miles southwest of Bishop's Rock off the southwest coast of England and Capt. L. M. J. Scriwanked reported the ship was torpedoed without any reason being given by the submarine commander.

About 45 survivors were rescued by the Edam, another Holland-Amerika Line freighter.

Commanding New Troops in Near East of the three powers would be 2,910,000 men.

The present British-French strength of 570,000 men was said to be made up as follows:

1. Two hundred thousand troops from Egyptian bases composed mainly of Indians and Moslems in highly mechanized motorized infantry units officered by British and Indians with war experience in the Near East and the Balkans.

2. Three hundred thousand troops in Syria massed by France. These include one division of the Foreign Legion and Senegalese, Madagascans and Algerian regiments. These forces are being rapidly increased and, according to some estimates, are considerably higher.

3. Forty thousand troops, mainly British, in Palestine.

4. The 30,000 Anzacs who arrived at Suez today.

The Anzacs, all volunteers, were all over 5 feet 8 inches and most under 27 years of age, said advices from Suez.

Singing "Roll Out the Barrel" and shouting "Cooee!"—Australian for "Yippee"—they marched to a newly constructed, camouflaged tent city, on the edge of the desert.

They were in a strategic position for Suez Canal defense, for quick movement into often-troubled Palestine or transport to Turkey if hostilities break out in the Balkans.

The way these problems are kept in mind by Britain was emphasized by a recent speech of Gen. Sir Charles Bonham, governor of Malta, to the clergy of the island base between Italy and Africa.

"As we have promised to support Rumania and Turkey in event of their being attacked," he said, "and as they are likely to be involved, Malta should be prepared to accept the fact that the island might soon become a center of operations as in 1914-18."

The Australians were under command of Lieut. Gen. Sir Thomas Blamey, chief of staff of the Australian Corps in 1918 and of the expeditionary force in the World War.

Maj. Gen. B. C. Freyberg commanded the New Zealanders.

The official designation for the Australians is the Second Imperial Force, the first being that which participated in the last war. The New Zealanders are designated as the New Zealand Expeditionary Force.

Anthony Eden, dominions secretary, flew from England to greet the troops on behalf of King George VI. He conveyed this message from the King:

"I know well the splendid tradition established by the armed forces of New Zealand and Australia will be worthily upheld by you who have left home in order to fight for the cause the whole empire has made its own.

"Now that you have entered the field of active service, I send you my warmest welcome together with best wishes for your welfare."

Japan Helps Wang Troops ToFightChiang

Force 50,000 Strong Lands in Fukien; 2 Sides Claim Gains

By the Associated Press

Shanghai (Tuesday), Feb. 13.—A Chinese army supporting former Premier Wang Ching-Wei has landed on the coast of Fukien Province and is fighting the forces of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, Japanese military authorities here stated today.

Without mentioning where the troops came from, the Japanese said they had landed Monday at an unnamed spot "with the cooperation of the Japanese army and navy."

The Japanese, who are supporting Wang in his program to form a new central Chinese government in cooperation with Tokyo and in opposition to Gen. Chiang's Chungking regime, called the force the "peace and national reconstruction army." The Japanese hinted the force was about 50,000 strong.

Chinese Claims Gains

Two other fields of battle kept Chinese spotlights today. Wrang-Chinese spotlights today. In Kwangsi Province in the south the Chinese laid claim to victories over the Japanese in a hard-hitting counter-offensive, while the Japanese told of gains in the extreme northwest, in Inner Mongolia.

Official Chinese military dispatches received at Chungking said the Chinese had reoccupied the town of Pingyang 50 miles northeast of Nanking, Kwanksi capital, on Sunday, and nearby Wuming the day before.

As a result, the Chinese said, the recent Japanese offensive in this region threatening the Chinese southwestern "lifeline" supply routes has been checked, and the invaders are said to have been put on the defensive in the Nanning area.

11,142 Chinese Killed

The Japanese countered such claims by saying their forces had "successfully concluded" an attack on 34 Chinese divisions. They said Chinese in the Pingyang area were "almost annihilated."

In western Suiyuan province in Inner Mongolia the Japanese have killed 11,142 Chinese since January 31, Japanese military authorities here said.

Pan American Day Proclaimed; Marks Union 50th Anniversary

Roosevelt Calls on Churches, Civic Groups To Celebrate Development of Closer Relations Between Nations of America

President Roosevelt yesterday proclaimed April 14 as Pan-American Day and declared it appropriate that the people of the United States commemorate the occasion and "thereby testify to the close bonds of friendship" uniting the United States and the other American republics.

The day marks the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Pan American Union.

The governing board of the union was responsible for designating April 14 as Pan-American Day in all the American republics. It suggested in 1930 that the day be established as a symbol of the sovereignty of the American nations and their voluntary union in a continental community.

The text of the proclamation follows:

Whereas, in 1930 the governing board of the Pan American Union recommended that April 14 be designated as Pan-American Day in all the American republics, and that it be established as a commemorative symbol of the sovereignty of the American nations and the voluntary union of all in one continental community; and

Whereas, during the past ten years Pan-American Day has been annually observed and has increased in significance through its emphasis on the spirit of peace, friendship, and co-operation uniting the nations of the American continent; and

Whereas, in 1940 Pan-American Day will be especially important because it will mark the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Pan American Union, the international organization of the 21 American republics, which was established in accordance with a resolution adopted on April 14, 1890, by the first international conference of American states and which, during the last half century, has constantly fostered the development of closer economic, cultural and juridical relations between the nations of the Western Hemisphere; and

Whereas, it is most appropriate that the people of the United States should commemorate this significant occasion and thereby testify to the close bonds of friendship that unite the Government and people of the United States which those of the other republics of the American continent;

Now, therefore, I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, do hereby order that on April 14, 1940, the flag of the United States be displayed on all Government buildings, and do hereby invite the churches, the educational institutions, the civic associations, and the people of the United States generally to observe with appropriate commemorative ceremonies this Pan-American Day and the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Pan American Union.

Jewish Session Votes to Map Peace Aims

Would Ask Restoration Of Rights in Europe; U. S. Anti-Semitism Hit

A program designed to create a basis for restoration of the rights of millions of Jews in Europe after peace and to establish safeguards against increase of anti-Semitism in the United States was adopted yesterday by the American Jewish Congress at climax of its three-day session at the Willard Hotel.

Assurances of Christian-Jewish goodwill were offered at a luncheon yesterday when Senator Mead, of New York, and Bishop James E. Freeman, of Washington, spoke on "Good Neighbor Relations in the United States." Count Jerzy Potocki, Polish Ambassador, said "Jews and Poles will fight together in the common cause" of freedom.

Seeking a "new system of international morality and justice to make amends for the injury sustained by the Jews," the Congress resolved at once to begin study of a basis on which Jewish claims may be presented to a peace conference. For this purpose it went on record as supporting establishment by the World Jewish Congress of a special institute for preparation of peace aims of the Jewish people.

Propaganda Fight Urged

The Congress also voted to seek cooperation of every important Jewish body in America and elsewhere "to the end that this institute become the instrument of the entire Jewish people for the purpose of obtaining the peace aims of the Jews as well as a united front in an effort to assure the rights, security and freedom of our people everywhere."

Full recognition of Jewish rights to the national homeland in Palestine was demanded. Extension of activities of the World Congress to include relief also was voted.

Need for organization of individual members of the Jewish community in an effort to combat infiltration into this country of racial and antidemocratic propoganda and discrimination against Jews in employment was expressed in a resolution.

A permanent Commission on Vocational Guidance to assist Jewish youth in its efforts to secure jobs will be established. Extended and strengthened will be the work of the Commission on Economic Problems in fighting discrimination against Jews in employment. A national youth movement was authorized.

$500,000 Drive Voted

In order to deal with problems of anti-Semitic propaganda, the congress authorized its new administration to establish a special commission to promote good neighbor relations both locally and nationally. To carry out its activities, the convention authorized a campaign for $500,000.

Dr. Stephen S. Wise was re-elected president of the congress in this country. Judge Nathan D. Perlman, of New York, was elected vice president. Elected chairman of the governing council was Louis Lipsky, who had served as vice president for several years.

Carl Sherman, former attorney general of New York State, was elected chairman of the administrative committee. Max Wolff, grandmaster of the I. O. B. A., was elected chairman of the national council and affiliates of the American Jewish Congress.

Between sessions of the convention yesterday, Dr. Wise and Dr. Nahum Goldman, chairman of the administrative committee of the World Jewish Congress, were received by Secretary of State Hull.

An important discussion of the convention dealt with future relationship of the American Jewish Congress to the General Jewish Council, members of which include, in addition the congress, the American Jewish Committee, the B'nai B'rith and the Jewish Labor Committee.

Policy Change Asked

At the same time the convention voted to maintain its membership in the General Jewish Council, it directed its members to continue efforts to have the present policy of the general council reconsidered and overruled, to be replaced by a policy which will allow the council to function as the directing agency in the work of defending the rights of Jews.

At the luncheon Bishop Freeman declared "the most malevolent attack ever made on the forces of religion is being made now. It is a consolidated movement, a movement with an intense propaganda that reaches around the world. We here in America, if we are to unite in the interest of good fellowship, of neighborly kindness, have got to stand together to resist this sort of thing."

Senator Mead commended the congress for initiating the good neighbor program. He said Americans should not make the "fatal error of closing our eyes to the fate of less fortunate people elsewhere in the world." He declared, "We are Semites spiritually."

Rabbi Leon Fram, of Detroit, urged "an intensive organization" to eliminate factors of misunderstanding between Christians and Jews in a brief address at the luncheon.

At the morning session Rabbi J. X. Cohen read a report on economic problems and Dr. Joseph Tenebaum a report on boycotts. German goods were placed on a boycott list by the congress.

New Species of Bird Discovered; First Noted in U. S. in 21 Years

West Virginia 'Panhandle' Yields Find Resembling Parula Warbler With a Rapid, Buzzing Trill of Song

Discovery of a new species of bird was announced yesterday by the amazed Smithsonian Institute.

It seems very peculiar to Dr. Herbert Friedmann, curator of birds of the institute, that this particular bird could have remained hidden for so many generations and suddenly pop out on an unsuspecting ornithologist.

Karl W. Haller, ornithologist of Bethany College, was crossing a wooded section in the West Virginia "panhandle" when he shot the bird which has some of the characteristics of the parula warbler. It is the first new species of bird to be discovered in the continental United States in 21 years.

Haller said the peculiar song of the bird was a rapid, buzzing trill ascending the scale and dropping off at the end. When he located the bird,, he found it similar in coloring to the yellow-throated warbler, with a yellowish olive patch on the back, a trace of brown on the flanks, a tinge of raw sienna across the throat, and a little white on the tail.

The first bird bagged by Haller was a male. Later he found a female in the same locality. Search of the bird collection in the Smithsonian, where there are specimens of all known types of American birds has failed to reveal any identical species. Dr. Friedmann said it would be necessary to wait until spring when numerous amateur ornithologists will range the woods in search of types before it can be established whether the specimen is a hybrid.

Roosevelt Lays Wreath at Memorial as 5,000 Bare Heads to Honor Lincoln on 131st Birthday

Then the two-score patriotic organizations, acting under auspices of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, went in individual groups up the steps, placing wreaths by the columns until more than 40 were there.

While they acted, the band played "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" and "John Brown's Body." The wreaths and the colorings of flags and banners spread like a rainbow across the steps and the amateur photographers went hard to work.

The warm, bright midday lay on the white Memorial and gave sharp outlines to the gray figure of Lincoln, looming through the columns. The lieutenant of the guard, Thomas H. Clapham, 63, and watcher of the Lincoln figure and Memorial "since the architect called his wonderful work completed in 1922," went back to his tiny office.

Downtown, flags flew in commemoration of the anniversary. There was a swarm of colors outside the Ford Theater, in Tenth street, where the fatal bullet was fired the night of April 14, 1865. Crowds inside the theater, now a national museum, saw new exhibits, including:

The compass John Wilkes Booth used in his flight; the assassin's personal diary, covering his actions from April 14 to the time of his capture 11 days later on Garrett's Farm, in Virginia; the knife he weilded in escaping from the Presidential box after the assassination: a riding boot he wore upon reaching the home of Dr. Samuel Mudd, at Bryantown, Md.—who attended Booth's injured ankle—and the pine bar he used to barricade the door of the Presidential box.

Unemployment Must Be Cured or Free Nation Falls, Hoover Says

3 New Deal 'Notions' Held Great Faults

Spend and Borrow Program Will Mean Disaster, He Warns

By International News Service

Omaha, Feb. 12.—Unless the unemployment problem is cured "the America of Abraham Lincoln will perish from the earth," former President Hoover warned tonight in an address before the Nebraska Women's Republican Clubs.

Hoover emphasized throughout his Lincoln Day speech his conviction that America's chronic unemployment is "our most important domestic issue," and is inextricably linked with all other major national problems, including farm relief and balancing of the budget.

"To overcome unemployment we must have far more than the mustard plasters of politics," he said. "This is an illness in our system more serious than any since Lincoln's time."

Three "Notions" Explained

The former President said he sought the solution of the unemployment situation in a nonpartisan manner. "By the elimination of a lot of confused notions," Hoover declared, he believed he reached to the roots of American unemployment.

First he outlined three "notions" which he asserted, have brought "paralyzing confusion into the forces of progress." He said:

"The first notion or attitude is that the whole system is wrong and must be made over. That is what they call revolution in Europe.

"The second is that government officials can plan, direct or operate the economic life of the people. That is what they call statism in Europe. And mark that word: It is full of meaning for us.

"The third is that governments can spend and spend and borrow and borrow without thought of tomorrow. That is what we one time believed was the rock upon which liberal governments were wrecked. It did help wreck 12 democracies in Europe."

After discussing each of these points in detail, Hoover listed 10 conclusions which, he said, when coupled with a "vigorous shift in ideas," would help restore productive jobs for the Nation's 9,000,000 unemployed men and women. He said:

"If changes, remedies, reforms are to be of any value we must first determine our national philosophy, our intellectual approach to their solution."

He then launched into the 10 conclusions, saying:

1. "We must change from our national drift toward statism with its shackling of men to making a civilization of free men.

2. "We must turn from envisaging our problems as requiring transformation of a whole system, to an attitude that our faults are marginal around a heart and hearth which are well founded.

3. "We must change from pessimism to faith in the future and greatness of America, of democracy and its illimitable opportunities.

Productivity Held Vital

4. "We must firmly adopt the concept that it is only through steadily increasing productivity of the Nation that we can make progress.

5. "We must resolutely turn from Government spending to national thrift.

6. "We must desist from restricting invention and labor saving methods. We must drive our machines to the utmost: it is men we must conserve, not ideas or methods.

7. "We must realize that this system is based upon morals not alone in individuals but in government.

8. "We must revive the belief that the highest accomplishments of democracy come from voluntary cooperation among men.

9. "We must turn our direction from class conflict, pressure groups and disunity and seek unity. That was the spirit of Lincoln.

10. "And we must keep out of war."

"No one will deny that we have injected a huge dose of statism into our national system," he said. "No one will deny that bureaucracy greatly controls prices, wages, farms, production, industrial output and investment.

"It is doing it directly and is doing it indirectly through managed currency, credit, interest rates, pump priming and taxing power.

"The two concepts, one of statism and the other of free enterprise regulated to prevent abuse, cannot be long mixed," he said. "The mixture at once foments destructive conflicts. It develops pressure groups, each trying to get theirs or else . . . it sets up class hate in the most nearly classless country in the world."

1940 'Starting Gun' Is Fired by Republicans

Chairman John D. M. Hamilton (right) led the Republican Party's Lincoln Day "kickoff" for 1940 with an address at a $6.50-a-plate dinner last night in New York. Shown with him are Mrs. Robert A. Taft, wife of the Ohio Senator, and Aaron H. Payne (left), Chicago attorney

Roosevelt Evades Home Issues, Hamilton Says

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 12.—John Hamilton asserted tonight that "once recognizing his failure to restore the Nation to economic well-being, Mr. Roosevelt now refuses even to face our domestic problem."

"He (the President) takes refuge in statistics to prove that all is well at home," the Republican National chairman said in a speech prepared for the New York Lincoln Day Dinner, "and turns his attention to the difficulties of other peoples in lands abroad.

"But his tortured statistics deceive no one."

Like Buchanan's America

"Several years ago," Hamilton added, "President Roosevelt said he did not wish to leave this country to his successor in 1941 'in the condition in which Buchanan left it to Lincoln.' But like so many of the President's good intentions, this one, too, has been forgotten by him . . . The people of America know that when Mr. Roosevelt steps from the White House next January, he will leave his Republican successor a country in as critical a condition as Buchanan left to Lincoln."

The dinner was arranged for Republicans of New York State, New Jersey and Connecticut and had "Victory Through Unity" as its announced theme.

White Likens Jobless Slaves

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 12 (AP).—William Allen White, Emporia, Kans., editor, asserted tonight "we should choose as our leader a humble and kindly man" like Abraham Lincoln to cope with the unemployment "crisis."

Speaking before the Abraham Lincoln Association, White in a prepared address drew a parallel between the "crisis" of 10,000,000 unemployed today and Lincoln's problem of 2,000,000 slaves in 1860.

"I feel," he said, "the 10,000,000 jobless men in our land today present a problem no less menacing than was the problem of 2,000,000 slaves.

Wheeler in Jersey City

Jersey City, Feb. 12 (INS).—Democratic Senator Wheeler, of Montana, tonight joined Republican leaders in paying tribute to Abraham Lincoln.

Wheeler, before the Lincoln Association of Jersey City, did not spare his own party in his warning that "the nation of Lincoln faces another crisis."

Tobey Talks in Kansas

Independence, Kans., Feb. 12 (AP).—Senator Tobey Republican), of New Hampshire, told a Republican audience tonight "we need to cultivate the common touch and have an understanding of the aspirations and needs of our fellowmen."

He charged the New Deal with "lust for power."

of a people." The Nation needs, he asserted, "to catch just a bit of the light which was in the mind of Lincoln."

Former President Herbert Hoover laid down a series of ten "musts" for the country. It "must," he said, among other things, abandon a "national drift toward statism," adopt "the concept that it is only through steadily increasing productivity of the Nation that we can make progress," turn from "Government spending to national thrift," and "keep out of war."

"An alert, alive, and free people primed with confidence, filled with initiative and free enterprise, will quickly increase the productivity of the Nation," he said. "That will bring immediate relief to the farmer. And that will balance the budget. That will give jobs to the 9,000,000 unemployed, and that will assure Abraham Lincoln's America."

Speaking in New York City, John D. M. Hamilton, the chairman of the Republican National Committee, called for a revitalization of "the forces of free enterprise now dormant in American life." This, he said, would "mean a broadening justice and a higher standard of living for labor," and "a fair chance" for the investor and businessman to make a profit.

"It will mean," he added, "increased consumers for the products of our farms."

The speakers included not only Senator Taft, but Mrs. Taft as well. At a New York dinner, she said the problems of Government present "a challenge to our capacity for self-government." A system "of free government," she continued, "cannot survive permanent economic failure."

"Our pride in our free government is challenged," she added, "for we are proud of our American heritage of liberty which our grandfathers and grandmothers gave to us, of the Union which our fathers and mothers saved for us. They are ours in trust for our sons and daughters. The 'new woman' and the Grand Old Party will be true to that trust. We will work and we will fight for a chance for young America to go forward in a free and solvent country."

William Allen White, the Emporia (Kans.) editor, said at Springfield, Ill., that the Nation should select "a humble and kindly" leader like Abraham Lincoln to cope with the unemployment problem.

O'Brien Speaks At Lincoln Dinner

Robert Lincoln O'Brien, a lifelong student of Lincolniana, last night likened the American adoration of Lincoln to the Japanese nationalistic religion of Shintoism. He spoke at the Lincoln Day dinner of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, Fifteenth street and New York avenue northwest.

Just as the Japanese virtues are summed up in the worship of Shinto, the American ideals of democracy are personified in the life of Lincoln, said O'Brien.

Vandenberg Calls for Coalition of 'Like-Thinkers' to Save U. S.

Govs. Stassen, James Attack Democrats

Solidarity Urged At Republican Rally In Grand Rapids

By the Associated Press

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 12.—United States Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg said tonight that Abraham Lincoln was reelected in 1864 as "our first coalition President, uniting behind him all like-thinkers, regardless of party affiliations, who put the welfare of their Nation ahead of every other hope."

"And there is the pattern for us in 1940," said the Senator, who was toastmaster tonight at western Michigan's traditional Lincoln Day banquet.

Nearly 1,400 banqueters, augmenter by a gallery crowd of more than 2,000, listened to attacks on the Roosevelt Administration, appeals for Republican solidarity and many oblique references to the impending Presidential campaign.

James Attacks Democrats

They heard Gov. Arthur H. James of Pennsylvania accuse Democrats of "seven years of national housebreaking." They heard Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota praise Vandenberg as one "who would ably and honorably preside on Pennsylvania avenue."

Vandenberg told his fellow Republicans that "we must strive to create common ground upon which all like thinkers may unite to produce an Administration for all America in which a prepledged one-term President is manifestly free of all incentive but the one and single job of saving America."

Stassen asserted: "The men and women of this Nation have had enough of government of the New Deal, by the New Deal and for the New Deal. From all walks of life they are turning to the party of Lincoln with a desire of securing government 'of the people, by the people and for the people'."

Scarcely Touch Candidate

Said Vandenberg, in like vein: "Our people . . . are tired of bureaucracy and bunglers and boon-doggers and barnacles and brain-trusters and ballyhoo and bankruptcy. It is the responsibility of Lincoln's party to save the American system of free enterprise and free men under the renewed spirit of constitutional democracy."

Neither Stassen nor James dwelt long on the question of who might emerge as the Republican Presidential candidate.

"With clever pens and skillful words," Stassen said, "the opposition seeks to create the impression that we do not have men of sufficient stature to occupy the White House. In fact, however, the Republican Party has a number of stalwart leaders who would ably and honorably preside on Pennsylvania avenue, and one of these men is present here tonight."

"I am confining my discussion tonight to principles, rather than men," James explained at the outset of his address.

The Republican Party, James asserted, "must do more than evolve policies and a program for the better advancement of good government in line with the best thought of those to whom that government actually belongs—the men and women of our Nation. It must also issue a clarion summons for the return of the American doctrine; it must awaken this Nation both to the dangers of indifference and to the capacity of the people themselves to lead their march out of the morass."

Continuation of New Deal Means Totalitarianism, Taft Says

By the Associated Press

Greensboro, N. C., Feb. 12.—Senator Robert A. Taft, a Republican Presidential candidate, said here tonight the United States must decide whether it will remain a republic of its historic pattern or become a Government by a totalitarian executive.

Speaking at the Republican Party's Lincoln Day rally for North Carolina, the Ohio Senator predicted that "if the New Deal were licensed to proceed in the 1940 election," the result would be "a modern, stream-lined totalitarian dictatorship."

"This country in 1860," Taft said in a prepared address, "faced the greatest crisis in its history—whether it should remain a Nation or be broken up into two or more bitterly hostile States. Through the calm determination of Abraham Lincoln, we were preserved a Nation, but only after the frightful trial of Civil War.

"Again in 1940 we face a fundamental decision—whether this country shall remain the kind of country which our fathers made and Lincoln preserved, a republic protecting the inalienable rights, the freedom and liberty of its individual citizens, or a totalitarian executive with unlimited and undivided power over the lives and activities of individuals and local governments alike.

"The New Deal has slowed up today because the people in 1938 elected a Congress which, representing its constituents, disapproves of more Government power and spending. In effect, we have a deadlock in Congress today. The New Deal is unable to force its wishes on Congress but the Republicans and anti-administration Democrats are not strong enough to change any existing policy.

"If President Roosevelt should be reelected in 1940, however, the floodgates would be opened. The Wagner Health Bill is on the calendar, to cost $800,000,000 a year and lead us into socialized medicine. The general education bill would soon subject all education to Federal control, at a cost which will soon reach another billion. The National Youth Bill proposes to expand NYA until it subsidizes youth to the tune of $500,000,000 a year. Increased subsidies for relief, for the farmer, and for the aged will undoubtedly follow.

"If the New Deal were licensed to proceed in the 1940 election, we would see the course of the last six years accelerated—more power, more regulation of every phase of life, more billions borrowed and poured out to retain the spenders in power, until the Government is the servant, not of the people, but of its pensioners. We could not stop until financial collapse and a subservient Congress produced a modern, streamlined totalitarian dictatorship.

"But it remains for the voters to decide in November. I have no fear of the result when the issue is thus clearly presented to the people. They are against vast Government extravagance. They are against Government regulation of farm and business. They are against the whole radical philosophy of the small group of inside New Dealers in Washington today. They are against a third term, against destroying the precedent established by George Washington which has preserved this Nation as a constitutional republic for 150 years."

Democrats Pick Roosevelt Slate In Wisconsin

Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., Feb. 12 (AP).—The Wisconsin Democratic State convention adopted tonight a slogan of "officially indorsed Roosevelt-Farley delegates" for its slate in the April 2 Presidential preference primary, after declaring that President Roosevelt "should be drafted for a third term."

The meeting approved a full slate of 24 candidates for delegates to the national convention.

National Committeeman Charles E. Broughton, Sheboygan editor, declared afterward that a resolution praising Farley and placing of his name on the slogan constituted "a purely complimentary mention" and not an indorsement of Farley either as an alternate choice for President or as a Vice Presidential candidate.

Martin Invokes Lincoln's Word Against 'Isms'

Any Peril Will Come From 'Among Us,' Said Civil War Leader

Abraham Lincoln, if alive today, would lash "communism, fascism . . . all the new and poisonous doctrines which would exchange free government for dictatorship," Republican House Leader Joseph Martin, of Massachusetts, declared here last night.

Over a Nation-wide radio hookup the Bay State legislator and potential G. O. P. Presidential nominee, urged a rededication to the precepts of Lincoln for solution of problems facing the Nation today.

Martin said that Lincoln "put his finger on the danger which we face in this Nation today. He said:

"'At what point then is the danger to be expected? I answer, if it ever reaches us, it must spring up among us. It cannot come from abroad. If destruction be our lot, we must ourselves be its author and finisher.'"

For several years the United States has seen encouragement of sectional jealousies, class prejudices and suspicions, with communism, fascism and other "foreign isms," Martin said in calling for solution of the unemployment problem, reduction of taxes and encouragement of business.

"For seven years," he said, "this country has been made a proving ground for reckless experiments, and those experiments have failed.

"For seven years there has been rampant propaganda designed to lead the working man to believe that his interests are separate and apart from those of the employers, and thus to convince the employers that their interests are separate and apart from the interests of labor . . . All have a common interest and a common welfare."

The time has come for "some of Lincoln's plain speaking," Martin added.

$10,000 Lawsuit Refused by Court

The District Court of Appeals ruled yesterday that the law does not permit punitive damages for breach of contract, even when the breach was "willful, wanton and malicious."

John Minick, proprietor of Harland Garge, 513 Tenth street southeast, was refused the right to sue the Associates Investment Co. and Associate Discount Corporation for $10,000.

Attorney Jacob N. Halper who, with Attorney Stanley H. Kamerow, represented Minick, said the garage man still might bring suit in the Municipal Court for a $144 garage bill against the two companies.

Dewey Flays New Deal as Ruinous to Nation

By the United Press

Portland, Oreg., Feb. 12.—Under the New Deal, the American productive plant and its equipment have been "running down at the heel" at a rate of $1,000,000,000 a year, District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey said tonight.

In the third major speech of his campaign for the Republican Presidential nomination, Dewey spoke at a Lincoln Day rally in the civil auditorium sponsored by the Multnomah County Republican Central Committee.

Lambasting the national Administration with a charge of allowing the American productive plant to slip backward ever since the New Deal took over, Dewey declared:

Attitude on Erosion

"We are giving much thought to the erosion of land. But what of the market for the products of land? What of the erosion of the plant and equipment which provide the jobs for a Nation's workers? Here is what is going on.

"Our productive plant wears out at the rate of about $6,000,000,000 a year. That is our annual erosion of capital. We must put back $6,000,000,000 each year into the productive plant of this country merely to stand still.

"But under the New Deal we are not even standing still. In the six years from 1933 to the end of 1938 we needed $36,000,000,000 for replacement alone. The grand total of capital put into our productive plant in those years was only $29,000,000,000—not even enough to make up for wear and tear.

"Seven billion dollars short of even holding our own! Our productive plant and equipment have been running down at the heel at the average rate of more than $1,000,000,000 a year."

"Divide and Rule" Policy

Accusing the Administration of following a "divide and rule" policy, he quoted the words Lincoln used in discussing the slavery issue: "A house divided against itself cannot stand."

Throwing in the face of the New Deal the dissension in the ranks of labor, Dewey observed:

"Any administration which cannot make peace between warring factions of labor, or even between itself and labor or busines is a failure."

Striking the same tone at another point, he asked:

"Is it any wonder that one-third of the Nation is ill-clothed, ill-housed and ill-fed, as the President himself has said? Is it any wonder that 9,000,000 of our people are still out of work?

Suggests Action Be Taken

"What's the good of talking about the underprivileged third if you don't do anything effective about it?"

After declaring that development is lagging in the United States and savings are not going into new enterprise, Dewey asked "why?" and answered:

"Because of the Nation-wide undercurrent of distrust and fear of the shifting policies of the Administration in Washington. Because the New Deal has vilified business men, levied punitive taxes and in the name of legitimate reform has sought to rule or ruin the commercial life of the country."

He quoted from a recent declaration by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor: "At this time there are not enough jobs in private industry to go around. This is largely due, in our opinion, to the fact that lack of confidence has stunted business growth and expansion."

In Default to People

That statement he supplemented with another:

"The Democratic Party is in default to the American people. After seven years of power, it finds itself without solution for the major questions of unemployment, low national income, mounting internal debt, increasing direct and consumer taxation and restricted foreign markets. There still exists the same national unhappiness that it faced seven years ago."

Dramatically disclosing the source of that quotation, Dewey said:

"Now that wasn't said by any business man. It wasn't even said by a Republican. It was said by a man who has himself encouraged the New Deal in many of its heresies—by a man who put up a half million dollars out of union workers' dues to carry on those heresies. It was said by John L. Lewis, the leader of the C. I. O.

"The New Deal recovery policies have failed. On that, at least both houses of labor have taken their stand. That's where every thoughtful element of the Nation stands today."

The Vatican to Reveal Itself Upon the Screen

'March of Time' Pictures Sacred Precincts; The Little Theater Breaks Out New Bill; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

AS HAS BEEN STATED here so many times before, this column holds no brief for the "March of Time," beyond the fact that it seems able to get about in precincts where other newsreels, documentary or not, fear to tread.

BELL

Having struck off two-reel commentaries upon practically every "hot" aspect of the present war in Europe, America's problems in the Far East and other topics of timely and vital importance, the next issue of this carefully compiled compendium will devote itself to "The Vatican of Pius XII."

This sounds like an especially easy assignment. Nothing seems to have been necessary beyond a little scrupulous examination of the "library" clips on the subject and a judicious pruning of photographic material already on the shelves. That, however, is not the way "Time" goes about such things.

Louis de Rochement, the "March of Time" producer, seems to have had it in the back of his resourceful mind that "Time" could do the Vatican a genuine service. He convinced the holy father of that fact and set about putting his wheels in motion as long ago as last summer, foreseeing with almost inspired clairvoyance that the Pope inevitably would become world news. And so it came about. On Christmas Eve Pope Pius XII broadcast a plea for peace to the world from Vatican City, in Rome; the day before, President Roosevelt had broken with precedent by appointing Myron C. Taylor as his personal representative to the Holy See.

And so it comes to pass that for the first time in history the Vatican has been completely "covered" in motion pictures. Condensed into the March of Time's" conventional two reels will be scenes within the Basilica of St. Peter's, in the crypts beneath the church, where the ancient Popes lie buried; in the Sistine Chapel, the famous Vatican Library, the Vatican postoffice, radio station, grocery store and sausage mill.

"The Vatican of Pius XII" will be lent additional interest and timeliness by its release about Eastertime.

ᔓᔕ

"Lorenzo Goes to Hollywood," that autobiography of Edward Arnold's that came to hand some weeks ago, will prove an interesting addition to the bookshelves of the nostalgic. It belongs in the same bookrack with George Blumenthal's "My Sixty Years in Show Business," our old stablemate, Frank P. Morse's "Backstage With Henry Miller" and our old crony, Ward Morehouse's "Tonight at 8:45" as a reminder to old-timers of a golden day that is gone from the theater. Ed covers only a meager 40 years in the playhouse, as opposed to Mr. Blumenthal's 60, for example, but they are full of the stuff that proves again that acting is a hard job and not just "one continuous round of pleasure," as so many mistakenly believe. Ed also makes a few mistakes, like all of the others who attempt to cover a lifetime in a comparatively few pages. For instance, in referring to his engagements with the National Theater Players, he repeatedly refers to Stephen E. Cochran, impresario of that noble group, as Steve "Corcoran" and then goes on to take the "Thin Man" fictions away from Dashiell Hammett and give them to S. S. Van Dine. Easy reading, nevertheless.

The playreader's job is no cinch. It is a tricky business trying to estimate the stage potentialities of a play in script or published book form. We recall, shamefacedly enough, that we couldn't see anything much in Priestley's "Laburnum Grove," when we read it, and then discovered a delightful comedy when Edmund Gwenn and his associates played it. Lillian Hellman's "The Little Foxes," in which Tallulah Bankhead closed at the National Saturday night, read with a directness and driving power that somehow was partially lost in its playing. And now comes, or will soon, Katharine Cornell in Sam Behrman's "No Time For Comedy." It reads like the enchanted and proverbial million dollars—crisp, lively and gay. Now let's see how it will act.

Contrary to every expectation, that finely wrought twilight of an actor's life, "The End of a Day," will not continue a second week at the Little Theater. Tonight's 9:55 preview, following the last regular showing of the French film; will introduce "Secret Agent" for a week's run that officially will begin tomorrow morning.

The previews, on the other hand, stand up like nobody's business. Today the Loew people are unwinding "I Take This Woman" for the amazement and presumably amusement of the drama desks. This is the item that costars Hedy Lamarr and Spencer Tracy, after having been abandoned, along with all that jack it cost, for gosh only knows how long. Now they say it emerges as a hit. We shall see what we shall see.

HERBERT HOOVER attended the ice-skating party for Finnish Relief, at Rockefeller Plaza, and was pleased at the number of customers who participated . . . Hoover watched the skaters glide by him, and seemed to express great interest. One of the news-photographers therefore suggested that the fund would receive much publicity, if Mr. Hover would pose, wearing ice-skates . . . "Oh, no," said the former President, laughing. "Can you imagine what those cartoonists would do—with a picture of a Republican on ice-skates, in these days?"

FOR THE FIRST time in many years, an informer has had his face cut with the mark of the squealer, in a New York prison. It happened at Hart's Island . . . Harold Ratter, managing editor of C. C. N. Y.'s Main Events, wrote to Eleanor Roosevelt, informed that he and his associate, Helen Price, would be in Washington, and that they would like to stay at the White House. Mrs. Roosevelt replied that she regretted that all beds are filled at the White House now—but invited them for lunch . . . Tommy Farr cabled to Joe Gould, his manager, that his Army superiors are consenting to his trip to America, and that he'll fly here shortly to do some fighting.

Bernt Balchen, who was Richard E. Byrd's pilot, went to the Kit Kat Club, where a photographer started to take his picture . . . "If you want a real good picture," Balchen suggested, "come to North Beach Airport between February 22 and February 2?" "I have some planes there, ready for shipment to Finland" . . . "And will you pose with them?" Balchen was asked . . . "Yes, I'll pose," the flier agreed. "I'll even stand on one of the wings—and thumb my nose at a Soviet flag."

Ben Marden, of the Riviera, will convert the American Music Hall on East Fifty-fifth street into a modern night club. Destruction of the old building will begin on March 15 . . . Howard Rushmore, the movie critic who was fired by the Daily Worker because of his review of "Gone With The Wind," insists that the ad placed for him in the American Press Society's Bulletin, was done so without his authority . . . The 21 Club has threatened to sue Leonard Sillman, if he inserts that "21, Skidoo" number in his "New Faces."

OSCAR LEVANT, the pianist-composer, and Moe Berg, the ballplayer, attended the Carnegie Hall recital of Vladimir Horowitz, the pianist . . . Then they walked to Levant's apartment, where Oscar told Mrs. Levant: "Honey, I'm glad you didn't go" . . . "Why?" asked Mrs. Levant. "Was he that bad?" . . . "No," replied Oscar. "He was that good."

Karl Stepanek, who plays the part of the ruthless dictator in "Skeleton on Horseback," cabled to friends in America that he has escaped from a German concentration camp, now is in London, and wants help to get him to America . . . Alan Hoover, son of Herbert Hoover, brought his wife to the Rainbow Room, and was seated next to John J. Raskob, who headed Al Smith's campaign against Hoover. The Hoovers ordered a ham sandwich and a soft drink; the Raskobs ordered sandwiches and champagne . . . One of the wire-services received a cable from its correspondent in Rome, reading: "Mindenmark just saw Ciano" . . . The editors searched every available list of Nazi diplomats, to ascertain the identity of "Mindenmark," but none of the lists included this name . . . The name then was passed around the office staff, in the hope that someone would recognize a codeword aimed at getting by the censor . . . After two hours, the mystery was solved. It was a simple abbreviation for "The Minister of Denmark."

CHARLES LAUGHTON, who refused to attend the Miami premiere of his new film, "The Sidewalks of London," finally agreed to talk to the premiere-audience there, via telephone from Hollywood, picked up by an amplifier in the theater. He demanded that the questions be submitted to him in advance, and this was done. Laughton made his speech. But the amplifiers went wrong, and the stunt fizzled . . . Jack Pearl brought a young lady to the office of Louis Shurr, the agent, with whom he began a philosophic discussion about Nietzsche and Confucius. Pearl turned to the young lady, and said: "There's a great philosopher —Confucius" . . . "I don't think so," she stated. "I don't think so at all. I think he has a very filthy mind."

That Depraved Indigent Is Back in Town

'Tobacco Road' Returns Pitiable Jeeter Lester To National Boards

By Nelson B. Bell

"TOBACCO ROAD." Jack Kirkland presents his play in three acts, based on the novel by Erskine Caldwell. Directed by Anthony Brown; setting by Robert Redington Sharpe. At the National Theater.

—THE CAST—

Dude Lester	Pitt Herbert
Ada Lester	Zera Perry
Jeeter Lester	John Barton
Ellie May	Sheila Brent
Grandma Lester	Lillian Ardell
Lov Bensey	Edgar Hinton
Henry Peabody	Dick Lee
Sister Bessie Rice	Mary Perry
Pearl	Eugenia Wilson
Capt. Tim	David Houman
George Payne	Walter Ayers

"Tobacco Road," that sterile patch of Georgia clay productive only of pathos, profanity and primitive lust, returned to the stage of the National Theater last night for its seventh Washington week.

Described by some caustic commentators as "that rank weed that has grown in the backyard of the theater," this three-act dramatization by Jack Kirkland of the Erskine Caldwell novel still has a somber message to impart and expresses it with earthy and blasphemous exactitude and energy. It is no delicately molded drawing-room piece. It is, on the contrary—and as Washington well knows—a bitingly realistic presentation of the economic and spiritual problems of the lowly sharecropper. There is infinite pathos in it. It sprouts the seeds also of rancor, recrimination and revulsion.

"Tobacco Road," on the evidence of the reaction of last night's near-capacity audience, still is dramatic dynamite. With one Washington week for every year of its run on Broadway, as the record-breaking hit of all time, this grim, one-set, stark drama of a despised and craven people still survives as a social study that may not be lightly disregarded, however it may be belittled and smugly condemned by those who contend that "it could not happen here." Mr. Caldwell and Mr. Kirkland both assure us that it has happened here.

It seems pertinent to recall that when "Tobacco Road" first was brought to the Capital, with Henry Hull in the role of Jeeter Lester, which he created, it was deemed necessary in the interests of propriety and the public weal to prune the script to something like the polite contours it should possess as a stage work not deliberately aimed at an attack on public decency and morals. That squeamishness now has abated. "Tobacco Road," as it has been for several seasons past, again is played with no softpedaling of its most virulent implications.

In last night's playing of the hoary piece there was more than an occasional suggestion of blueprints and the metronome. The cast, perforce, was executing its chores by rote. The stereotyped pattern of the performance, however, in no way dampened public ardor. Everyone present in the National last evening seemed to be of the opinion that "Tobacco Road" will be a hit!

John Barton, now matching Mr. Hull in the number of weeks he has been seen locally in the part, once again limns the bestial and poverty-stricken character of Jeeter Lester in broad strokes of degeneration and decay. Into his study of disintegration he manages to weave an astonishing amount of comedy. Even with their incessant overtones of tragedy, his humorous jousts with the less abysmal aspects of life are heartily amusing.

As Ada Lester, his long-suffering wife, Sara Perry, it seemed to me last night, grossly overplayed, while Eugenia Wilson, as her beautiful daughter, Pearl, underplayed quite as conspicuously. The afflicted Ellie May is conventionally portrayed by Sheila Brent and the infinitely pathetic figure of Grandma Lester is done wordless and pantomimic justice by Lillian Ardell.

Edgar Hinton is effective as Lov Bensey and Pitt Herbert contrives a passable halfwit, submerged by Mary Perry's studiously formulated impersonation of an unconvincing and completely mediocre Sister Bessie. The remaining members of the ca are sufficient unto the s they are called upon commit.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood Feb. 12 (INS).—There's apt to be a little controversy over the life of "Benjamin Franklin" between RKO and Warner Bros. George Schaefer has purchased Carl Van Doren's biography on Benjamin Franklin and is now discussing Gene Lockhart for the lead. The price paid was $40,000 and negotiations were held up for several months because of Sidney Howard's death. Howard was preparing the dramatization for the stage of Doren's "Life of Benjamin Franklin" at the time of his tragic death.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Warners have already announced they will star Edward G. Robinson as Benjamin Franklin and since his life is in public domain, RKO can have no grievance—or vice versa.

A few days ago Barbara Stanwyck had luncheon with Henry Koster to discuss "Serenade to a Wealthy Widow," the amusing magazine story which Universal bought a year ago. As I remember the yarn it's about a wealthy woman who makes a fool of herself over a young movie matinee idol many years her junior. Barbara seems young for the part—but perhaps the movie will clip off a few years.

I have just heard of an extremely interesting purchase of a coming novel, "Quietly My Captain Waits," by Evelyn Eaton. Warners' offer was the first to be received. The price paid is $35,000, which sounds like a large sum when you consider the novel has not been published. It is as long as "Anthony Adverse" and "Gone With the Wind," is a woman's story so that I suppose it is intended for Bette Davis.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: William Holden and Brenda Marshall are a bridle path duo every morning. Brenda soon gets her divorce decree and then maybe the name bridal will be spelt differently; Princess Baba's very good-looking husband, Bob Gregory, and Bernice Parks, of "Meet the People" fame a luncheon twosome at Sardi's; Gwynne Pickford and her bridegroom Bud Ernst, Lili Damita, Carmel Myers and some 15 others welcomed the Addison (Jack) Randalls home from Yuma at Peggy Fears' apartment. Later they carried on at the Duncan McMartins. Lili looked stunning in all black. Errol Flynn will really have to coax hard this time to get back in her good graces.

The "Pinocchio" premiere and the opening of the ballet brought everyone to Cire's. Marlene Dietrich stopped in with Erich Remarque. Sir Victor Sassoon was the dinner guest of Charlie Chaplin.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Feb. 12.

David Butler, who did such a swell job with Kay Kyser on the "That's Right, You're Wrong" picture, which has cleaned up, has just had another brain-wave — of flash caliber. They've signed Kay for the second picture, story to begin where the first left off, which is a natural. But Kay will have more to do this time than his orchestra—they've discovered he's a real personality—and the picture has sent his air rating skyhigh.

HOPPER

Well, Leo Carillo is definitely to do it! He'll announce in April his intention to run for Governor of California. Leo usually votes Republican, but says he'll run on the independent ticket, as he has friends on both sides of the political fence. He now has around 500 workers scattered throughout the State, and by election time says he'll have 10,000. He's Hollywood's busiest dinner speaker, never turns down a benefit, and is tremendously popular. There's a darned good chance that he'll make it, too.

Let's have a little fair play and lay off Hedy Lamarr, Joan Bennett, Gene Markey and Walter Wanger. They're happily married. If Joan thought dyeing her hair black would make her more attractive on the screen, why not? And just because Hedy ran a temperature all the time she was in New York and couldn't go everywhere they called her high hat, which was so stupid. She was under doctor's orders, which most of the time she didn't obey. So I say, stop picking on them — they're swell people.

You'll be glad to know that Norma Shearer finally has three wonderful pictures lined up. The first will be Sidney Kingsley's "World We Make" taken from the novel "Outward Bound." Then one of Noel Coward's, following that "Forever," by Mildred Cramm

When Warners asked Eddie Robinson if he'd like to play "Brother Orchid" next, he said: "Listen, after 'Dr. Ehrlich' whatever you tell me is good for me, that's what I'm going to do."

Our "Meet the People" hit has finally been sold to Ray Goetz and Peggy Fears. The New York opening is slated for the Henry Miller Theater. And it can't miss.

Funny sight on the "Sailor's Lady" set. It was a comedy scene between Joan Davis and Wally Vernon, who usually has a divine sense of humor. He was in a swing, and she suposed to shove him back into his seat. But she pushed him so hard the chain broke. He not only lost his balance but his sense of humor, went down with the swing and spoiled the take, which they could never duplicate.

which they lived and labored and fought and died."

Lincoln's humanitarianism, like that of the people, declared Father Cartwright, was inspired by the religious and moral truth which emanated from Sinai and the Mountain of Beatitudes.

He urged his listeners, in remembering the Great Emancipator's achievement, to remember also its inspiration, so that "in a world insane with the false values of paganism and the false ideals of the material and the false worship of the ephemeral, we shall give leadership among the peoples in that faith which is truth and in that obedience which is freedom and in that service which is peace."

The closing words of Lincoln's second inaugural speech, uttered only a month before his death, explain why his memorial has become the shrine of American patriotism, said Rabbi Gerstenfeld.

"In these words he uttered the faith that all Americans, whatever be their creed, can share," he pointed out, "a faith in the supreme value of homely kindliness and neighborly charity; a faith that not only 'with malice toward none and with charity for all' but 'with firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right;' a faith that it is the duty of every one of us to bless this land with more than a spirit of tolerance and charity, but to be true to the light which God reveals to us."

Need of Church Cited

Dr. McCartney, who is chairman of the Committee on Religious Life, told the story of how Lincoln, learning during services that the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church was to be closed and converted into a war hospital, rescinded the order because "we need this church to keep the stars shining in their skies."

"Yes, we do indeed need the church to keep the stars shining in their skies today," repeated Dr. McCartney.

"There are so many earth-born clouds arising from unbelieving and godless quarters of the earth that tend to obscure those stars of hope and faith and brotherhood that beckon to the finer instincts in us all."

The Girls' Glee Club of Howard University sang religious and patriotic hymns.

ough investigation" of the activity and report to the full committee was adopted on presentation by Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma.

Members said that an investigation by the committee and action on corrective legislation will be considered after Brown's report is received.

Nichols was named chairman of a special subcommittee to investigate charges that dealers have been selling inferior gasoline under false labels. Assisting him will be Representatives Pogue (Democrat), of Texas, and Bolles (Republican), of Wisconsin.

Asserting that it is the duty of the committee to ascertain whether "the public is being gypped" or whether "false charges are being made," Nichols said he will call George M. Roberts, superintendent of weights, measures and markets, as the first witness this week.

Complaints of the "gas dive racket" followed publication of a report by Roberts to District Commissioners.

"If the charges are correct, something ought to be done about it," said Nichols. "If they are not correct, something should be done to allay public fear."

A decision to accept an offer of U. L. d'Ghilini, who recently gave an exhibition at the National Press Club, to expose the tricks of clairvoyants, spiritualist mediums, fortune tellers and the like was reached following a spirited discussion between Nichols and Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana.

Nichols insisted that the committee was "getting into deep water" and that there was a difference between fakers and sincere believers in spiritualism. Schulte, recalling his years of experience in the show business, retorted that they "are 100 per cent fakes."

"My wife likes to go to fortune tellers," said Nichols, "and I think she has a perfect right to do so, just as I have to see a vaudeville show."

"You don't believe that people ought to pay $5 or $10 to be told that they can talk with relatives who are dead, do you?" shot back Schulte.

The discussion then veered off into an argument over who was the most experienced showman.

"I've sung in every cabaret in Kansas City and was on the Pantages Circuit," said Nichols, proudly.

"I've done everything in the show business, including getting out of trunks, mind reading, and other stunts," replied Schulte, waiving an actors' union card dated 1907.

Garbo, Friend Are Latest To Disappear

GRETA GARBO

Star, Dr. Hauser Leave Palm Beach, Miami Stares in Vain

By the United Press

Miami, Fla., Feb. 12.—Lost, missing or strayed: Greta Garbo and her tall, handsome dietitian-friend, Dr. Gaylord Hauser.

The couple last was reported driving south with an associate of Hauser after the great Garbo suddenly decided there was no chance of being alone at Palm Beach, and headed for more secluded parts.

Although there isn't very far they could go from Palm Beach in a southerly direction without landing in the ocean, there was not one report of even a brief stare at them today.

It was assumed they went to Miami, if they headed south as reported. Besides the idle curious, however, scores of newspapermen and photographers unsuccessfully combed Miami for the couple. Garbo and Dr. Hauser were not sighted en route a single time after supposedly turning south from Palm Beach.

Ironically it was the ogling of Palm Beach's sophisticated socialites who themselves go to great lengths to stay out of range of the curious, that caused La Garbo to skip.

The shy film star was a major interest at Palm Beach from the moment of her arrival last Thursday. Her shopping trips with Dr. Hauser and her brief appearances at restaurants set fashionable togues wagging.

Overton Asks Advice

Senator Overton, chairman of the Senate subcommittee on District appropriations, who has visited many of the local welfare institutions and intends to inspect the others, said he would be glad to have a suggestion "from someone in authority" as to how the local budget is to be expanded to meet welfare needs.

He said there were only four ways of solving the problem and apparently anyone would encounter opposition.

The first is to issue bonds, he said, explaining that this would require legislation as the Capital now is prohibited from resorting to this means of raising money.

The second would be to increase local taxes. Local civic and trade groups are opposed to this solution, he said. The third would be to curtail some other municipal activity, but District officials insist this is out of the question.

"All that remains then," he said, "is to increase the Federal payment to the District and Congress refused to go above $6,000,000 last year."

Dies Probers Await Return of Chairman

The Dies Committee yesterday suspended activities until the return to Washington of Chairman Martin Dies this month from his home in Texas, where he has been ill.

Acting Chairman Starnes said he had no plans for further hearings since the conclusion Saturday of the testimony of William Dudley Pelley, Silver Shirt leader.

Baby Placing Perils Families

but we persuaded them to do so until investigation could be made.

Two Examples Cited

"In an hour's time, the woman and baby were back here again. Her husband wouldn't let them into the house. It took the forces of law and order to get them back in. They finally kept the child a while longer until the mother was located and a plan was worked out. But that is an example of the way children can be casually passed around here."

The long-time results of haphazard placement show up in another case which Capt. Milliken described.

"A little girl was bandied about from one family to another. From earliest childhood she was constantly finding out that she didn't belong where she was. She learned to trade on the fact, because nobody felt responsible for her. She became known to the Woman's Bureau when she was about 10 years old. At that age she had started stealing and running away.

"From time to time during the years, she has been getting into trouble. She is now 19. Not long ago she was in the Woman's Bureau for forging a check which she had stolen. She is now in an institution. That is just one instance of the series of complications which may follow the irresponsible placement of a child," Capt. Milliken said.

"Undercover Businesses"

"We have reason to believe that there are undercover maternity businesses here which supply children to the baby brokers. Such establishments take unmarried mothers to board and, when the babies are born, they are passed on to someone who will place them.

"We've heard of a new business in the Northwest, but haven't been able to find out the address yet. The placement of babies couldn't be stopped, but at least we could check up to see about the permit required for a lying-in hospital," Capt. Milliken said.

"I know of a woman whose child-caring permit was revoked in another State. She came to the District, opened a boarding home and began pacing babies. She had to make the chief income for her family off this business.

"A number of the babies came back on her hands from unwise placements. And when a baby would turn up and we couldn't trace its source, we would go to her and ask if she had placed it. I think she got tired of that happening. But I understand she is still boarding babies and has the health permit that is required. Since baby-placing is her business, I suppose she is still at it.

More Case Work Needed

"But not all the persons who place babies are doing it to make money," she pointed out. "I know of one woman who takes unmarried girls into her home, just to help them out. We here at the Woman's Bureau have had talks with her, and she has seen the wisdom of allowing recognized agencies to place the children. She has been handling it that way in the past year.

"What if there is a law to prevent casual placements—but no additional service to take care of the problems of the unmarried mothers who look to the baby brokers now? Stricter laws must be accompanied by provisions for more case work for women who need it," Capt. Milliken declared.

Even when the Home works out plans for the unmarried mothers and babies who go out from there, sometimes a commercial agent tries to interfere with those plans.

"The baby of an unmarried mother was placed in a boarding home and the father was paying for the baby's board," Miss Rogers said. "But he got tired of doing so. He heard of a commercial agent and put her on the track of the baby's mother. The agent took the mother driving and to lunch and talked her into letting the child be placed for adoption.

Knows "Middle Man"

"The mother went to the foster home and demanded the baby and let the agent have it. We didn't consider that baby adoptable. The mother had had syphilis and it may show up in the baby years from now. Of course it may never show up, but the family which took that baby is taking an awful risk."

Miss Rogers said she knows of a "middle man" here who sends babies to a home in another city where they are put in condition for adoption.

"I don't think this 'middle man' makes any money out of it. She says she just likes to help people out. I don't know how many babies she sends, but I hate to think that such a thing can happen to any babies," Miss Rogers added.

Miss Rogers, too, stressed the great need for case work for unmarried mothers who do not go to an institution such as the Florence Crittenton Home. The Home helps all its girls to plan their future and to get a new start—service which is lacking for girls who turn their problems over to the commercial agents.

'Mild Epidemci' Of Scarlet Fever Reported Here

A "mild epidemic" of scarlet fever was reported in Washington by the Health Department yesterday.

A total of 129 cases has been reported since January 1, as compared to 86 for the same period last year, said Dr. George Ruhland, District health officer.

Crowded conditions in the isolation ward at Gallinger Hospital have forced establishments of additional facilities for segregating patients, but Dr. Ruhland said the situation "doesn't appear to be serious."

John E. Morris, War Department Employe, Dies

John E. Morris, 54, for 20 years an employe of the War Department, died yesterday at his residence, 3526 S street northwest.

A native of Salem, W. Va., Mr. Morris came here in 1910. In the World War he served as secretary to the late West Virginia Senator Henry G. Davis. He joined the air section of the War Department in 1920. He was a Mason.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Virginia Morris, and two daughters, the Misses Eleanor and Mary Morris, all of this city. The funeral will be held at 3:30 p. m. tomorrow at the Lee funeral home.

Nichols Apologized

Representative Nichols apologized both to the House District Committee and to the House yesterday for the faults of the income tax law. It was "hurriedly written and hurriedly considered," he said, and numerous mistakes in the drafting were inevitable.

Nichols recalled that he had refused to sign the conference report although chairman of the House managers which handled the bill.

"Sooner or later," he said, "the people of Washington are going to come to the realization that an income tax cannot be applied here equitably and that they are losing lots of revenue by not catching the thousands of transients that visit Washington with a sales tax."

Randolph Concurs

Chairman Randolph also recalled that he had favored a sales tax rather than an income levy.

Besides the income tax amendment, the House adopted a Senate bill with an amendment to amend the District code to clarify the word "purposely" in the definition of first-degree murder. The legislation is an outgrowth of the Garden T Shoppe murder.

The effect of the amendment, which was worked out carefully by a committee of lawyers, is to permit the prosecution of a first degree murder charge against anyone who kills during the perpetration of a felony regardless of intent.

The income tax and code amendments were the first District bills to be acted on in either House this session. Action on all controversial measures on the House calendar was postponed.

Shield Of Liberty

During recent years the Supreme Court has tended to modify and, in some notable instances, even to reverse positions it had previously taken with regard to great constitutional issues which have come before it.

In one vital particular, however, the highest tribunal has remained steadfast and unchanging. It is today, as it has been for so long, a jealous and uncompromising guardian of the Bill of Rights. In a series of notable opinions it has struck out with unfailing vigor against attempts to restrict or deny freedom of speech and freedom of the press, the right of assemblage and the right of habeas corpus. As the late Senator Borah pointed out three years ago:

"When war passion, or mob passion, or political zeal, or selfish schemes have carried men beyond reason or justice, the court, when called upon, has interposed to avert great wrongs."

It has done so again in yesterday's unanimous opinion reversing the decision of the Supreme Court of Florida in the case of four Negroes who had been sentenced to death after they had confessed to the murder of an elderly white man. The Supreme Court has ruled that the third-degree methods employed by the Florida authorities to secure these confessions made them invalid.

"We are not impressed," said Justice Black in expressing the unanimous opinion of the court, "by the argument that law enforcement methods such as those under review are necessary to uphold our laws. The Constitution proscribes such lawless means irrespective of the end." And in an eloquent aside, which has particular pertinence in the present age of dictators and arbitrary rule, Justice Black reaffirmed the court's solemn determination to act as guardian of civil liberties.

"Under our constitutional system," he said, "courts stand against any winds that blow as havens of refuge for those who might otherwise suffer because they are helpless, weak, outnumbered, or because they are nonconforming victims of prejudice and public excitement . . . No higher duty, no more solemn responsibility, rests upon this court, than that of translating into living law and maintaining this constitutional shield deliberately planned and inscribed for the benefit of every human being subject to our Constitution—of whatever race, creed or persuasion."

United France

For two days at the end of last week Premier Daladier and his colleagues of the French cabinet rendered the Chamber of Deputies an accounting of their stewardship during the five and a half months since the war began. At the close of the discussion, which was held in secret so as to permit a maximum degree of frankness, the Chamber gave the government a 554-to-0 vote of confidence.

We have become accustomed to unanimous votes in such puppet parliaments as the Reichstag, the All-Union Congress of Soviets and the Italian Chamber of Deputies. But the world is under no illusion as to what those votes mean. They reflect, not voluntary unity, but blind, unquestioning obedience to the will of a dictator responsible to nobody but himself.

France, however, is a democracy which has not ceased being democratic by temporarily concentrating power in the hands of a war regime. So the fact that, for the first time since the conflict began, not a single vote was cast in opposition to the government can be taken at its face value, as a true reflection of the unity and solidarity which obtains in France today. To be sure, the one considerable minority in the Chamber which might have manifested opposition—the Communists—had no chance to do so. They have been expelled. However, their blind adherence to the dictates of Moscow have discredited them in the eyes of the French people.

The importance of the Chamber's demonstration can hardly be discounted. The Nazis have done all in their power to sow dissension between Great Britain and France. They have concentrated their fire on the former while repeatedly holding out an olive branch to the latter, in the hope that the French could be persuaded to lay down their arms and thus make a peace on Hitler's terms possible.

Saturday's vote in the Chamber proves that this hope is wholly without foundation. In the words of the resolution which that body approved without a single member dissenting, it is France's determination to "conduct the war to victory."

Poll Taxes

In his address to the American Youth Congress, John L. Lewis called upon the Department of Justice to "attack and strike down" the laws now in force in eight Southern States requiring payment of poll taxes by all voters. The practical effect of these laws is to disfranchise most of the Negroes and a considerable number of low-income whites living in these States. The widespread employment of education tests in the South also results in large-scale disfranchisement.

The abuses of the poll tax system are unfortunately easier to expose than to suppress. Mr. Lewis assumes that the privilege of voting is among the "inalienable rights" granted under the Constitution to a free-born American. That, of course, is not true. For every State determines the qualifications for voting within its borders so long as it does not encroach upon constitutional limitations. Thus aliens may be granted voting privileges, while American citizens may be and have been denied them. Indeed, about one-half the adult citizens of the United States were voteless until passage of the nineteenth amendment granting woman suffrage.

Young people of both sexes under 21 years are also excluded from the electorate, although any State might fix another age limit. Ownership of property as a qualification for voting is no longer required, but it would be entirely legal. The requirement that a voter must pay poll taxes or other kinds of taxes is a long-standing variant of the property test.

The restrictions imposed upon the States in respect to suffrage by the Federal Constitution have but two purposes: to prevent discrimination on racial grounds or for reasons of sex. As the Southern poll tax laws apply to both men and women, whites as well as Negroes, it is doubtful whether they are open to challenge on constitutional grounds. To sustain a charge of unconstitutionality it would be necessary to prove that in practice the laws are not applied impartially to all citizens.

Even if discrimination could be shown to exist, the power of the Federal Government to force reforms upon the States would be questionable. Under the fourteenth amendment, to be sure, a State which denies the vote to any male adult citizen, except for participation in rebellion or other crimes, is supposed to be penalized by having its representation in Congress reduced. But for various reasons Congress has never tried to enforce this constitutional mandate, despite the widespread disfranchisement of Negroes in the South.

While there is little that the Federal Government can do to redress the wrong done to the disfranchised citizens of some States, a great deal can be accomplished by the exposure and forthright denunciation of practices which violate the spirit of democracy. There can be no doubt that the purposes for which poll taxes are levied, and the method of enforcing these laws, violate the principles of equality upon which our democracy is based. They should be repealed by forthright action of the States.

Lord Tweedsmuir

The heartfelt regret being manifested in every corner of Canada and from every section of the Canadian population over the passing of Lord Tweedsmuir is a demonstration of the affection and esteem he had gained as Governor General.

He was appointed to that post in 1935. But between the day he assumed this office and his death on Sunday he made himself acquainted with every aspect of Canadian life. He was at home everywhere and with all sorts of people.

In this last role, however, Lord Tweedsmuir, better known as John Buchan, his name before he was ennobled, was only applying the same earnestness, energy and intelligence which had previously found expression in other directions.

He was still a college student when he began a writing career that was ultimately to make him one of the most popular authors of England. His range was as remarkable as his output. He could turn out learned and authoritative works on military affairs, such as his four-volume history of the World War and also such superb mystery tales as "The Thirty-Nine Steps." He was a first-rate novelist, as anyone who has read "Greenmantle" will bear witness. Yet some of his outstanding works were in the field of biography.

Lord Tweedsmuir's writing never interfered with his other activities. He served for years as managing director of a large publishing house and his interest in public affairs was unceasing. He was a man of many parts who did everything he set his hand to extraordinarily well. He will be missed not only in Canada and Great Britain but also here in the United States where he had a multitude of admirers.

Side Issues

Five separate investigations into various local problems have been ordered by the House District Committee. Apparently the committee is convinced that all is not well in the Capital City. Stimulated by appeals from Mrs. Roosevelt and other civic-minded citizens, it has taken up fact-finding in a big way.

Most of these investigations should lead to constructive results. Particularly the inquiry into conditions at Blue Plains ought to result in the adoption of a more humane policy of relieving distress among the indigent aged. If the investigation is broad enough, it should also lead to the improvement of many other welfare institutions in the District and perhaps to less emphasis upon institutional care for wards of the District.

If the committee has any evidence that the consumers of gasoline in the District are being swindled by some dealers, corrective measures are certainly in order.

In its series of articles on "baby brokers" The Post has shown the urgent need for a protective statute to prevent infants from falling into the hands of unfit foster parents. The committee ordered a probe into the exploitation of homeless infants and their mothers as a direct result of facts brought to light by Miss Lucia Giddens of The Post's staff. Such a study has been too long delayed.

One investigation ordered by the committee—that concerning mediums, clairvoyants and fortune tellers—carries the suggestion that some Congressmen have nothing more important to occupy their attention. Perhaps certain members of the committee are merely seeking comic relief from their heavy legislative burdens. If that is their purpose, it is to be hoped that it will not interfere with the very serious work of improving Washington's long neglected community services.

While these investigations go forward, moreover, it is well to keep two facts in mind. They have been ordered by the committee which handles District legislation but has no control over the local budget. It remains to be seen whether the findings of Congressman Randolph's committee will influence the subcommittee which pilots the District appropriations bill through the House.

Much more important is the fact that these investigations at best can lead to solution of only isolated local problems. They are equivalent to the inspection of a few weakened bolts in a bridge that has long since become obsolete and ought to be replaced by a modern structure. The real need of Washington is for a new local government which can investigate rackets on its own account and which can correct deficiencies in local institutions without waiting for the slow and uncertain turning of legislative wheels on Capitol Hill.

Regardless of how many inquiries may be ordered, therefore, they should not be permitted to obscure or delay legislation for a complete overhauling of the District government.

75 Years Of The Nation

For a periodical to have survived the storms and tempests and droughts of three quarters of a century is in itself no mean accomplishment. The list of weeklies, monthlies and quarterlies which have come and gone in the United States since 1865 is a very long one. But the fact that The Nation, which this week celebrates the seventy-fifth anniversary of its founding, has managed to outlive so many of its journalistic contemporaries is only the least of its distinctions.

First under E. L. Godkin, one of the truly great American editors of the nineteenth century, later under Oswald Garrison Villard, and at present under the vigorous leadership of Freda Kirchwey, The Nation has always been a lively, well-informed and outspoken, if sometimes opinionated and cantankerous, observer and critic of the times.

In its long life The Nation has undergone radical changes in viewpoint. The stand it takes today on many issues would have shocked those associated with the weekly in its early years. But through all its metamorphoses it has never hesitated to espouse minority views or unpopular opinions with unfailing honesty and courage.

It has thus served the cause of democracy, where the minority of yesterday can and frequently does become the majority of tomorrow. On its seventy-fifth birthday, The Post offers The Nation its warm congratulations.

Dies Irae—Dies Eire

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

For a newspaper of the presumed self-respecting status of The Washington Post, your cartoon on the editorial page of February 8 is astounding. To attempt by insinuation to deliberately link a responsible committee of the United States Congress with the dastardly tactics of the I. R. A. assassins may be appealing to those who revel in forged papers, but without exception, every reference I have heard to your I. R. A. cartoon has been that of condemnation. From the standpoint of patriotism, it is contemptible.

JONATHAN H. BROWN.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I am a reader of your paper for many years and this is the only time I have written to your Readers Column. I want to express my opinion of the horrible drawing appearing in your editorial pages of February 8, which depicts the execution of two Irish youths by the British government.

I do not know what the cartoonist intended, but it looks to me like unrestrained hate against the Irish race together with British propaganda on the part of the cartoonist and those who allowed the picture to be published. To me it recalls the case of Nathan Hale; that is my reaction.

I am not Irish but have many friends and neighbors of that race. I find them excellent people, and they are entitled to just as much American sympathy as any other nationality. I also happen to know something of Irish history, and it is indeed a very narrow-minded, unfair individual who would say that the Irish have not the right to resent the intrusion of England on Irish soil.

My sympathy and pity go to the Irish people in their struggle. Frankly, it takes a man like Hitler and his associates to deal with the English government.

Wanderlust

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The advent of a new era is always marked by two contingencies—temporary decadence and a revival of the wanderlust spirit.

This nomadic instinct dates back to a remote antiquity when man, simple in understanding and with animistic conceptions of nature, roamed the dense forests, encamped by lakes and rivers, and herded in tribes by the sounding seas. Thus, beginning in savagery, passing through barbarism, and extending into civilization, the eternal quest for a something has ever inspired with a love of adventure the restless pilgrim heart.

For untold centuries these bold apostles of evolution, these scions of destiny—the adventurers, unfettered by bigotry and untrammeled by conventionality, have answered the call inevitable, and have resistlessly gone forth blazing the trails of progress.

As the powerful lens reveals the secrets of other worlds, so that greatest of all human faculties, the imagination, penetrates the future with transcendent genius. Vast fields of endeavor, infinite with possibilities, challenge the new spirit of the wanderlust—investigation. The telephone, wireless telegraph, the airplane, the submarine, the automobile, radium, the X-ray, antiseptics, spectrum analysis, and radio-activity foreshadow the marvelous achievements that are to follow. And with new convictions actuated by assiduous application this vanguard, these crusaders of the twentieth century, press heroically on, forever seeking that higher level—man's place in the universe.

Ode To Lincoln

For great causes, great leaders rise,
Heroic souls of bold emprise—
The man to meet the hour!

When o'er our Land, the war-clouds hung;
When to the breeze, war's flags were flung,
Then, to us, Lincoln came!

God heard our prayers for one to lead,
And sent him to us in our need,
To guide us in His name.

O Man! O Hero! Statesman great!
Deep in thy heart was sealed thy fate—
God-sent to earth wast thou!

Thy mission done, thy work complete,
Thou wast recalled to 'compense sweet—
A crown upon thy brow!

Floating Ideas

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

A recession in business appears to be a fact. Possibly three new ideas floating out of Washington have not helped recovery.

One of these ideas is that paying the interest on our bonds out of new bond issues is a commendable policy. When corporations pay dividends or interest out of loans after deficits, the penal laws may be invoked.

A second of these ideas is that we should give away free to certain European nations considerable sums of our excess gold. It so happens that gold is even yet the standard of values; and that even yet it stores values so that Uncle Sam himself hoards it. Gold given away would scarcely cause continuance of any such value as it now has.

A third of these bright new ideas is that the President must have a third term in order to convince the Europeans of the permanence of our foreign policies. It appears in this argument that European governments maintain firm policies—monarchies, republics, dictatorships alike. Perhaps it has been forgotten that Hitler changed his mind regarding Russia and is now rewriting Mein Kampf.

Our country gave notice a hundred and fifty years ago that we were to have forced quadriennial elections when the voters could decide whether or not they wished policies changed. Most Europeans of any intelligence know this as well as we do. The proposition to bind the public will is rather new in our history.

How to get men back upon pay rolls does not seem to interest deeply the proponents of these brilliant ideas. Business confidence is something quite out of their line of interests.

Russian Gold

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

If I understand your editorial of February 10 headed "Morgenthau and Russia," you criticize Secretary Morgenthau for, as you express it, "aiding the Communists by purchasing Russian gold." Gold is not purchased by the Treasury in any proper sense, but is sent here to purchase American goods and these goods could not be purchased in any other way. If Secretary Morgenthau should refuse to accept the gold in payment for goods he would be blocking the sale of American goods and would be putting an embargo on the sale of such goods to Russia, which would be an unneutral act.

It may be that it might be well to place an embargo on the sale of goods to Russia or Germany or Japan, but that is something for Congress to do and not Secretary Morgenthau.

Mrs. Roosevelt And Youth Congress

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In The Post of February 7 an editorial reprimands Mrs. Roosevelt for her belief that "the A. Y. C. is not injured by inclusion of the Young Communist League as a constituent body," adding that she "would do well to ponder the forthright decision of the Civil Liberties Union," which has decided to exclude Communists from either office or committee membership. But reading on the same page, The Post Impressionist's fine tribute to Mrs. Roosevelt, her real admirers feel emboldened to raise a few points.

Mrs. Roosevelt, as your columnist has pointed out, is a very unusual woman: intelligent, kindly, but she is more. She is a woman with a well-defined social philosophy of life. She is a thinking person, knowing a great deal about the deep-rooted social sentiments that determine human behavior and how these sentiments are developed by the conditioning to which man is subjected by the institutions and traditions of his culture.

Mrs. Roosevelt looks intelligently at human behavior as a sociologist does, with the difference that she puts these valuable findings into instant and remedial operation.

Mrs. Roosevelt is also a mother of young people, but from the time when she was mother of babies, she undoubtedly knew the wisdom of giving a toddler something to take his fancy and fill his eye, if she wished to take from him a dangerous weapon. And didn't the young of a generation ago love to toy with socialism and call themselves "Socialists?" And nobody got overexcited about that.

Robert Louis Stevenson wrote in a letter that he was now too old to be a Socialist; that phase belonged to youth. And do our young of today have more than they did a generation ago? They really have less, both in their present status and prospect. Is it not part of a farseeing wisdom to give them something to fill their imagination, to stimulate thought, and give them something to do?

These thousands of unemployed young people have to be considered. They need a guide to show them how they can help preserve this democracy of ours. It is a gigantic instrument, but a delicate one, which has been shown to function quickly and even efficiently in a great crisis.

This was demonstrated in the depth of the depression when those who might have wished to jettison the entire machinery were made happy in the universality of suffering to put their shoulder to other shoulders and pull. We came through this crisis by applied intelligence plus faith and patience.

We are not out of the woods yet. We have passed that danger post, but there are others. We still have unemployment and we still have unemployed youth. What those young people need is an active hand in helping to preserve our democracy. Should they be spanked and told what they cannot do, instead of being encouraged and directed to do what they can?

They need a constructive program and they need direction. One of the fatal deficiencies of the present day is the fact that there is nothing constructive for us to do. We are on the defensive. We defend our democracy when it is attacked, but there is no day-in, day-out program whereby we can work for it.

Do not Mrs. Roosevelt's consistent and remedial activities speak for themselves? Must we isolate just one and put it under the microscope?

Is it impossible for a truly great person, simple, forthright and patriotic, to survive amongst us?

The Post Impressionist

Dose: One Article Every Three Months

Life's article on Mrs. Roosevelt last week appeared not a second too soon, as far as I am concerned. I had reached the depths of my mid-winter slump, and there is nothing like a good piece about Mrs. Roosevelt to shake the cobwebs from one's soul.

The effect of the last bit of Eleanoriana had disappeared as completely as had that of my fall housecleaning. I refer, of course, to the fabulous lady's statement that she never sits down for the sole purpose of resting. For days after reading that report, I noticed a new briskness in my manner.

I rose each morning as though I had been shot from a cannon; I plunged the breakfast china into the dishpan before the coffee dregs had a chance to settle in the cups. On the few occasions when I allowed myself to sit down, I made sure first that I had a needle and thread in my hand; after all, even Mrs. Roosevelt sits down when she knits.

But gradually and insidiously my weaker self came back to life. Sometimes, after sitting down I would discover I had forgotten my thread, and it scarcely seemed worthwhile to go fetch it. In fact, once or twice I suspected myself of deliberately forgetting the thread; after that, it was just a step to forgetting the needle. And before long, I found myself just sitting down.

Meanwhile, of course, the finger smudges were multiplying on the woodwork, unmended stockings accumulated in the uncharted jungle of my bureau drawer and old bills popped out accusingly from behind undusted bric a brac.

And so it was that yesterday I took a deep breath and prepared to read some more about Mrs. Roosevelt, conscious that like all good tonics it would taste a little bitter on the way down but that it would make me grow up to be big and strong, like the First Lady.

The familiar reactions set in almost instantly. A slight tingling along my spine, probably symptomatic of the renascence of my nervous system, became acute as I read:

"During the last seven years, Mrs. Roosevelt has, at a temperate estimate, traveled 280,000 miles, written one million words, earned and given away over half a million dollars, shaken half a million hands, delivered several hundred lectures, radio speeches and interviews to the press; knitted several dozen tiny garments for Roosevelt babies, cooked hot dogs and poured a second cup of coffee at several dozen picnics and probably not wasted as much time as the average person does in a week."

My eyes wandered involuntarily around the room. A large spider web hung challengingly in one corner. To do myself justice, I had first noticed it only the week before. But I confess that my original plan had been, not to take a swipe at it with the broom, but to let it hang in the interests of science. "An Experiment to Determine the Period of Time Which Elapses Between the Formation of a Spider Web and its Ultimate Fall to the Ground" was the tentative title I had given my plan.

I was about to rise and assail the dusty guinea pig when I came upon the following: "One explanation of Mrs. Roosevelt's ability to lead such a full life is that she has the saving mental knack of being able to dismiss one subject entirely from her mind when she goes on to the next."

In the interest of my morale, I could not afford to dismiss the rest of the article from my mind while I tackled the spider web. I thought it better to stick to Mrs. Roosevelt for the time being. Pulling on old bill from behind a convenient sofa cushion, I wrote on the back, "Spider web in living room" and continued to read.

As my will power strengthened and new vitality surged through my hardening arteries, I added to the list such homely chores as "Take back empty beer bottles," "Wipe out refrigerator where cream spilled" and "Find out how window shades work." The kitchen shade had collapsed during the Christmas season and I had spent most of one mad morning trying to replace it. I found that when I rolled the shade up before putting it in its brackets, it stayed up, revealing my culinary crises to all of Que street; whereas if I did not roll it up first, it refused to go up at all and kept the kitchen in a constant tomb-like twilight. I resolved now to excavate the shade from the cluttered hall closet where I had scuttled it.

The list grew as I courageously swallowed paragraph after paragraph. By the time I had finished reading, it included such unlikely feats as "Call landlord about cracked window pane" (the pane had been in that condition when we first looked at the apartment a year and a half ago); "Have maple chair mended" (the chair had given way beneath a boisterous New Year's Eve guest and had been looked on merely as potential firewood ever since), and "Call Salvation Army about old magazines." I might better have made it, "Call Smithsonian Institution"; they conceivably would be willing to pay something for such items as a June, 1930, edition of College Humor.

The list by now had overflowed from the original bill onto a miscellaneous collection of similar scraps of paper. I gathered them together and fastened them with a pin stuck in the arm of the sofa (a memento, no doubt, from my "Sew While You Sit" period). As I rolled them up proudly, I had an impulse to call Mrs. Roosevelt and report to her the good job she had done. I finally gave up the idea; the telephone was all the way across the room.

A sudden weariness seized me. Perhaps I have been trying to do too much today, I thought. Or perhaps I had taken an overdose of my favorite tonic. Vaguely hoping it would not be fatal, I tucked the roll of old bills behind a cushion and lay down for a little nap.

The Republican Nomination For President

By Walter Lippmann

Neither Party Likely to Nominate A Dark Horse

ALL SPECULATION about the conventions, platforms, and issues is subject to the proviso that it is a long time until June, a much longer time until November, and that in this interval events entirely beyond the control of anyone may change radically the whole situation. So there is a general feeling that the sensible thing to do is to avoid being stampeded by anybody and, watching all the various combinations that are possible, to wait and see.

LIPPMANN

It is, however, fairly clear that neither party is going to nominate a really dark horse. The people will want to know a great deal about the man they vote for this time, and they will not take to the idea of a candidate who has to be introduced to them after he is nominated. So, as regards the Republicans, the choice for President is almost certain to be among Dewey, Taft, and Vandenberg, with a somewhat wider field of choice for vice president.

We can, I think, go further and say that as things stand now the supporters of Dewey and Taft would have a working majority in the convention provided they do not start quarreling too much over whether the ticket is to be Taft and Dewey or is to be Dewey and Taft. For these two men combined enlist the support not only of the largest Republican constituency but of the most substantial and influential leaders of the party. Though there is some difference of temperament, emphasis and views between Mr. Taft and Mr. Dewey they are in the same central tradition of the Republican Party and nothing that is deep and important divides their respective followers. These two men together unite the largest number of Republican voters.

MR. TAFT and Mr. Dewey are men of moderate views who try to represent the central mass of ordinary sensible Republicans. Mr. Vandenberg's appeal on the other hand is to the more vehement factions, to both ends rather than to the middle. He is not merely a protectionist but he is for an embargo on imports. He is against the New Deal bureaucracy and he wants to set up a bureaucracy to superintend the whole vast complicated machinery of foreign exchange and commercial payments. He is a pacifist and an isolationist and yet, until the consequences sort have antennas which pick up what is in the air about them, and they respond quickly. The defect of this political virtue is that men who possess it tend to believe too much in the mystic voices that they hear, and to lack intellectual humility in listening to men who give them true, though unpopular, advice.

The Timid Soul

Dewey, Taft And Vandenberg Principal Candidates

Mr. Taft does not have this intuition, and it is a handicap to him in a time like this when public opinion is, on the surface at least, so potent and yet so changeable. But Mr. Taft is an exceedingly honest man and because of that he has learned much during his one year in Washington and he has matured remarkably. He is one of those men who really do learn by listening to people and studying and thinking and then making up their minds. He is not a good improviser, and that is in some ways a defect in an age when a public man must often think fast even if he does not always think right.

BUT THE DEFECT is one which arises out of genuine and important virtues, above all out of the virtues of honesty, and an intrinsic intellectual fairness, and of a remarkable absence of the shoddy, cynical, and calculating rhetoric of the politicians. Mr. Taft is not the kind of man to lead excited crowds, perhaps not the kind of man to capture their applause. But he is the kind of man whom the individual members of the crowd would select, if they knew him, to administer a trust for their children, or to be the judge in an important dispute where what they wanted was justice. Those are important qualities in a public man and the more one observes Mr. Taft in Washington the more impressive do they become.

They are more important, it seems to me, than his published views on current questions. For while his views are conventional and often narrow and frequently lacking in insight and experience, he has the saving grace of intellectual humility. He will examine patiently the evidence and he will listen carefully to reason. He is not opinionated. He does not have pride of opinion. He is not intoxicated with his own rhetoric or in love with himself as a public personage. So his conservative philosophy is sincere conviction embedded in a genuinely liberal character; he will never be a die-hard or a foolish reactionary, or stubbornly self-complacent. He will learn what events will compel him to learn, but he will learn slowly. Sometimes he will learn too slowly. In part this will be because he is a little slow about unfamiliar things. But chiefly it will be because there is nothing of the cheap skate about him, and, therefore, he will insist on reconciling his opinions with his convictions.

were called to his attention, he wanted to summon Japan before a conference of the powers and judge her under the Nine Power Treaty. Then he wanted to make a new treaty with Japan. It is this propensity of his to adopt such strange, contradictory and extreme views which divides him from the main mass of Republicans. Mr. Vandenberg is, therefore, more likely to disrupt than to unify his party. For the Republicans must go before the country with an appeal to the desire of the people for stability, moderation, and practical good sense.

As it is today it seems to me, therefore, that a Republican convention meeting now would have to decide whether to make its ticket Taft and Dewey or Dewey and Taft. These two men are a natural team, standing for essentially the same things and complementing each other in many ways.

Neither of them, of course, has had very much experience in public life. Though the rule is not absolute, it is, I think, true that the most effective American Presidents, at least since Lincoln, have been men who had had experience as a chief executive, usually as governor of a state. Cleveland, Theodore Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson, Calvin Coolidge, and Franklin D. Roosevelt all had that experience. The names of those who came to the Presidency without the experience of being elected to high executive office and of having to administer a government and having to lead a legislature will, I think, confirm the idea that it is something of a gamble to elect as chief executive anyone who has never been a chief executive.

So both Mr. Taft and Mr. Dewey have to be considered as untested, and the question is what might be expected of them, judging by what is known of their minds and characters.

The first thing that is quite evident about both men is also reassuring. Both are able and willing to learn; both have developed rapidly in the past year. Mr. Dewey learns not so much because he is young; plenty of younger men never learn anything. Mr. Dewey learns because he has native political intuition, the same kind of talent for knowing what is going on that exists in men like Al Smith, LaGuardia, Lloyd George, and in the first and second Roosevelt. He is a born politician and leader of men. Men of this

Fair Enough

No Superlatives

ALL MY SUPERLATIVES were used up on Walt Disney's last picture, the Snow White show, so that this one, "Pinocchio," catches me without symbols fit for the occasion. Perhaps I should make up some as the late Joe Humphreys used to do in some of his orations from the Garden ring or borrow one of his.

One night when Tammany Hall had appointed one of the faithful to an important patronage job in Madison Square Garden, a beefsteak and beer brawl was flung to solemnize the occasion in the private debauching, drinking and falling unconscious-on-the-floor room designed for the relaxation and segregation of Tex Rickard's 600 millionaires.

This party was of that degree of elegance and charm known to the chivalry of the Tammany organization as an affair which is not to be confused with a racket. An affair is where you got to get invited or you can't get in, whereas a racket is where anybody can git in just so they buy a ticket, and if you don't buy plenty of tickets how would you like a broken leg?

Soared Into Space On Flight Of Adulation

ANYWAY, MR. HUMPHREYS presided, and, according to his own custom, divided his oration into two fairly even parts. In the first part he would pay many wholesome if rugged and woefully inadequate compliments to his wit, wisdom, fine spirits and capacity for loyal friendship "through thick and thin, taking the bitter with the sweet." This would be followed by summaries of the fine personal qualities of the distinguished shysters, bootleggers and political extortioners and thieves who chanced to adorn the occasion.

On the occasion I now recall, Mr. Humphreys, without warning, took off into space on a joyous and utterly unprovoked flight of adulation of that greatest little pal that God ever made, that greatest little Mayor and friend of the wonderful, manly sport of fistiana where clean-limbed young Americans irregardless of creed or color, develop their character and self-reliance, with fame and fortune hanging in the balance, that world's champion of wonderful pals through sunshine or sorrow, James J. Walker, who wasn't even there.

The mention of Mr. Walker's name evoked prolonged cheers, attended by the throwing of hard-shell rolls and olives and banging of steins containing nutritious, if immature beer from the immune brewery of Mr. Ownie Madden, another great little pal that God ever made, and the sweetest character, too, when you got to know him. At the lower end of the table a noted jury fixer got into a fight with a blackmailer specializing in insurance on boom-time building construction over the deadly but obviously imponderable issue of which one knew Mayor Walker better and loved him more.

Precious Sounds, Not Mere Words

IGNORING THIS diversion, Mr. Humphreys continued to soar in the rare, pure atmosphere of his own admiration for Mr. Walker until presently, as was his wont sometimes, when common language proved inadequate, he began to gibber in sports. His gibberish, flung to the world unexpectedly amid a context of more or less standard English was too elusive in sound and too soon gone to be transcribed, which is a pity, for there was a beauty beyond the poor power of book words. They were precious sounds, rather than mere words, appropriate only to the emotion of the particular instant in the whole length of time, and once uttered, were gone.

Mr. Disney's "Snow White" put me in a state two years ago, and my praise, written in an emotional condition, was the only document of the kind of which I have never felt a willingness to retract at least a little. Yet, on seeing "Pinocchio," I have a sense that the same terms applied to this marvelously beautiful and nimble creation would seem surly.

Only one of Mr. Humphrey's improvised words ever remained with me. It was not one of his very best, but it may give you an idea. At the climax of his eulogy, Mr. Humphreys declared that Mr. Walker was not only noble, generous, brave, kind, wise, honest and loyal to the last gasp, but was positively infidictimous.

My friends, for "Pinocchio," that goes double.

Roosevelt And The Changing Mood

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S address to the American Youth Congress last Saturday was received with sullenness. Perhaps, considering the age of the persons addressed the more accurate word would be "pouting." In a few cases the sulking of the youths expressed itself in scattered "boos." That was something very new — it is doubtful if ever before a President, speaking from the White House portico, to an audience on the White House lawn, was so treated. It is unprecedented. But it throws a flood of light on something just now taking place in American politics.

SULLIVAN

An English statesman once said, of the two English political parties: "There are times when this country wants conservatism; there are times when this country wants liberalism; but there was never a time when it wanted both."

That statement contains much fundamental truth; it is an axiom of politics, and it applies to the United States as to England. But, like most epigrams, it oversimplifies; it states things more starkly than in fact they are. A more expanded statement might say:

At all times a considerable portion of the people are conservative; at all times a considerable portion are liberal or radical or what-not. But at all times there is, between the extremes, a large body of persons who become "fed up" with the conservative after they have been in power a long time; and become equally "fed up" with the radicals after they have been in power a considerable time. It is this middle group that changes direction from time to time, and by its change creates a majority that is conservative or liberal, as the case may be.

And it is not quite exact to say there is never a time when a country wants both conservatism and liberalism. There are brief periods during which the middle group is in process of switching. While this switching is going on it is difficult to be sure what the country wants. The present is such a time in the United States. A radical tide has been under way since 1930. It is now beginning to ebb, to give way to a conservative tide.

Pouting Youths Seemed To Turn To First Lady

IN THE LIGHT of this we can understand Mr. Roosevelt's disagreeable experience at the hands of the Youth Congress. From the beginning of his Administration, Mr. Roosevelt aligned himself with the radicals and liberals. Presently these groups went to extremes—that always happens to both conservatives and liberals after they have been in power a considerable time. Mr. Roosevelt's radical followers wanted to go farther than the country was willing to tolerate. Thereupon, Mr. Roosevelt chides his followers, trying to restrain them. And thereupon the followers resent the chiding, and look about for another leader.

(What makes the present incident at once unprecedented and bizarre is that the pouting youths seemed to turn from Mr. Roosevelt to Mrs. Roosevelt. Papa cross, papa spank; maybe mamma more sympathetic.)

Mr. Roosevelt has had similar experiences with many groups and individuals. He had it with Huey Long. At first he so pleased Long that Long helped nominate him for President. Mr. Roosevelt tried to "go along" with Huey, but the time came when Huey reviled him.

Mr. Roosevelt had the same experience with Father Coughlin. Father Coughlin addressed the convention that gave Mr. Roosevelt his first nomination. During the early years of the Roosevelt Administration, Father Coughlin was invited to the White House and to Hyde Park. But the usual happened. By 1936 Father Coughlin, standing before an audience at Cleveland, tore his clerical collar from his throat to leave him free to apply to Mr. Roosevelt an epithet which would be unbecoming for a priest to utter.

Same Experience With John L. Lewis

MR. ROOSEVELT had the same experience with John L. Lewis. During the early part of his Administration he and Mr. Lewis were close. Mr. Lewis contributed nearly half a million dollars out of the treasury of the United Mine Workers to Mr. Roosevelt's campaign fund. Mr. Roosevelt went to great lengths publicly, and greater lengths privately, to do what Mr. Lewis wanted. But inevitably the time came when Mr. Lewis wanted to go on to further extremes. Mr. Roosevelt, sensing the changed mood of the country, would not go along. Now Mr. Lewis excoriates Mr. Roosevelt.

In all this Mr. Roosevelt reflects the changing mood of the country. Literally he reflects it. It is not that he is adroitly trying now to make himself leader of the new tide. (Although Mr. Roosevelt is capable of great political adroitness.) His reflecting the changed mood of the country is a deeply instinctive trait. It is a part of Mr. Roosevelt's great strength in politics that by temperament he is a mirror which reflects what the crowd thinks. The crowd—98 per cent of it as Mr. Roosevelt estimated in his speech—favors Finland, and therefore resents the tolerance of the Youth Congress toward Russia. Mr. Roosevelt could no more help sharing and reflecting that 98 per cent than a chemeleon could help turning green when placed upon a green cloth.

To reflect the mood of America during the past seven years was simple—the color was plain, it was pink. But a period of changing mood, changing tide, is a period of political confusion, of swirling waters, of many cross-currents. In such a time, a man destined by his inner nature to reflect the background upon which he has his existence—such a man thus placed is like that unhappy chameleon who found himself upon a cloth of many colored plaid.

The Once Over

Love And Buses

An Institute of Family Relations has completed a study of romance and discovered that more proposals of marriage are made in automobiles than in the home. But the ones made at home are still the better bet.

Lack of privacy in the home is given as the reason for the triumph of the flivver over the front parlor, but the Institute misses the big point. When a couple do their courting in an auto they are the bosses of their own lighting arrangements.

How the internal combustion engine has speeded up romance!

In the old days it took at least an hour being nice to pop and mom. You had to listen to pop's views on the plans for the new bandstand in Cropsey's Park, satisfy mother's explorations into your background and stall around talking about the international situation.

You even had to look over the family photographs!

You and Arabella got alone after what seemed years, and even then you felt a good deal like Gen. Lee when you knew Phil Sheridan was in the neighborhood. Every few minutes you had to say in a loud voice, "Yes, the exhibition at the art gallery this year is wonderful," or cough and shout, "Isn't it terrible about the Philippines?"

And then there was the time limit hanging over you, and the signal system, with mother calling, "Arabella, is that you down there?" one of the silliest questions of all time.

A wooer was always in doubt whether he was carrying on a courtship with the girl he loved or attending a mass meeting in the House of a Thousand Squeaks.

A romance took years. Then came the horseless carriage, putting love on tires, equipping affection with a magneto and streamlining sentimental impulses throughout. Today you call, blow the horn, grab the girl and are through the second red traffic light before pop and mom, standing in the doorway, have been able to determine whether you are the young man who works at the button shop or that boy from the gas works.

You leave the old folks at 45 miles an hour, pass the old-fashioned conventions at 55 and are doing a good 60 before you reach the point of remarking: "Well, honey, I thought I'd run over and see you. Did you expect me?"

In 15 minutes you have proposed, in a half-hour you have set the date and in 45 minutes you have reached the matter of house furniture.

My tabloid pictures dying troops
In wastes of ice and snow,
And technicolor stars of Movietone and radio;
It shows a famine victim and a bombing refugee,
And the reigning deb of Newport with a man of 53.
My tabloid tells me how to dress and how to win a mate;
It makes the chicken-hearted feel important and sedate.
Since first my tab was published I have never missed a one,

Mass Exodus From Wornout Land Seen

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 12.—The Russell Sage Foundation published an estimate yesterday that "substantial" mass migrations from four large areas in the United States may be expected as a result of land problems.

The areas are the cut-over region of the Great Lakes, the southern Appalachian coal plateau, the submarginal farm lands in the Great Plains and the old Cotton Belt. Estimates suggest that a migration of from 1,500,000 to 6,000,000 may be necessary from the old Cotton Belt alone.

The report, prepared for the foundation by Philip E. Ryan, views migrants as "a group of average persons with no greater tendencies toward unsocial behavior than prevail in the general population."

Ryan said a chief source of trouble for distressed migrants lies in "antiquated and local settlement laws."

"A citizen of the United States all his life, a migrant may find himself a citizen of no State, unable to benefit by many of the provisions which are by law the right of his fellows," Ryan said.

"Moreover, the community in which he finds himself so stranded is usually unwilling to render special assistance, both to avoid increasing the tax load and for fear of encouraging an invasion of the unemployed."

Such conditions, Ryan added, often result in "the passing on of the migrant from community to community, with his condition dropping to a level where he may become a spreader of disease and contagion, a social outcast whose children are left uneducated for lack of clothes to attend school, and a threat to any community in which he chances to reside."

Toledano's Quick About-Face Discloses Mexican Labor's Communist Affiliations

By Betty Kirk.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Mexico City.

THE ABOUT-FACE staged by the Mexican Confederation of Mexican Labor (C. T. M.) and its leader, Vicente Lombardo Toledano, since the Russian alliance with Germany has exposed more clearly than its many critics have been able to do the obvious affiliation of the group with the Communist Party.

The C. T. M. is a powerful force in Mexican affairs which has always advocated and practiced a political as well as union role. Through Lombardo Toledano, it's general secretary, it has been aggressively outspoken and his brilliant oratory has made its voice widely heard. Its newspaper, El Popular, has added to the audience for the confederation's policies and conducted a clear-cut propaganda campaign which leaves no doubt as to the political convictions of the union.

Until shortly after the outbreak of the war every statement made by Lombardo Toledano and published by El Popular vigorously supported the democratic governments, President Roosevelt and the "Good Neighbor" policy. Equally vigorous condemnation was poured upon Hitler, the Nazis, Fascism and aggressor nations. El Popular carried on for months a campaign to expose Nazi activities here and the labor group were the best source for information on Fascist agents.

WHEN WAR began the Mexican government declared its neutrality but this was much too mild a move for the C. T. M., which was still following the Communist tactic of cooperating with the democracies. Lombardo Toledano declared in public speeches that Mexico could not remain neutral before the threat of international fascism. The United States, he said, would eventually enter the war and Mexico must be ready to fight by her side in defense of the principles of democracy, which were the only protection for weak nations.

All this occurred early in September. Then something happened, as it was happening to left-wing groups all over the world. The full significance of the Russo-German pact began to be realized and a new tactic was instigated. It was then that the Mexican labor front began to squirm.

It was not long in finding them. The democracies were quickly transformed into "imperialist" nations and became the villains of the piece. The "Good Neighbor" policy became overnight an instrument of deceptive intrigue for the exploitation of Latin America. And Prime Minister Chamberlain began to occupy the place formerly dedicated to Hitler in El Popular's brilliant and devastating cartoons.

A TYPICAL editorial showing the about-face was published in El Popular on January 19. It attacked the Allied blockade which has killed Latin-American trade with Germany. It alleged that because European competition in Latin America had been removed the "agents of Yankee imperialism have begun to adopt a menacing, insolent and provocative attitude" toward the weak nations to the south. But it warned that neutrality must be preserved and that "it will not be possible to plunge our American nations into a criminal war as the exploiters and oppressors of the world would do."

The climax in the switch from anti-German to pro-German policy came on December 31 when the labor paper, which since its inception had been exposing alleged Nazi activities, announced to its readers that it would henceforth use the Transocean News Service, which is subsidized by the German government. This was being done, it lamely explained, in order to give a balanced picture of international events.

The change in the labor front has been so abrupt and so uncompromising that it has caused confusion, and more recently, resentment here. The Mexican laborer is asking why he should love his enemy of yesterday, and what about Finland? That little republic is at least as much admired here as it is in other freedom loving nations and it continues to grow as a symbol of courage and hatred for oppression.

THE BASIC psychology of the Mexican people is one which rallies to the support of the underdog. Mexico has herself suffered invasion and exploitation from stronger nations and her sympathies are quickly expressed for weak nations in a similar plight. At Geneva and through the foreign office here Mexico has warmly supported the causes of Ethiopia, Spain and Czecho-Slovakia. Her aid to Spain was not only moral but material and she has since admitted thousands of Spanish refugees who fled to France after the Franco victory.

The official policy on Finland is clearly one of sympathy. Immediately after the Russian invasion was begun President Cardenas issued a declaration of solidarity with the Finnish nation and called upon all democratic nations to rally behind the Finnish cause. Mexican people's warm sympathy for the Finns was demonstrated during a moving scene at a Sunday bull fight when contributions for aid to Finland was asked. The response was immediate and while money was tossed to the solicitors shouts of "Viva Finlandia" were heard throughout the crowd of 20,000 spectators.

Another factor of basic importance in the phychological reaction of the Mexicans is rooted in the instinctive and intense dislike for any foreign influence in national affairs. This has been demonstrated again and again, in the revolt against Spain in 1810, in the driving out of the French who came with Maximilian, and in recent years in the antagonism to foreign capital, whatever its origin, when the Mexicans began to feel that it was having undue political influence.

EXPOSURE of the labor front's affiliation with Communist doctrines and practices, which has been so clearly demonstrated in its present propaganda drive, accordingly meets a cold reception here. Asking the Mexican worker to swallow the myth of Finland's "aggression" and of the Soviet Union's benevolent objectives is carrying the matter a little too far and in this, as in other matters, the Mexicans have an almost ruthless realism.

There has been a growing antagonism to labor abuses here within the last year. Lombardo Toledano has been constantly under attack and early in February was hissed and jeered from the platform at a convention of the powerful railway workers' union. Outlying unions are withdrawing from the C. T. M. and its power will be definitely put to the test in the coming presidential elections. While the surface reason for these splits is attributed to internal political conflict the deeper underlying cause is found in the unpopularity of the Communist Party line which the C. T. M. and its leader are following.

It is always pertinent to remember the national program here is one of "Mexico for the Mexicans." It means that no foreign doctrines will be permitted to intervene while the country is working out its intensive program for internal development. Neither communism, fascism nor nazism are welcome to the Mexican people and any leader or group attempting to implant them must inevitably face the deep-rooted distrust and dislike of the Mexican people.

Navy's $25-a-Ton Coal Plan Fails

Honolulu, Feb. 12, (AP).—Capt. Gerasimos Panas of the Greek freighter Christian Markettos doesn't think much of the coal (700 tons of it) he bought from the Navy for $25 a ton at Pearl Harbor.

In fact, after trying to get up steam for hours and hours, Panas says the stuff just "isn't coal" and won't produce enough heat to raise steam.

The Greek vessel, en route to Japan with scrapiron, was forced by a storm to put into Honolulu for fuel, but fuel is not available here.

At first the Navy refused to sell. Then a high price was placed on the fuel, which has been stored here for years since the N[illegible] no longer uses coal.

A wisp of smoke curled up from the Markettos. It was from the galley where the cook mixed wood with the coal.

President Roosevelt stood in silent tribute before the Lincoln Memorial yesterday and led the Nation in observance of the 131st anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln. At right, the President and his military aide, Brig. Gen. Edwin M. Watson. A crowd of 5,000 (top, right) attended the rites.

The presentation was made at the fair grounds, where Watson and several other executives of the corporation were guests of honor at a luncheon. It was announced that May 13—two days after the reopening of the fair—will be known as "IBM Day," with 9.000 employes expected to attend

Lenten Preparedness

RETIRING from the social arena for the observance of Lent, Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey will spend the next few weeks in laboratory work on several inventions that are expected to simplify social life.

Mrs. DeGoofey

The founder and president of the Do Something About It League announced at her press conference yesterday that her main research would be centered on a device to keep guests at large parties in constant circulation.

"Hostesses tell me," said Mrs. DeGoofey, "that their main problem at the mob tea, cocktail party or reception is to keep guests moving and to prevent their talking on subjects, or indulging in coherent conversation.

"I have also found that the main problem of the average guest is to make an escape from other guests after passing the time of day with them. For instance, suppose you are introduced and start conversation. Now after a couple of minutes you begin to feel guilty at talking so long with one person. But no one cuts in and there you are—stuck!

"Or suppose you meet a friend, start to chat, then see an acquaintance of more wealth or social prominence on the other side of the room. How are you to break away gracefully?

"Or, imagine yourself cornered with the ubiquitous Mrs. Dripp—that vague drab woman you meet everywhere you go, and whose name you never can recall. Now if you don't escape from that dilemma, you eventually will wind up as one of those social Girl Scouts who are asked to make the sandwiches or to take care of all the 'difficult' people."

Phony Plate Will Do the Trick

"Have you any type of invention in view to meet this problem, Mrs. DeGoofey" asked a science editor.

"Yes, I am working on a collapsible featherweight rubber plate that may be carried in the handbag or pocket, also some artificial canapes, sandwiches, etc, each with a bite taken out of them.

"Now my plan is this: Shortly after arriving at an event you start your rounds of the room carrying your rubber plate with your half sandwich, olive, caviar square or what-not—"

"Just a minute, Mrs. DeGoofey," interrupted a political columnist. "Won't you have anything to drink on your plate?"

"The waiters will attend to that—I trust. Now suppose you meet someone you don't particularly want to talk to. A minute later you may say, 'Pardon me I want to hear more about that—but let me get rid of this plate.' Presto, you vanish! Or, you may say, 'Pardon me, but I'm going to look for another Martini.'"

"But why not get a real plate—and real food?" asked a night club editor.

"Real plates are heavy and inconvenient. Besides, how can you ever be sure of getting near enough a refreshment table to lay hold on a real plate—or any real food. But a rubber plate would always be a sure bet. And no telling how much real food and drink you may be able to garner in if you go around carrying your plate prominently displayed."

Guests in a Hurry Who Never Leave

"But Mrs. DeGoofey," protested an etiquette editor, "what if, carrying your plate, you later encounter the guests you have left under guise of getting rid of it?"

"How will they know it is the same plate? Moreover, that is not nearly as embarrassing as the situations that arise now. Take, for instance, the guest who is always 'just about to go.' After you have been talking with her a couple of minutes, she looks uneasily about and remarks that she simply must get home because the maid's away or the house is on fire, or something. She breezes away and you continue to keep running on to her until the end of the affair when you find her helping the hostess check up on the spoons."

"What other inventions are you working on Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked a puzzle page editor.

"One is a red and green lighting system to aid corpulent guests in getting roadway and to prevent accidents when they back up. However, more of that anon. I shall report later on my other researches, one of which is on how to get up to meet the lion of the evening, and another on how to hold court or be the center of an admiring throng. Anyway, I hope to have everything in hand by the time the little season opens after Easter. But now you must excuse me as I am going to a party."

"But I thought you were observing Lent;" exclaimed a society editor.

Musician May Build Home About Her Art

Her Family May Be Enriched By Her Talent

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

THERE are so few musicians, among all those we've known, who achieve the heights of success, and anything less is nothing in this modern mechanized world. And so we remarked, to an editor friend, that it must certainly be the least satisfying of careers. My editor disagreed. After all, she said, a person with literary ambitions could so easily become content with a lucrative job writing ads for soup or soap, or an artist, once with eyes on the stars, might find a good life in drawing cars or cigarettes. But the trained musician, no matter how unsuccessful professionally, never loses touch with the immortals or communion with the sources of great music. Which explains why the true musician is nearly always a haunted soul. And explains also why he will always be the most fortunate of mortals.

Thinking thus reminded me of a former roommate of college days, a music student, whom I visited recently in her home. Although she had shown great promise, both as a composer and as a pianist, she was now quite settled into a suburban life, absorbed in the demanding job of being a doctor's wife and the mother of two boys. And yet I found her no placid matron. Still she was consumed with the music that had been born and bred in her; but I felt that she had achieved a rare outlet for her talents. Rather than feel frustrated by not having been able to realize her talents, she has poured her musicianship into her life and into the atmosphere of her home. And so music has become an important theme in the pattern of her family's life, too. Fortunately her husband is an appreciative patron of music and her sons have both "taken to" it, so that the emphasis is sympathetic.

Their living room is really arranged more as a music room with a piano as a center of interest. In this distinguished room for music, which is comfortable, too, for family evenings, my friend is, I believe, making as much of a musical contribution to her generation as many a professional performer.

Sausages, Lima Beans Make a Hearty Supper

Little link sausages, temptingly browned and nicely served, are just the right meat to serve for a hearty supper. They are so satisfying. Brown them first, then serve them on a casserole of baked beans, if you wish. Or cook lima beans in water until tender, season them with salt and pepper and a little grated onion, place them in a casserole dish, put browned pork sausage on top and heat through in a moderate oven. The sausages add a delicious flavor you are sure to enjoy.

Girl Loves Man Who Enjoys Her Company; Should She Reveal Her Heart to Him?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am dating a boy with whom I have fallen in love. He does not know that I love him. While I know that he is attracted to me and enjoys my company, I do not believe he is in love with me. How can I go about winning his love? Would it be inadvisable for me to tell him how I feel? Thank you for any advice. ANXIOUS.

DEAR ANXIOUS: The less you say about your feelings, the better the boy will like you. If he is a little shy and unsure of himself, let your warm interest shine through your eyes and actions, while you speak of other things. If he is an old hand with the ladies, keep the friendship rather impersonal, with emphasis on the great fun you have together.

There is no pat formula for winning someone's love. I think love "just happens," to a great extent; although propinquity, an attractive setting, and some effort and planning on both sides (of the "putting ones' best foot forward" variety) does hasten the inevitable, I suppose.

If you are willing to make a job of casting for his heart, study your man and figure out what qualities he most admires in a girl. Then try to acquire them—whether they be wit, popularity, style, etc., or serenity, understanding, encouragement and such like.

However, I predict you will come out just about as well, in the final analysis, by acting your natural self, letting the chips fall where they may. (But never talk about your feelings, unless the man bares his heart first).

M. H.

Boy Says He Loves Her; Can She Trust Him?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 16, very much in love with a boy 18 years of age. We have just recently started going together, although we had been acquainted a longer time. He says he cares for me; that he is really serious and I want to believe him, but it is impossible.

There are other girls who claim he is just as fond of them as he is of me. There is one girl in particular, whom I have known a long time, who tells me of dates she has had with him. But he denies her stories emphatically.

I don't know what to do. Should I believe what he tells me? Or should I just forget about him? Please help me solve my problem.

Well to Maintain Armor of Skepticism

DEAR E. L.: I have a hunch you should keep up your guard of skepticism with this young man. I think it is a necessary protective reaction—because, as the adage tells us, where there is smoke there is usually fire.

With several girls boasting of his tender protestations, you can be fairly sure that he has been around, delivering a line. If there were only one girl—or, at most, two—you might attribute such reports to jealousy or malice. But the consensus rumor suggests the famous saying: "Fifty million Frenchmen can't be wrong."

Yet, even if the stories are grossly exaggerated; or even if the young man does really mean (or think he means) what he is telling you, it will do no harm to pooh-pooh his assurances. Your merry disbelief of his gallant statements; your refusal to "fall" for his "line," will do more to stimulate his deeper interest than any other attitude you could take, at this time.

The man with a gift of blarney doesn't really want a girl to bank on it. He merely hopes it will please her ears—so don't refute this chap's statements in an unkind manner. Just thank him sweetly without taking it seriously. If you swallow it, hook-line-and-sinker, he will be bored and disappointed, and quickly off to other pastures, looking for a less impressionable girl.

Yet, if you love him too much to play a game with him, you had better dismiss him altogether. For a girl of 16 "very much in love" is rather at the mercy of her emotions, and cannot afford to let a play-boy trifle with her affections.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Writet her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

One-Two-Three-Four Cake—You'll Wish for More

VALENTINES are made to be looked at, and some made to be eaten. For the heart interest in your Valentine, food may be the thing, so here's a thought. I suggest a Valentine you can eat. Anyone who's had the fun of transforming everyday staples into a fluffy, tender cake can't resist reaching for a mixing bowl and spoon. Hearts and arrows may be used in the styling. Bake your favorite cake into a heart shape and add some festive touches, or ice your most esteemed layer cake and decorate it with tiny hearts.

An old-time favorite is still the excellent 1-2-3-4 Cake. It's an easy recipe to remember, too. "One" is for shortening and liquid, "two" for sugar, "three" for flour and "four" for eggs and baking powder. The cake is put together by the conventional cake method, with the egg whites folded in at the last. To bring the method up to date, beat ¼ cup of the sugar with the egg whites to be folded in last.

1-2-3-4 Cake

Cream 1 cup shortening and add 1¾ cups of sugar together until fluffy and light. Add 4 beaten egg yolks and 1 teaspoon flavoring extract and mix well. Sift together 3 cups sifted flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt, and add to the creamed mixture alternately with 1 cup milk. Beat 4 egg whites until light, then beat in ¼ cup sugar. Fold into batter. Bake in greased layer cake pans 20 to 25 minutes in moderate oven, 375 degrees. Yield: three 9-inch layers. Frost with favorite frosting.

Daily Dusting Aids Furniture

Daily dusting goes far in the care of your furniture. Paper dusters are very convenient as they may be discarded, after they are used. When using the vacuum cleaner, it is a simple matter to get out the upholstery tool and dust the upholstery of the furniture. Now and then, as they need it, tables and other wood surfaces should be polished.

First be sure the surface is clean, then apply the polish very sparingly and evenly; let it dry and polish to a soft gloss. When it comes to white spots or rings on furniture, prevention is easy but cure is difficult. Always use coasters under glasses on bare tables and wipe up drops of water or other beverages at once. Protect the dining room table from hot-dish marks by placing an asbestos mat under the linen directly beneath hot dishes.

To Remove Varnish

It is usually best to use an electric sanding machine for removing old varnish. This requires skill and should be done by an expert. When all the old varnish has been removed, and the floor is smooth, clean and dry, proceed as in varnishing a new floor.

Mrs. Roosevelt Talks At Noon Breakfast

President's Wife, at Annual Party Of Congressional Club, Describes Conditions in District Institutions

By Hope Ridings Miller.

MEMBERS OF THE Congressional Club assembled at their annual breakfast yesterday heard, first-hand, Mrs. Roosevelt's story on the District institutions she has investigated recently.

Before beginning her talk, following the noontime fete (and why is it called "breakfast" at that hour?) the First Lady, who was honor guest, asked how many in the crowd had visited the Home for the Aged at Blue Plains, the Children's Receiving Home, and the Industrial Home School. Not one hand went up, although the company included a representative number of Supreme Court and Cabinet hostesses, as well as wives of Representatives and Senators from every State.

HOPE R. MILLER

After giving a detailed description of conditions as she found them in the three institutions, the First Lady closed with a plea that everyone present "go and see for yourself." She added that while the blame could be placed on no one, something had to be done to improve the situation.

The serious talk climaxed a gay breakfast in the ballroom of the Hotel Raleigh. Lively music from the Marine Band Orchestra was followed by six numbers played by Reino Luoma, young Finnish-American pianist, who plans to start a Finnish benefit concert tour soon. Mr. Luoma who, after his last number, took a bow and gave an encore, was introduced by Mrs. Charles McLaughlin.

Mrs. Edward Burke, president of the club, received the honor guests in the adjoining drawing room before the breakfast began and also presided at the event. Her black ensemble was brightened with a corsage of camellias. Wives of Cabinet and Supreme Court members, past presidents of the Congressional Club, and a group of club members on the reception committee were in the company that filed into the dining room and found their places at the head table shortly after Mrs. Roosevelt arrived.

Luise Rainer Stops by Party

Before that, however, the honor guest group had the pleasure of meeting Miss Luise Rainer, screen star who is spending some time in Washington and will appear here this month in "Saint Joan." Pretty and petite, Miss Rainer was trimly turned out in a black velvet fitted coat and a peaked hood edged with sable to match her scarf.

American flags waved from the balcony of the ballroom and served as a background for the orchestra and the head table. Red and white carnations and blue sweet peas alternated with clusters of white tapers on the head table and centered the round tables that filled the spacious ballroom from one end to another.

Mrs. H. P. Fulmer Escorts First Lady

As usual with fetes held at the Hotel Raleigh, the breakfast moved along smoothly under the watchful eye of Col. C. C. Schifferler. From the minute Mrs. Roosevelt arrived and was escorted in by Mrs. Hampton P. Fulmer, until the party broke up an hour and a half later, there wasn't a single hitch in the procedure. Incidentally, Mrs. Roosevelt wore a frock of pencil blue crepe, trimmed with pearls, and a black felt beret pulled low on one side. A corsage of white orchids was pinned on her shoulder by Mrs. Ernest Lundeen. Mrs. Fulmer had chosen a black frock, and a gay cerise turban to match her corsage of camellias.

Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, wearing a dark red frock and a black hat, was among the honor guests; as were Mrs. Helen Fiske Stone, Mrs. Hugo Black, Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. Felix Frankfurter and Mrs. William O. Douglas, the latter of whom wore a snappy spring suit of dusty pink wool with a smart little black hat.

Mrs. William B. Bankhead, Mrs. Cordell Hull, and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau sent along regrets that they could not be present because of illness. Those from the Cabinet contingent present included Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mrs. Henry Wallace and Mrs. Harold Ickes.

Many Notables Seen in Crowd

Still others at the head table were Mrs. James F. Byrnes, Mrs. Daniel Reed, Mrs. Horace Towner, Mrs. Clarence E. Hancock, Mrs. Robert L. Doughton, Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, Mrs. Ewing Thomason, Mrs. J. R. Murdock, Mrs. Robert F. Rich and Mrs. Clyde Smith. Honor guests not at the head table were Mrs. George Calver, Mrs. James Shera Montgomery and Mrs. Ze Barney Phillips.

SEEN IN PASSING: Mrs. D. Worth Clark arriving with Mrs. John J. Dempsey, and the two chatting briefly with Miss Rainer. Mrs. Clark will be off this week for Tulsa, Okla., to visit her mother for several days . . . Mrs. William N. Doak, telling friends she is planning a visit to New York next week . . . Mrs. Harry Coffee, wearing a perky brown straw hat, trimmed in green wings, with a smart green suit, and introducing her mother, Mrs. Harvey Newbranch, who recently arrived here from Omaha . . . Mrs. Morris Sheppard's bright green turban, one of the prettiest hats there . . . Mrs. Richard Duncan, greeting guests at the door, and looking lovely in a black frock with crystal accents . . . Mrs. Joseph A. Herbert, jr., busy as a debutante, looking after her flock of pretty ushers . . . Mrs. Frank H. Buck among those present; also, Mrs. Sherman Minton, Mrs. Edward C. Moran, jr., Mrs. Charles March, Mrs. Karl Stefan, Mrs. Harry Englebright, Mrs. Thomas F. Ford and Mrs. Richard Kleberg—to mention but a few in the throng.

In the corps of ushers were Miss Charlotte King, Miss Gladys Kitchen, Miss Shirley Schafer, Mrs. Thomas D. Schall, jr., Miss Mary Park Clements and Miss Margaret D. Clements.

Mrs. Beesley Gives Tea

There were political parties galore yesterday to celebrate Lincoln's birthday, but a private tea held for the same reason was that given by Mrs. Thomas Quinn Beesley in honor of her house guest, Mrs. J. D. White, of Chicago and Fulton, Ky.

The hostess, who was entertaining at her first "at home" since her marriage last May, gave the party partly because Mr. Beesley's father was an acquaintance and early supporter of Abraham Lincoln at a time when his rival, Stephen A. Douglas, was the biggest power in Illinois and most people thought it foolhardy to advocate Mr. Lincoln.

Mrs. White, the honor guest, writes poems under a pen name which she keeps a close secret, and yesterday read some of her new verses not yet published. Spring flowers decorated Mrs. Beesley's Mayflower apartment, which is filled with Chinese, Japanese and Dutch paintings and prints which the hostess has collected in the Orient and in Europe.

Among those who called during the afternoon were Mrs. Joseph C. O'Mahoney, whose husband, Senator O'Mahoney, was best man at Mrs. Beesley's wedding; Representative Caroline O'Day, Mrs. James M. Mead, Mrs. Ralph E. Church, Mrs. Robert Ramspeck, Mrs. Francis Case, Mrs. Raymond S. McKeough, of Chicago, and Mrs. Sadie Orr Dunbar.

Also Mrs. Oswald F. Schuette, who was matron of honor at the Beesley wedding; Mrs. Schuette's sister, Mrs. John J. Shugrue; Mrs. William J. Flather, Mrs. Milton W. King, Mrs. Lawrence A. Baker, Mrs. Carl J. Baer, Mrs. Fanni Knight, Mrs. Wayne Parrish and Mrs. J. J. Pelley.

Mrs. Roosevelt, Widow of Teddy, Visits in South

Mrs. Edith Kermit Roosevelt, widow of President Theodore Roosevelt, has left her home in Oyster Bay, L. I., to spend several weeks in Camden, S. C. She is accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Richard Derby.

On the observance of Lincoln's birthday Mrs. Roosevelt is fond of recalling that one of her most prized possessions is a ring containing a lock of Lincoln's hair, obtained by John Hay, his secretary, who later became Secretary of State. The night before President Theodore Roosevelt was inaugurated on March 4, 1905, Mr. Hay, who became head of the Roosevelt Cabinet, presented the ring to his chief.

Mitchell, Mrs. Corcoran Thom, Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mrs. Charles Carroll Morgan and Mrs. Howard Davidson. The artist has done eleven portraits for the Howard Davidson family.

Sponsors for the exhibit include Mrs. Ickes, Mrs. Lawrence A. Baker, Mrs. Bishop Hill, Mrs. Morgan, Mrs. Sidney Thomas, Mrs. James H. Turner, Mrs. Kenneth Holland, Mrs. Mitchell, Miss Helen S. Jones, Mrs. John Ihlder, Mrs. Davidson and Mrs. Dunn.

In private life, Mrs. Algernon Binyon, Miss Bean has studied with John S. Sargent, and has also been a pupil of William M. Chase, of New York, and B. J. Blommers, of Holland. She is now living in the fifth house she has remodeled in Georgetown and says she is home for good after two years of travel and exhibitions from Florida to Wisconsin.

Examples of Miss Bean's work are owned by J. P. Morgan, Mrs. Peter Augustus Jay, Mrs. Dwight Morrow, Mrs. John B. Thayer 3d, Herbert L. Satterlee and Mrs. Jay Carlisle.

However, between now and next Sunday, the First Lady will negotiate a schedule which will earn her a rest, indeed. Professional Writers Hear Radio Script Talk

Members of the Professional Writers Club were taken behind the scenes of the broadcasting industry in Miss Alice Keith's talk on "Radio Script Writing" at the club's February meeting at the Y. W. C. A. last night.

Miss Keith, director of the National Institute of Broadcasting, said prospective pupils often ask her if she can "get them on the radio in ten weeks." Such people don't grasp the size of the broadcasting business, she said.

About the Town with DUDLEY HARMON

Some Sing 'Happy Birthday, Dear Tories,' As John Lewis, Mrs. Longworth Celebrate

PEOPLE ARE STILL talking about:

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth's party on Sunday for the best known party-giver of them all, Elsa Maxwell. . . . The guests' rendering of "Happy Birthday, Dear John and Alice" when they discovered that both John L. Lewis and his hostess were celebrating. . . . Later on several waggishly inclined friends changing the chant to "Happy Birthday, Dear Tories!" . . . Elsa Maxwell rising to a no-cake emergency and bringing in an enormous round cheese with one candle ablaze in the middle.

Among those present: Mrs. Vincent Astor, who had flown from New York just to hear Elsa speak at the Town Hall meeting preceding Mrs. Longworth's party. . . . Mr. and Mrs. George A. Garrett, who gave a dinner for the famous hostess last night. . . . Mrs. Richard V. Oulahan, Town Hall director, telling friends about the Friday morning series which begins this week. . . . Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock, who got up out of a flu-bed to be present. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Krock, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hinton, and dozens of others.

Note: During Elsa's lectures, the elegants gave only rather tired smiles at her platform witticisms, but the rest of the audience went wild about her.

"Isn't she darling!" whispered one intellectual looking woman. "Look, she's got make-up on," hoarsely muttered another. "Don't you just love her" was heard in a chorus from several rather quiet looking old ladies in black.

MRS. GEORGE T. PETTENGILL'S gay tea dance for her attractive niece, Peggy Wagner (who would rather be called Margaret, but never is). . . . The "Gone With the Wind" decorations in the Sail Loft reminding one guest that two girls in his Government office had asked for a day's annual leave to see THAT MOVIE. . . .

The boxes put up in the Sail Loft for the Navy Relief ball earlier in the week being grandly occupied by Mrs. Pettengill's guests . . . Eleanor Flood and Charles Gaines holding a tete-a-tete conversation in one, while John Galliher, Peggy Townsend and Florence Downs sat in another . . . At a table in the other room the hostess relaxing with Mrs. Wallach Merriam, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, the Marquis de Zahara of the Spanish Embassy and Roberto Mendoza of Cuba . . . Mrs. Anthony Rumbold, one of the few "marrieds" at the party . . . and loads of young people lingering on until nearly 8 o'clock.

It's been a number of years since sails were made in the Sail Loft, which is now used mostly for Navy parties. Marines stationed at every corner of the Yard directed the guests to the huge red brick building, and sailors inside to check wraps added a touch not found at civilian affairs.

THAT HANDSOME and popular diplomatic couple, the Secretary of the Italian Embassy and Countess Roberti, have been ordered to Mexico. They will leave in about three weeks for their new post, where Count Roberti will serve as first secretary. Every few weeks for the past two years it's rumored that the Robertis were about to be transferred, but this time it's really true, much to the regret of their friends.

OFF FOR FLORIDA tomorrow is Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr. . . . A popular Navy couple, at the Lafayette for a week, are Capt. and Mrs. William J. Zalesky. Former Washington residents, they are now stationed at Portsmouth, N. H.

Capital Society Treks Southward

Just as December is the month of debutantes and January the month of dinners in Capital society, February is the period for going South. Among the many who have left for warmer climes is the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu-Shih, who is visiting Col. and Mrs. Isaac Newell at Sea Island, Ga.

At Jekyll Island, another famous Georgia resort, Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding, of Washington, have arrived to join a colony which includes the Argentine envoy and Senora de Espil, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss and Mr. and Mrs. Alanson Houghton. The Chinese Ambassador and the Espils are expected back next week.

Stephen T. Early, secretary to the President, is now in Miami, but will return in a few days. He has been a frequent visitor to the Hialeah track, and lunched there the other day with Mrs. Edward J. Kelly, wife of Chicago's mayor, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Butcher, of Washington, and Mr. and Mrs. Royce Martin, of Chicago.

Also in Miami are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Jones, of Washington, who are visiting the former's brother and sister-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. Walter C. Jones. The Treasurer of the United States and Mrs. William Julian are also in Miami.

Miss Marion N. Cocran, Mrs. Alice E. Seims and Miss Eva B. McSherry, of Washington are in Miami again after a trip to Havana by clipper. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lee Roberts, of the Capital, arrived in the Florida resort for several weeks at the Venetian Hotel.

WPA Is Affirmation of U. S. Belief In Peace, University Women Told

Mrs. Kerr Addresses District Branch At Monday Tea

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Mrs. Florence Kerr, assistant commissioner of the Work Projects Administration, addressing members of the local branch of the American Association of University Women at their Monday tea, yesterday asserted that WPA projects of all kinds were "an important affirmation of our American belief in work—in peace and in the capacities of a democracy to produce and distribute the good things of life to all the people."

"If it is the obligation of our Government to help create full economic opportunity in America, then I think we must not be discouraged because complete success has not yet crowned our efforts. The grim alternative to full employment in the constructive works of peace will ultimately be—here as elsewhere throughout the world—full employment in the destructive works of war," she warned. "And the costs of our constructive efforts in the works of peace are small indeed in comparison to the infinite and tragic costs of war, which we will have to bear if we fail or falter in our present efforts, as Europe before us has faltered and failed.

"Ever since the war started in Europe last fall, many sections of the American public have had large expectations of an immensely increased prosperity from war orders and increased foreign trade," she said. "I did not believe in these prospects last fall; and although I have rejoiced in such business expansion as has occurred in our domestic production and trade, I do not believe in those prospects now. I do not share the overweening confidence of those who believe that we can build an American prosperity on the miseries of war-torn Europe. And I shall not pretend that I think we are going to be able to dispense with a large program of public work for the unemployed in the near future.

"In the District of Columbia, since the WPA program has been in operation, the grocers and other food merchants have sold about $9,000,000 worth of food to WPA workers," she said. "This estimate is based on our own WPA wage-figures, and on studies of how the low-income groups which include WPA workers spend their family income.

"Thus, to a significant extent, our neediest jobless workers remain customers of American industry and business. Back in depression days it was not so. And American industry and business felt the lack of those customers. When our jobless workers and desperate farmers fell over the economic precipice, they dragged American industry and business over with them.

"It is not in the United States alone that this problem of general unemployment exists. It has existed increasingly for more than a quarter of a century all over that part of the world in which modern industry has been built up. Widespread and increasing unemployment existed before the last World War, and had much to do with bringing it about. War has not solved that problem for any nation, it has only made things worse all over the world." Mrs. Kerr declared "the situation today is that war is becoming the chief employer of mankind. War has an unlimited use for everybody—first in manufacturing the implements of death, and then in using them.

"Our own Nation has rejected, and I hope and trust will continue to reject, this desperate solution of the unemployment problem. It has been our belief, and I hope it will continue to be our belief, that the purposes of peace can provide full employment for our hands and minds. But if we really believe this, then we must prove it. Peace cannot long or successfully compete with war if peace cannot offer the full employment that war always offers. For war is an employer that never takes down its 'Men Wanted' sign.

"The question of a WPA job for an unemployed and destitute musician, clerk, teacher, nurse or draftsman is more than a question of figures in the budget of a fiscal year. It is a question of what kind of civilization we have, what kind of civilization we want, what kind of civilization we are willing to struggle for and hand on to our children. If this is indeed a dying civilization, if we have no hope for the future, if it is not worth while to make any effort, then what we are doing in our WPA projects has no significance. But if we believe in the future, if we have faith in democracy, if we are working together in the common cause of a better America, then our humblest WPA projects are at once an act of faith and a practical contribution to the cause that we serve."

Historian Defends Lincoln's Wife In Talk to Dames of Loyal Legion

Dr. Lewis Warren Credits Mary Todd With Developing Emancipator's Finer Traits of Character; Col. Robert Arthur Traces Army's Growth

Dr. Lewis Warren, historian and director of the Lincoln National Life Foundation at Fort Wayne, Ind., yesterday spoke in defense of Mary Todd Lincoln, in his address at the annual breakfast of the Dames of the Loyal Legion, celebrating Lincoln's Birthday. The breakfast was held at the Mayflower, with Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker, the president, presiding, and Col. Robert Arthur, of the War College, as the other speaker.

Dr. Warren traced the history of the Todd family from the time of the Revolution in which several of Mary Todd's ancestors served as officers. With good family background, education and social standing, he said, she exerted great influence in Lincoln's life, developing his finer traits of character and encouraging his growth in dignity.

Underwood & Underwood

MRS. MARY LOGAN TUCKER

Despite her high temper, which was a characteristic of her family, he gave her credit for spurring Lincoln to some of his great accomplishments. He also credited her with being a good mother to her children, whose training was rseponsible largely for the attainments of her son, Robert.

Col. Arthur discussed the Army at the time of the Civil War and that of today. The lesson learned then, of need for preparedness is largely responsible for the effort today to maintain a force necessary for the adequate defense of the country, he said. In 1861, when there was almost no Federal Army, one had to be trained and equipped in the midst of war operations.

The program also included music by an orchestra from the Navy Band, led by Joseph Ratner, who also played violin solos.

Mme. Cantacuzene and Mrs. Harriet Rigdon, both past national presidents, were guests of honor.

The organization is composed of women whose fathers or husbands were Union officers in the Civil War. Mrs. Tucker is the daughter of Gen. John A. Logan and Mme. Cantacuzene the granddaughter of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant. Also present was Mrs. Samuel Reber, daughter of Gen. Nelson A. Miles.

Another guest was Miss Katherine Thomas, whose father, Capt. George Thomas, was appointed by President Lincoln as commander of the Militia of the District of Columbia and who was designated by Gen. Winfield Scott to administer the oath of allegiance to the soldiers here and those who passed through Washington. She had with her the Bible which he used when the oath was administered.

There were 65 guests at the breakfast.

Democrats Hear Mrs. Shenefield

The main danger to the democratic tradition in this country is that we may lose our sympathy and forget "how the other half lives," Mrs. Hale T. Shenefield told members of the Woman's National Democratic Club yesterday at their Monday luncheon.

Discussing the liberal democratic tradition, with its emphasis on the Christian view of the worth of every individual, in contrast to Communist and Fascist doctrines which sacrifice the individual to the state, she urged that America concern itself with its internal problems.

We cannot neglect our youth, she said, smugly deny the existence of conditions which disturb our complacency or drift into a repression of any contrary ideas expressed by those who may disagree.

"We have our very destiny in our own hands. It will be determined by the ideals we hold to, the destiny we desire. Our ideals will amount to little, however, unless we act and act courageously, sincerely, nobly. We must continue to stand up and speak out our thoughts, boldly affirm our convictions on the issues of our time and our proposals for meeting theb," she said.

The Woman's National Democratic Club faces a busy week with several other prominent speakers, also scheduled. Mrs. Florence Kerr, Assistant Commissioner, Works Projects Administration, will speak at the information meeting of the public speaking class at 11 a. m. Thursday. Her subject will be "Relief and Unemployment." This morning, Mrs. Helen Moodie will conduct the public speaking class which takes up "The Persuasive Speech."

The Washington Alumnae Chapter of Chi Sigma Sorority last night held a banquet at the Hay-Adams House, celebrating the fourth anniversary of the chapter's founding. Miss Anne Boettcher was chairman of the affair, at which 75 members and guests were present.

Mrs. Dorothy Wills Atchison, chapter president, presided during the dinner program. It included sketches and songs by Miss Priscilla Hixon Bogue and Mrs. Emma Lou Richards.

Among the guests were two past national presidents, Mrs. Peggy Schweinhaut and Mrs. Dorothea Robertson, and national officers including Mrs. Loretta McCleary, secretary, and Miss Marjory Mertz, province president. Most of the members attending were alumnae of the sorority who belonged to active Washington chapters, making the occasion a reunion.

Capper Says Roosevelt Imperils U. S.

Implies President Thinks Himself Only Man Qualified to Lead

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Feb. 12.—President Roosevelt was characterized as "the most dangerous man to the welfare of the people of America today" in a Lincoln Day speech prepared for delivery tonight by United States Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas.

"The most dangerous leader of any people is the leader who believes he, and he alone, is qualified for leadership," Capper said. "And that is why Franklin D. Roosevelt, with all his charm, with all his genuine desire to better the lot of the people of the United States and of the world, is the most dangerous man to the welfare of the people of America today."

Capper told the Alexander Hamilton G. O. P. Club:

"We today are facing much the same struggle that Abraham Lincoln faced in his day and generation—to guard and maintain the freedom of men's souls, the freedom of their intellects, their freedom of action, in a world that is distraught with fears, beset by evil forces, bedeviled with false prophets who believe themselves divinely endowed with gifts of leadership granted to no others of their generation."

Sees Supreme Struggle

The veteran Kansas legislator envisioned the United States "as well as the Old World, facing a supreme struggle in world democracy . . . government by dictatorship is not new. It is older than the doctrine of the divine right of kings; old as the false doctrine that might makes right.

"Government by dictatorship today has evolved a different technique. First the people are deprived of freedom of choice through being cajoled or purchased, or coerced into surrendering their individual liberty to the control of the party or the group—seduced by the promise that in return for the surrender of their liberty they will be given security.

"Liberty is worth more than the mere promise of security . . . is the unemployed man secure, except in the assurance of unemployment? Is the farmer secure, except in the assurance that his income is insufficient to supply his wants; is the investor secure, except in the assurance that if his investment return him an income, that income will be subject to continually increasing taxes by his government? . . .

If Lincoln Were Alive . . .

"If the American people trade their liberty for the promise of security, their children will have neither liberty nor security."

If alive today, he asserted, Lincoln "would no more favor one-man rule than he would approve the dictatorships of Europe. He believed in the freedom of individual initiative. He believed in the Union—but I challenge anyone to produce a sentence from Lincoln which indicated he believed in destroying the power of the States to build up a central Federal Government at the expense of the States."

Capper declared that "during seven years President Roosevelt and the New Deal have not solved a single one of the problems for which solutions were promised when he came into power."

F. T. C. Complaint on Liquor Resale Prices Answered

Milton S. Kronheim, one of six Washington wholesale liquor dealers concerned, declared late yesterday that resale price maintenance practices against which the Federal Trade Commission had issued an order earlier in the day, had not been followed by his company for more than a year.

No statement could be obtained from five other wholesalers, or two associations also named in the order, together with the secretary of one of the associations.

"Having been put on notice with the filing of the original complaint," Kronheim stated, "the practices were immediately abandoned."

What F. T. C. Charged

The commission had charged that "to carry out their resale price maintenance policies, the respondent wholesale dealers entered into unlawful contracts, agreements and understandings with the retail dealers, and that, pursuant to such contracts and agreements, for the purpose of maintaining uniform minimum resale prices of alcoholic beverages sold by various retail dealers in the District of Columbia, the respondent wholesalers, their association, the retailer association and its members, and Manuel J. Davis, have:

Appointed committees and joint committees to confer with the respondent associations, and by means of unlawful pressure, influence, coercion, boycotts and threats of boycotts, demanded and obtained from distiller-sellers and distributors outside the District, and from each other, the adoption and maintenance of systems or policies of merchandising, fixing standard uniform minimum resale prices, discounts and 'mark-ups' at which alcoholic beverages were resold by wholesalers and retail dealers in commerce in the District of Columbia."

Respondent Concerns

Respondents named in the commission's ordere were: Milton S. Kronheim & Son, Inc., 3301 K street northwest; Marvin & Snead Sales Corporation, 219 G street northwest; International Distributing Corporation, 917 E street northwest; Washington Wholesale Liquor Corporation, 1119 Twenty-first street northwest; Globe Distributing Co., Inc., 2410 Eighth place northeast; Philip Hurwitz and Leon Samet, trading as Roma Wine & Liquor Co., 1006 Fifth street northwest; Wholesale Liquor Dealers of Washington, Fifteenth and K streets northwest; D. C. Exclusive Retail Liquor Dealers Association, 829 Woodward Building, and Manuel J. Davis, secretary and attorney for the retailers' association.

District Mails First Auto Tag Application Forms

The first of 165,000 application blanks for 1940-41 auto tags were mailed to District motorists yesterday.

William A. Van Duzer, traffic director, said all application blanks for tag renewals will be in the mail within 10 days. Mail distribution of the new plates will begin Thursday, he announced, and over-the-counter sales will start February 26 at the Traffic Department.

Although present licenses don't expire until midnight March 31, car owners may attach their new tags after March 1, Van Duzer said. He gave his annual warning that there will be no extension of time for current plates and advised motorists who plan to purchase tags at the Traffic Department to "come early and avoid the rush."

U. S. ANTARCTIC EXPEDITION OFF FOR YEAR'S SURVEY

SLED DOGS... YEAR'S SUPPLY OF SLOW-BURNING CAMEL CIGARETTES ACCOMPANY ADMIRAL BYRD TO ANTARCTIC

OFF TO VOLUNTARY EXILE: If you were leaving today to live for a whole year on the barren ice of the Antarctic, and if right now you had to choose the one and only brand of cigarette you would smoke through those months—you'd make sure you picked the right brand. The men on the Antarctic expedition were in a situation like that. The picture above shows what happened: The expedition took Camels! Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, commanding, explained: "Slow-burning Camels are a great favorite with us. You can be sure we have plenty." You, yourself, may never go near the South Pole, but the right cigarette is important to you, too. Camels are made from finer, more expensive tobaccos. They give you extra mildness, extra coolness, and extra flavor—plus extra smoking in every pack. (See below.)

"MORE PLEASURE PER PUFF...MORE PUFFS PER PACK"...

That's how these three members of the U. S. Antarctic expedition tell of the advantages of their favorite cigarette... slow-burning Camels. Richard Moulton, senior dog-driver (center), sums up when he says: "Slow burning is my measure of a milder, cooler, more flavorful smoke. I'd sledge a mile for a Camel." Nothing destroys a cigarette's delicate elements of flavor and fragrance like the excess heat of too-fast burning. Cigarettes that burn fast also burn hot. Camels are slower-burning... milder, mellower, and—naturally—cooler! Try Camels. Find out for yourself how slow-burning Camels give you more pleasure per puff... and more puffs per pack—more actual smoking (see right).

In recent laboratory tests, CAMELS burned 25% slower than the average of the 15 other of the largest-selling brands tested—slower than any of them. That means, on the average, a smoking plus equal to

Citizens Ask New School In Southeast

Northeast Group Urges Replacing Portable Structure In Randle Highlands

A resolution urging school authorities to provide a schoolhouse to replace the present portable North Randle Highlands structure, at Minnesota avenue and E street southeast, was adopted last night by the Northeast Washington Citizens Association.

The large attendance, meeting at the Ludlow School, Sixth and G streets northeast, also voted to commend The Washington Post for an article describing the possibilities of the proposed Anacostia parkway.

A resolution calling the attention of authorities to the District's snow removal system, and especially that snow was not removed from fire plugs after last month's 9½-inch snowfall, was approved. A motion was voted asking officials to regrade the walks in Stanton Park, Sixth street and Massachusetts avenue northeast.

Among pending bills affecting the District which the association approved in principle were these:

Construction of recreational facilities in Anacostia Park; giving of liens to garages on cars for repairs or storage in certain cases; changing of the types of deposits for life insurance companies; regulation of the practice of dentistry; refund of fees for car inspection in certain cases.

Disapproval was voted of a proposal to charge no tuition for children of nonresidents who work in the District and wish their children to attend District schools.

John R. Jerrell, 808 East Capitol street, was admitted to membership.

West End

The West End Citizens Association last night unanimously went on record urging the Public Utilities Commission and the Fine Arts Commission to "compel removal of all properties of the Washington Gas Light Co." from their present location in Northwest.

President Walter F. Wasson declared "the gas tanks and accessory machinery are "the only thing holding back this section of the city."

The association also adopted the recent resolution of the Federation of Churches asking the Commissioners to investigate the District liquor situation.

The unit advocated an ordinance compelling local property owners to clean the snow from sidewalks fronting their property and asked increased space for car impoundage at the Third Precinct Station.

Paul R. Rapp and Mr. and Mrs. Warren A. Gardner were elected members.

National Gateway

A resolution favoring an elective city council for the District was adopted last night by the National Gateway Citizens Association. Another resolution urged that payments on the District income tax be made semiannually or quarterly.

The organization voiced opposition to the Tydings bill, which would further extend District school privileges to residents of Maryland and Virginia.

Mrs. Marie Cuthbertson Nold was appointed chairman of a special bus transportation committee, and Walter S. Ahlberg, head of the public utilities committee. Kenneth Armstrong spoke for the District Suffrage Association. The following new members were inducted: J. W. Speer, E. J. Ruffner, W. E. Catterton, Frank Cardwell, William R. Moore, H. J. Ruadenbush and Mrs. Donald Nash.

Hillcrest Citizens

A dispensary system for liquor sales in the District was indorsed last night by the Hillcrest Citizens Association, which adopted a resolution opposing Representative Randolph's proposal for an additional 1-cent gasoline tax to replace the District income tax.

Action of the Southeast Council of Citizens Associations in pressing for winter sports facilities in Fort Dupont Park was indorsed. A report was received from Samson Bass, chairman of the committee on schools, proposing efforts to procure funds for a new school building to replace Stanton School, and Bass was instructed to confer with the Federation of Citizens Associations and the District Commissioners.

Motion and still pictures of prewar Spain were exhibited by Clarence Phillips. Admission of two new members and reinstatement of ten members were announced.

Burleith

Rufus S. Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers Association, last night attacked proposals to amend the District Unemployment Compensation Act before the meeting of the Burleith Citizens Association.

"The new act," Lusk said, "will cause District taxpayers to pay an outrageous price in the form of increased benefits." The proposed new benefits, he said, would "make it more profitable for an untold number of workers to loaf rather than work."

Piney Branch Citizens

A request for Concrete loading platforms at bus stops north of Florida avenue on Sixteenth street northwest was made last night by the Piney Branch Citizens Association.

The association requested traffic lights at the corners of Upshur street, at Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets and Georgia avenue northwest. There was a discussion of the problem of snow removal.

Park View Citizens

The Park View Citizens Association last night requested the District government to investigate the sale of alcoholic beverages. The meeting was at the Park View School.

Senator Talks At Banneker Dedication

Capt. Person Presents Building, Mrs. Doyle Makes Acceptance

Dedicatory exercises were held last night at Banneker Junior High School, Ninth and Euclid streets northwest. Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, and Dr. Ambrose Caliver, Interior Department specialist in education, spoke.

The building was presented by Capt. J. L. Person, Assistant Engineer Commissioner, and accepted, on behalf of the Board of Education, by Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle. Music was furnished by the Howard University Glee Club under direction of Roy Wilfrid Tibbs. Dr. Garnet C. Wilkinson, assistant superintendent of schools, presided.

Costing $884,730, the building was opened to 742 students in November. It is a three-story brick edifice, containing a double gymnasium, automatic shades, indirect lighting, stationary desks, cafeteria and hospital room, and is wired for broadcasting. It occupies a portion of the original Banneker playground.

Exercises incident to the dedication will continue throughout the week. A pageant, "Out of the Dark," by Dorothy Guinn, will be presented this afternoon at 12:30 o'clock in the school auditorium and repeated Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Velma Williams, member of the Board of Education, will preside at exercises incident to Negro History Week, tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock when Dr. Rayford Logan and Mrs. Clara Burrill Bruce will make addresses.

A short play, "Uplifting Sadie," will be presented Friday night by the Little Theater of Miner Teachers College, under direction of Dr. Francis Gregory.

Capital News In Brief

Bullet Enters Boudoir

Surprise is a mild word to describe the feelings of Mrs. Leslie Carter yesterday when a bullet burst through her window as she was dressing in her third-floor apartment at 2121 Virginia avenue northwest, and imbedded itself in the wall near the ceiling.

Mrs. Carter, whose husband is a petty officer in the Navy, took the incident calmly, and called police to investigate.

The bullet, she found, came from the gun of Private J. E. Stabler of the Third Precinct, who was pursuing a colored man. Private Stabler tripped and fell, the gun went off as it struck the pavement, and the policeman suffered bruises and brush burns. Mrs. Carter was unhurt.

Steal Melody 'n' All

Life is just a melody for two youths who hit a new high yesterday in petty thievery.

Robert E. Kelly reported to police the youths drove up in a truck to his place at 3726 Tenth street northeast and announced they were sent to replace his nickel-operated phonograph. They loaded Kelly's music box into their truck, he said, and carted it off. He has seen nothing of boys or music box since.

The machine, he said, was valued at $350, not counting whatever nickels may have been fed to its melodious innards.

Mrs. Roosevelt Tells Club D. C. Should Set Welfare Lead

Washington should be "a place from which the rest of the Nation could draw inspiration" for its institutions of public care, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said last night at the forty-third annual banquet of the Monday Evening Club. The organization met at Hotel 2400 Sixteenth Street.

"The flutter we have been having in the last few days," Mrs. Roosevelt said, alluding to investigations of conditions following her surprise visits to three institutions here, "is just a drop in the bucket to the steady work your group has been doing. But it may stir up a lot of people who never have been stirred up before; there is a big group of people who never have had very much consciousness of what has been happening in District institutions."

Mrs. Roosevelt repeated a suggestion, made earlier yesterday, that wives of members of Congress on District committees act as their "eyes" and "go and see and report" conditions as they are.

"I don't know what should be done," she said, "I'm not an expert on District government. But I'm sure if Congress and the District government have the will to improve things there must be a way, and between them they will find a way."

Introduced by Toastmaster Ray Everett, secretary of the Social Hygiene Society of Washington, as "First Lady of the Humanities, if she lived at 1600 Pennsylvania avenue or on the other side of the tracks," Mrs. Roosevelt scoffed at the idea of communism in the Youth Congress which ended a conference here yesterday. She sat with the organization during most of its deliberations.

"If you had sat through all of its sessions," she said, "you would have felt that there was a great deal that was bad and some quite foolish. Yet it was quite extraordinary that some 6,000 young people scraped up the money—and many of them literally scraped it up—to come to Washington and say what are conditions they would like to see changed and listen by the hour to other young people.

"I am sorry so much talk centered about communism among them. I felt that the vast majority of those who came here were not interested in that question; they were interested in how they were going to get jobs. That is not an academic question with them; it is really vital."

Judge Fay L. Bentley presided and introduced the toastmaster. Mrs. Roosevelt was escorted to her place by Dr. James Lewald, vice president of the club, and Mrs. Ray Everett, chairman of the dinner committee.

At the speakers' table were former presidents of the club, including Dr. and Mrs. Walter Ufford, Dorsey Hyde, Miss Katharine Lenroot, Leifur Magnusson and Capt. Rhoda Milliken.

In the receiving line at a reception which preceded the dinner were Dr. Lewald, George Warren, second vice president; Miss K. Virginia Timmons, treasurer, and Mrs. Josephine Prescott, Dr. Paul Ewerhardt, Mrs. James Feiser, Magnusson and Dr. Ufford, directors.

The Beady-eyed Bandit

2 Men Held for Investigation as Police Press Widespread Hunt for Elusive Terror

Two small colored men were held last night for investigation as disgruntled police pushed their campaign to snare the "beady-eyed" burglar who has caused much excitement and considerable fright in a wide section of the Northwest section for more than a month.

The burglar, believed by police to be a narcotics addict, has entered so many homes, has attempted to enter so many others, and has menaced so many women that special details of police, afoot and in cars, have carried on a constant search for him.

Many officers have worked overtime and on their days off seeking him. Bernard W. Thompson, chief of inspectors, has posted a $25 reward for whoever makes the capture.

Nearly a dozen men, picked up on suspicion, have been released. The two arrested last night are held for investigation, and will appear in line-ups today at police headquarters, 462 Indiana avenue northwest, and the Second Precinct, 912 U street northwest.

A number of householders have been burning yard lights all night for the last two weeks as a precaution against the burglar, who sometimes has tussled with women who have surprised him in their homes or apartments. Sometimes he appears during the day, more often at night. Once he entered four homes in a single day.

In few cases has he obtained anything of value. He usually is described as being light skinned, mustached, about 5 feet 5 inches tall, and "intelligent looking."

Homes he actually has entered, apart from attempted entries for which he is blamed, are the following:

January 2—1020 Nineteenth street northwest; frightened away by Mrs. John Guernsey.

January 23—Also 1020 Nineteenth street northwest; threw Charlotte G. Bowman to floor and ran.

January 30—2101 New Hampshire avenue northwest; took pocketbook of Mrs. Margaret Dorsey as Mrs. Dorsey played cards with a visitor, Mrs. Robert A. Taft, wife of the Ohio Senator.

January 31—1920 Twenty-third street northwest; home of Robert Brennan, Minister of Ireland; threatened Mrs. Brennan with blackjack, escaped with a suit of the minister's.

January 31—1954 Columbia road northwest; surprised by Miss Stella DeBarr, who struggled with him, scratched his lip before he escaped.

January 31—2123 Eighteenth street northwest; frightened away by Miss Beatrice Frankle, who noticed his lip was bleeding.

January 31—1821 Sixteenth street northwest; frightened away by screams of Miss Bernice Tanner.

February 3—1616 Sixteenth street northwest; escaped after struggle with Miss Margaret Mizner.

February 8—2222 S street northwest, home of David A. Reed, former Pennsylvania Senator; cut maid with knife, escaped.

February 9—1821 Wyoming avenue northwest; escaped after struggling for several minutes with Miss Margaret Welsh.

A lock at the home of Spencer Gordon, 2305 California street northwest, was tampered with January 25, but entry was not gained.

Meanwhile, two colored gunmen last night netted $18 in a grocery store holdup while another bandit fled empty handed when his intended victim cracked down with a box of cakes.

George Aed reported to police he was in his store at 901 S street northwest when a shabbily dressed colored man, badly in need of a shave, entered, ordered a half dozen eggs and flourished a pistol. Instead of raising his hands, Aed heaved a box of cakes at the bandit, who fled without pressing the matter further.

Louis Glazer, in a grocery at 1651 Eleventh street northwest, handed over $18 to two gunmen. He said they wore red handkerchiefs.

Bondy Asks Rise in Funds For Relief

Welfare Director Suggests U. S. Match D. C. Contributions; Urges Larger Staff

Robert E. Bondy, director of public welfare in the District, yesterday suggested, as an experiment, the increasing of District funds for general public assistance, to reduce inadequacies in the relief situation here. He suggested some such plan as the way the Federal Government matches State funds for relief.

He also advocated the setting-up of a central application and certification bureau for both WPA and welfare purposes, and said that until the present "diffusion" was centered in one place, it would be hard to know the extent of the relief needs here.

Speaking at the monthly luncheon of the Council of Social Agencies at the Y. W. C. A., Bondy pointed out:

Of 1,143 families without income other than relief, 731 have been receiving grants less than their minimum needs. This item alone means a budget deficiency of approximately $85,000 a year, he said.

Although there is no adequate provision for the Board of Public Welfare here to give relief to employable persons in need, "we have been meeting emergencies as much as we can" Of 431 emergency employable cases between July 1 and December 1, 48 per cent needed aid for only one month, indicating that short time care, if given in time, would tide many families over such emergencies.

Due to a staff of inadequate size, Board of Public Welfare workers carry an average of 190 cases, which often prevents the type of investigation and other services needed to assure the taxpayer of getting his money's worth from expenditures in this field. The public assistance division now has 6,235 cases, including general public assistance, old-age assistance, aid to dependent children and aid to the blind.

Taxpayer Called the Loser

The lack of staff means that "we are not able to move people into the social security category until some months have elapsed," and the taxpayer is "the loser," he added.

Bondy said that because of inadequate staff, families are not being certified fast enough to receive surplus commodities. "The food is there, and the families need it," he declared.

Paul Edwards, district WPA Administrator, "with his inadequate staff should not have to deal with certifying people to receive surplus commodities," Bondy said. At present the WPA certifies persons on its rolls, and the public assistance division does the same for its families. Bondy implied that the central bureau, which he advocated, should do this for both.

Uncertain of Exact Need

Bondy did not specifically advocate that the approximately $700,000 now being spent for general public assistance (general relief) should be doubled in the matching with Federal funds. He said that he did not know exactly how much be required, if he were asked to fill in a figure on a blank check.

He said that some persons in the welfare field felt the Federal Government should match localities' funds for general public assistance, as it is now matching certain social security funds. He suggested that it might be well to experiment with the idea in the National Capital.

He said the gap in meeting human needs existed here because unemployed employables were not provided for in relief appropriations.

Funds Inadequate

Of the persons laid off by WPA in 23 cities in the summer due to the 18-month rule, he said 28 per cent were receiving direct relief by November, in comparison with only 1.8 per cent in the District, because of inadequate relief funds here. In these cities, 32 per cent of the group in November were without private employment, WPA work or relief, while in the District the figure was 61 per cent.

He said that at present the limitation on the amount given to families eligible for public assistance amounted to only $42 a month for a family of four. He implied strongly that this ceiling should be lifted.

"In our judgment there are distinct and important needs that affect public welfare that we are not meeting," he declared. He stressed, however, that he ralized the serious financing problem facing the District Commissioners.

6-Year-Old Girl, Two Others Hurt In Capital Traffic

A 6-year-old girl and two other District residents were injured seriously yesterday in traffic.

Betty Lou Moore, of 314 Fourteenth street northwest, suffered a possible skull fracture and scalp lacerations when she was struck down in front of her home.

Felled by an auto at First street and Massachusetts avenue northeast, Michael Parella, 39, of 115 D street southeast, received head injuries and a fracture of the right leg. He was treated at Casualty.

Walter Bell, about 30, of 411 A street northeast, was treated at Emergency Hospital for a possible fracture of the skull after he was struck by a trolley at Seventh and O streets northwest.

James Kane, Who Fought Geronimo, Succumbs at 82

Veteran of Cavalry Collapses On Street and Dies of Heart Attack; Helped Capture Indian Chief

An American soldier who braved the arrows of warriors of Geronimo, last of the rebelling Indian chiefs, was at the District Morgue last night, awaiting the honors of the country whose frontiers he helped advance.

Eighty-two-year-old James Kane, of 1316 Tenth street northwest, died in Gallinger Hospital Saturday after he collapsed in the 1200 block of Eleventh street northwest, the victim of a heart attack.

His background was obtained from old Army papers and records showing him the recipient of a $72 month veteran's pension found in his room.

Kane was a member of the Cavalry detachment, commanded by Gen. H. W. Lawton, who captured the Apache chief after pursuing him three years throughout the Southwest, and in Mexico.

The last of the Indian chiefs to resist the Government, Geronimo was the object of determined Army efforts to capture him when he persistently attacked setilers to halt the advancing civilization. Lawton's detachment finally captured him in Skeleton Canyon, Arizona, in 1886.

The Indian fighter leaves no survivors and little is known of his life in recent years.

Lenten Sermons Here Stress Dignity of the Individual

The dignity of the individual and the need for the spirit of Christ in the modern world were stressed yesterday in weekday Lenten sermons at Washington churches.

Dr. J. Lowrey Fendrich, pastor of Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, preached at the Penn Theater at a noonday service sponsored jointly by the churches of the Southeast section on the text, "Resist Not Evil."

The crux of Jesus' teaching was to substitute nonresistance for the Old Testament doctrine of "an eye for an eye," said Dr. Fendrich. Most of our ills today come from violating this principle, fighting as individuals, social groups and nations, he declared.

Bishop Robert E. L. Strider of West Virginia emphasized the importance of "standing on one's own feet" in his second noonday sermon at the Episcopal Church of the Epiphany. In all human relationships, he said, a man should remember the dignity with which God beholds him, and the freedom with which he must live and think and act to measure up to that dignity.

"We Would See Jesus" was the text chosen by Dr. Gideon Olson, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who spoke at the Union Lutheran Lenten service at Luther Place Memorial Church last night.

The spirit of Christ is the greatest need of the world today, he said, for we have tried everything else and it has failed.

Jobless Bill Is Recalled From House

Labor, Employers Want Changes In Amendments To Raise Benefits

The House District Committee yesterday recalled from the House calendar the bill it had reported carrying amendments to the District unemployment compensation act in response to requests from the Board of Trade and other business groups.

Chairman Randolph said the measure will be returned to the Judiciary Subcommittee headed by Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, for revision. Further hearings probably will be called as several groups have indicated they wished to offer amendments.

Proposals for revision, it is understood, will come both from labor spokesmen, who want increased benefits for the unemployed, and trade organizations.

Telegrams Hailed Bill

The Board of Trade Friday addressed telegrams to all members of the House District Committee asking that the bill not be called up on District day in the House, after conferences with Representative McGehee had failed to halt the legislation.

The bill, which is designed to prevent the accumulation of a large surplus tax fund, proposes to reduce the pay roll tax from 3 to 2.7 per cent while increasing benefits from $15 a week for 15 weeks to $20 a week for 20 weeks.

Opposition National

Opposition to the District measure has come from national business interests, as well as local trade groups, according to McGehee, because of the fear that its passage would serve as a precedent for increasing jobless benefits in States that do not have the surplus revenue available in the Capital.

The Board of Trade asked for more time to study the legislation on the ground that many sections need clarification or are loosely drawn and would result in inequities.

Sidney Katz, of the District-Maryland C. I. O., has indicated he will demand greater benefits for the jobless.

The Northeast Washington Citizens Association last night voted approval of the proposed pay roll tax reduction, and approval of the proposal to give employers until the last of the month, instead of the 15th, to pay the tax.

West Virginians Defeat Georgetown, 40 to 38

The Washington Post Sports

20 WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 13, 1940 X*

Hoya's Late Rally Fails By 2 Points

Pajak and Kiernan Stars of Victory on Tech Floor; Hoyas' Ninth Loss of Season

By Jack Munhall.

West Virginia's huge early lead plus the untimliness of the final whistle last night combined to produce Georgetown's ninth basketball loss of the season as the Mountaineers captured the twenty-third renewal of their traditional series, 40-38, at Tech gym.

The Hoyas, fighting desperately in the last five minutes of the game, succeeded in reducing a 32-18 West Virginia lead to the ultimate 2-point margin but time expired shortly after they had sank their thirty-eighth point and the Mountaineers had their eighth victory in 12 starts.

George Pajak and Jimmy iKernan, a substitute, inserted in the second half because of his set-shooting accuracy, were the heroes of Georgetown's exciting but futile rally, between them dividing 16 of the 20 points credited the Hoyas in the second half.

Pajak High Scorer

Pajak, tallying a like number in the first half, wound up as the game's high scorer with eight baskets. Jim Ruch, West Virginia's sensational sophomore, was runnerup with 15 points. Ruch, a two-handed pivot shot artist, flipped in the visitors' first four baskets on as many shots.

Georgetown played sporadically throughout, alternately falling far behind and then spurting to climb back into the running. At no time, however, were the Hoyas in the van

Byron Nelson Beats Hogan In Golf Finals

Winner Shoots One Under Par to Take Texas Open Title

By the Associated Press

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 12.—National Open Champion Byron Nelson shot his first round of golf out of the 60s in two years of the Texas Open, but his flat 70 was good enough to beat out Ben Hogan, of White Plains, N. Y., by a stroke in the 1940 title play-off at Brackenridge Park today.

They just didn't have the touch that had wound them up in a tie at the end of the regular 12-hole play at 271, 13 strokes under par and the same score as Dutch Harrison's record of the previous year.

The victory gave Nelson the $1,500 first prize money and left Hogan with $750 for second.

Twice Hogan had the jump on Nelson, Nelson 3-putted the fifth green to go over par by a stroke. Ben 3-putted the seventh to go, over par himself, and left the pair all square again.

Nelson Gets Birdie

On the ninth hole, a short par five, only 485 yards from tee to green, Nelson knocked his second shot barely on the green, and Hogan was pin high to the left. A poorly played pitch and run shot left Hogan with a 15-foot putt and he missed it for a 5, Nelson 2-putting for a birdie 4.

Hogan knocked in his first birdie of the day on No. 11, squaring the match. On the par 5, No. 13 Hogan 2-putted fo ra birdie. Nelson also jumped his second shot on the edge, but 3-putted from 50 feet to take a par 5.

The hole that really lost Hogan the match was No. 15, 380 yards with the green barely on the other side of a swift, narrow river. Both men smacked tee shots far down the middle, but Hogan's ball stopped in a divot hole and his mashie niblick toward the green was pitifully weak, falling right in the middle of the water.

George Abrams Slugs His Way to Over Billy Soose

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Feb. 12.—After flooring his opponent for a nine count in the fourth round with a hard right to the jaw, Georgia Abrams, 161, of Washington, pounded his way to a decision tonight in 10 rounds over Billy Soose, 155, of Farrell, Pa., former intercollegiate middleweight champion.

Wilson Beats Massanutten Tankmen

The Woodrow Wilson swimming team defeated Massanutten Military Academy, 40-26, last night in a dual meet at Shoreham pool.

Each team won four of the eight events, but Wilson counted more second and third places for its decisive victory.

Burch was high point scorer for the winners with eight points, by virtue of a first in the 50-yard free style and a second in the 100-yard free style. Other winners for the Presidents were Sawyer in the 100-yard backstroke, Williams in the diving and the 150-yard medley relay team.

Tilley, of the losers, was the meet's brightest star, however, with two victories. He won the 100-yard breast stroke and the 100-yard free style.

A.L. Clubs Waive on Joe Vosmik, Dodgers Get Him for $25,000

Red Sox Outfielder Bought on Advice Of Joe McCarthy

Belleair, Fla., Feb. 12.—Another step toward building the Brooklyn Dodgers into a formidable power in the National eLague pennant race was taken by President Harry MacPhail today when he purchased Outfielder Joe Vosmik from the Boston Red Sox for $25,000.

Vosmik, who has a life-time average of .311 for ten years in the American eLague, makes the fifth outfielder MacPhail has purchased from the junior circuit in two years. He recently signed Roy Cullenbine, the former Tiger who was declared a free agent by Commissioner Landis. Previously he had obtained Dixie Walker from the Tigers, Ernie Koy from the Yankees and Melo Almada from Browns.

Vosmik, who slumped 48 points in batting last year from .324 in 1938 to 276 in 1939, was first waived out of the American eLague before the Red Sox could peddle him to Brooklyn. The Dodgers outbid two other National League clubs, believed to be the Cubs and Reds, to get Vosmik.

Abolish Army-Navy Games, Shafer Asks

Representative From Michigan Says Rivalries Between Service Teams Bring Waste And Breeds Discontent; Taxpayers Are Losers

By the Associated Press

Charging that athletic rivalries between the Army and Navy led eventually to "waste and duplication in the Nation's defense program, Representative Paul W. Shafer (Republican), Michigan, suggested yesterday that the annual Army-Navy football game and all other sports contests between West Point and Annapolis be eliminated.

"In my opinion this competitive spirit originates in the early training of Army and Navy officers at West Point and Annapolis where great rivalry has existed for years in competitive sports, especially football. It might be well to consider the elimination of competitive athletic events between these two schools.

"The taxpayers should not be made to bear the brunt of puerile rivalries carried over into adult life."

"Ridiculous Situation"

Shafer, a member of the House Military Committee, advocated creation of a department of national defense to coordinate the activities of the two defense services.

As examples of the "ridiculous situation" existing because of rivalry between the two services, Shafer cited the airport construction program.

"At the present time," he said, "we are spending tremendous sums of money to construct airports for the exclusive used of the Army within almost a stone's throw of airports used exclusively by the Navy.

"Army airplanes are forbidden to land on Navy airports and Navy planes cannot land at Army airports.

"One does not need to travel far from the dome of the Nation's Capitol to witness an example of this expensive duplication of activities. Both the Army and Navy maintain air fields located almost side by side on the banks of the Anacostia River.

Army Planes Barred

"A few weeks ago three Army transport planes, carrying a Congressional committee inspecting military establishments, were required to make a hazardous landing at San Diego, Calif., on an Army field which was partially under

Brown Stops McDonald in Seventh Round

By Al Hailey

In a fight that had just about everything but the "burning of Rome" in it, Natie Brown made his second comeback attempt a success last night at Turner's Arena with a seventh-round knockout over Sandy McDonald, of Dallas, Tex., after Sandy had gone to the canvas in the sixth screaming foul.

Twice in previous rounds Natie had been warned for throwing low blows, which last week cost him the verdict with Mickey Avoy by a foul.

McDonald, however, was taking a painful beating when he went down, a cut over his right eye pouring blood. Referee Ray Bowen began to count him out but thought better of if when Sandy began the old familiar wheeze of "foul."

Sandy was hauled to his corner and then into his dressing room, where members of the District Boxing Commission and Dr. John De Mayo held a hurried and secret consultation over the writhing body of McDonald.

While 484 paying guests fidgeted, the physician came to the conclusion that there was nothing wrong with McDohald but his imagination and sent him back out to, battle.

Sandy Had Enough

Natie made short work of it. He rushed in, flung three left hooks to Sandy's wounded eye and split it wide open. A wild left to the jaw and a looping right to the head sent Sandy down, and as the count came to five, the bell rang.

But Sandy apparently had had enough. He didn't move a muscle, and his handlers carted him to his corner. As the bell signaled the

Committee Approves New Windup

Playing Rule Body Approves Change In Hurling Stance; Collins Is Opposed

By the Associated Press

Belleair, Fla., Feb. 12.—Baseball's playing rules committee finally got around to giving the pitchers some help at their meeting here today. They passed a new rule which will permit the hard-pressed flingers much more latitude in the use of their legs on the wind-up.

Sponsored by Owner Clark Griffith, of the Washington Nats, the new rule provides that the pitcher may take his position with one leg outstretched behind him and have the advantage of a full, swinging stride as he goes forward to deliver the ball.

Previously, the moundsman has been compelled to stand facing the batter, with his pivot foot on or in front in contact with the plate and he gained only what momentum he could in swinging his free leg forward from that awkward position. The greater freedom now permitted might have a revolutionary effect upon pitching and batting averages.

Gives Pitching Freedom

The new rule, which was bitterly opposed by Eddie Collins, general manager of the Boston Red Sox, stipulates only that the pitcher's foot must be in contact with the rubber. His other foot is free, except that he cannot step to either side of the plate, and that he cannot raise either foot until in the act of throwing. He may, in the wording of the rule, "take one step back and one forward."

Collins fought the motion, he said, because it "will cause more cheating than ever on the part of pitchers." He declared he would rather have voted for the return of the spit-ball.

"You'll see," he prophesied. "Now that they can start front from a position like a sprinter, pitchers will be lifting that front foot off the rubber and taking what amounts to two full jumps before they turn loose the ball."

Other members of the committee, who started overhauling the rule book from cover to cover before noon and continued arguing far into the night, were unanimous in adopting the rule. President Will Harridge of the American League expressed the opinion that pitchers now will have as great a head-start on the batters as ever they had in the old day of the "spitter" and emery ball.

Landis Attends

Others who attended the meeting were Commissioner K. M. Landis, President Ford Frick of the National League, President Bob Quinn of the Boston Bees, President Sam Breadon of the St. Louis Cardinals, President Clark Griffith of Washington, Umpire in Chief Tom Connally of the American League and W. G. Bramham, commissioner of the minor leagues.

Other than the pitching amendment, they made no changes of very great importance, and they stepped bluntly on a suggestion by Quinn that the intentional pass be abolished or penalized by giving the batter two bases instead of one. Pitchers will go right on issuing free trips to first, and hereafter the catcher will not even have to make a pretense of squatting behind the plate. The rule saying it constitutes a balk if the backstop stepped out to the side before the pitcher cut loose was removed from the book.

A new rule affecting mainly the minor leagues provides that an inning must not be started after 11:50 at night. At least one community complained last season because games continued after midnight and disturbed the sleep of neighbors. Neither, after this, may more than two games be played by a club in a single day.

New High in Histrionics at Turner's Arena

Here's Sandy McDonald giving out with anguished expressions as handlers help him back to his corner after he went down in the sixth round of his fight with Natie Brown last night at Turner's Arena screaming foul. Physicians examined him, said it was his imagination. Fight continued and Natie was acclaimed winner by a knockout when Sandy failed to come out of his corner for the seventh of their scheduled eight-rounder

This Morning

Without Shirley Povich

By Ben Bane Dulaney.
Post Sports Editor

"Son," said the dignified old gentleman in the smoking car, you've been talking about poor football teams you've seen—Chicago and some of those small schools in the South and other "deemphasized" spots. You think you've seen poor teams! I'll tell you a story about the worst, the lousiest, the no-goodest excuse for a football outfit in the history of the sport."

DULANEY

It was right after the war (the old gentleman said, looking out at the gray Pennsylvania countryside sliding by), and this fellow who'd been an All-American and later gotten his medical degree found himself out of the medical corps with no practice and no place to look for a practice.

Well, he went back to his school and the athletic board offered him the job of head coach. When he'd played back in '15 they had a whopping good team and not only cleaned up their conference but a lot of the big Eastern outfits. So he took the job and was plenty thankful.

But things had changed. Football had all but been abandoned for a couple of years. Not only didn't the place have any money left for athletic scholarships but good high school talent had gotten out of the habit of coming there. This coach had available a bunch of grown men who'd served during the war and returned to school to finish up. He figured those tough former doughboys would make excellent material.

That was where he was wrong the first time. Those fellows were willing to go out for football but they were back in school primarily to have a good time. And their idea of a good time was tearing the place up for 36 hours at a stretch.

Six of them who showed for the first Monday practice didn't come back again until Thursday. And they had pouches under their eyes that looked like sacks of meal. The coach suspended them for three days. Then they disappeared for good. Nice prospects they were too.

The only conscientious boys on the squad were from little country schools and the coach had to start from the beginning The captain was an experienced guard and a former aviator named Blount in the backfield knew his business. So the coach built his plays around the two. The plays, naturally, were a little peculiar, but the coach finally developed a few he thought might pass. He sat up all night every night. His wife threatened to go back to Northampton where she could get her old job and have peace.

Twenty minutes before the first game there wasn't any Blount. One of the assistant managers said he'd seen him take a New York train. So they ran in a 17-year-old kid in the backfield and the team lost its warm-up to an obscure school, 32-0. The next Saturday they played a neighboring State university and never got inside the 40-yard line. Score was 72-0.

About that time almost all the experienced men quit. The kids were dissatisfied because fellows who hadn't gone out for football were ribbing them. The college secretary reported the captain was conditioned in three subjects and was ineligible.

He was the only serious, experienced man in the outfit and when they hauled him away, that was the end.

(The old gentleman paused and shook his head and looked again at the passing landscape.)

Well, sir, what happened. Did the school give up football?

No (said the old gentleman with a peculiar smile). No, they couldn't quit in the middle of the fall. They had contracts. Students had been sold season tickets. Commitments had been made. They couldn't quit.

So they staggered on. They lost six more games in a row. The worst one was by 13 touchdowns. They made one score, a blocked kick in the mud that somebody accidentally fell on. One score in eight games.

Get me, son, this was a pretty good school and an old one. The alumni were whooping it up, sending delegations down. They told the coach he was through, they told him it was the most disgraceful exhibition in the annals of grid history. Their feelings were hurt.

Meanwhile, the last game was coming up—a traditional one dating back 40 years. On the Friday before the holocaust the coach walked down the field and saw his last two passable backfield men having a fist fight in the lily pond next to the practice gridiron. One was half drowned, the other required 14 stitches in his head. Both ended up in the infirmary.

Son, look at this coach: The Saturday of the real game of the year for his team. He had eighteen men left on his squad. Most of 'em were under 20. None of 'em had ever been on a team which had won a college game. He went home and found a note from his wife. She'd left for Northampton. He started hitting the bottle.

Next day 20,000 people turned out, mostly just from habit. And they came to jeer.

The coach staggered to the bench. He saw the other boys run back the opening kickoff for a touchdown. He retired under the stands, gulped at a bottle and returned. He cried quietly to himself for awhile and then fell asleep.

Then everything happened. Madam Luck hit his university between the eyes. Miraculously, enemy passes settled in State University arms; unaccountably kicks were blocked, crucial fumbles were recovered. Our coach's team won, 14-6, and the world went mad.

He awoke amid jubilent alumni. Stretched on a rubbing table in the field house. The President of the Athletic Council told him his job was safe, asked him if he'd come back another year.

(The old gentleman paused again . . . Well, sir, did the coach go back?)

No, son. No he didn't. He went to a hospital for three months. And then he went back into the medical profession. He's head of a State hospital for the mentally deficient now. And he's very happy. I ought to know, said the old gentleman, I was the coach.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Feb. 12.—He's a pinhead, and all that, but we find ourselves rooting for Dizzy Dean to get that $15,000 salary he wants from Mr. P. W. Wrigley, his boss. He's worth it, no matter how sad he was last year. You know that no matter now bad he is this year he'll draw more than $15,000 worth of business, even if it is only curiosity trade to inspect the fossilized remains of one of the greatest pitchers of our time.

CONSIDINE

Too often the sportswriters and the fans, too, fall in with the owners in any argument between the owner and his laborer. Our friend, James Powers, will say that this is because most reporters see eye to eye with the owners because the owners pay their expenses on the baseball trips and thus make of them little more than paid publicists—who in turn influence the fans to look upon the Deans and other holdouts as violators of constitutional privileges.

Dean, of course, is an incorrigible ham and his aggrieved manner tends to make a lot of $25-a-week citizens snort when they hear, for instance, that he turned down an invitation to go to a hockey match with Wrigley the other night, "because I gotta go out and look for a job, now that I've given up baseball." "He'll be guilty of a lot of aggravating twaddle of that kind, for that is his nature, but it doesn't alter the fact that he is worth what he's asking for—and probably more. He can draw people in numbers, and any ball player who can do that is worth more than $10,000 to a team.

We've put in with more than one owner in our day, not that we were linked in a subsidy (which no sensible newspaperman respects) but because he was more available: that is, he got his side of the story to us, while the player, hibernating in Arkansas or Nevada, was not easy to reach, but lately we have been talking to a player who has changed our mind. He asked us to recall a single instance, since Ruth's time, when press and public was behind a player's efforts to wring a little more money or take a smaller cut from the owner. We couldn't. And the law of averages would indicate that a lot of the time all of us must have been wrong in siding with the richer guy. Sometimes we must have been right, but a lot of times we helped to hammer into line players who were being grossly exploited for wages which—while they sounded mildly imposing at the time—were soon to end.

The next time we spit on our hands and start to town on a holdout, we're going to try to put ourself in his place. We're going to try to remember that the clubs will short-change him if they can, because they have an un-American contractural

St. John's Late Rally Upsets Favored Roosevelt, 26 to 24

Riders Drop First Game To D. C. Foe

Johnnies Get Away To Early Lead to Turn Back Rivals On Roosevelt Court

By Gershon Fishbein.

St. John's in-and-out basketball team, beaten nine times this season, provided local scholastic cage followers with their most stunning upset yesterday as it rallied in the last quarter to hand mighty Roosevelt a 26-24 beating on the Riders' court.

How lowly the Cadets were regarded in the eyes of high school court fans may be gleaned from the fact that a mere 100 spectators turned out to watch the interhigh leaders play host to the supposedly weak Johnnies.

The defeat wa.. Roosevelt's first at the hands of a local school this season, its only other setback in 15 games coming when the strong Navy Plebes conquered it last month at Annapolis.

Johnnies Take Lead

The Johnnies gave Roosevelt forewarning of what was to transpire when little Joe Corrado and Frank Cady combined to present the Cadets with a 7-6 lead at the end of the first quarter.

It was more or less of an oddity in technical tactics which gave the Cadets their first-quarter advantage. With the score tied at 6-6, Coach Herman Littman sent in three substitutes for Roosevelt, but the boys got their signals crossed and only two men came out. With a crisp reminder to Littman that the rule book called for five men on the court at one time, Referee Shirley gave Cady a foul shot which he converted.

As if suddenly aware that its brilliant record was in jeopardy, Hymie Perlo and George West formed a quick partnership in scoring, and gave the Riders a 13-to-11 lead at the half.

Corrado Ties Score

It was the swarthy Corrado, a perennial point-getter all season for St. John's, who tied the score at 20 to 20 while the sound of the timekeeper's horn was echoing throughout the gymnasium. Cady, top District scorer, but his team in the lead for the first time since the second quarter immediately afterward with a sterling pivot shot which fouled the entire Roosevelt defense.

Ernie Travis dropped in two foul shots to once again tie the score, but here Herb Munhall, an obscure figure all afternoon, stepped into the breach and droped in a "snowbird" to give his team a lead it never relinquished. However, it remained for Corrado to drop in the winning points with a long set shot. West's final goal was futile.

Corrado was the game's high scorer, with 12 points, while Cady, who returned to his former scoring status, counted 11. West was the losers' high man with 7.

Cards Defeat St. Peter's Five, Can Shave Now

Bearded Players Take 44-35 Victory From Invading Collegians

It was a real emancipation day for Catholic University's basketball team last night as the Cardinals threw off the yoke of nine straight defeats and gained the victory column for the first time this season with a 44-35 win over St. Peter's College on their home court.

The bearded Cardinals, who had vowed not to shave until they won a game, surprised an enthusiastic crowd of 500 by staging a late rally and overcoming a four-point deficit. Led by Capt. Carmen Pirro, who scored 18 points during the night, C. U. got a "hot hand" in the last five minutes of play.

Trailing, 30 to 26, Pirro put the Redbirds back in the running by sinking two fouls. St. Peter's came back with a foul shot of its own and then Gene Daly put the Cards a point behind with a long shot. Gene followed it up with another angle shot that put C. U. in front for the second time.

From then on Pirro scored three goals and a foul to bridge the gap and the tense crowd finally uncrossed its fingers as the inspired Cards widened their margin to 9 points.

Georgetown Prepmen Beat Wilson, 35-33

Barrett Brothers Shine as Little Hoyas Hand City Rivals Stunning Defeat on Wilson Floor; Sport Takes Scoring Honors

Georgetown's Prep's finest cage team in years registered a stunning 35—33 upset over Woodrow Wilson, runner-up for interhigh honors, in an overtime yesterday on the losers floor.

The Barrett boys, Sport and Bob, were responsible for the Little Hoyas' seventh triumph in 11 games, Bob tying the count in the last second of play with his only 2-pointer of the game, and Sport scoring the winning points with 15 seconds of the extra session gone.

Besides his crucial 2-pointer, Sport, the older of the brothers, took high scoring honors of the game with 15 points. Decker and Echrich hung up seven points apiece.

Georgetown Prep was out in front all the way until late in the final quarter when Bart Fuglar and Moke MacDonald led in a brilliant rally that put the Wilsonites on top. At the first quarter the count favored the Little Hoyas, 12—9, at the half it was 24—14, and after the third period it was 28—25.

Fuglar and MacDonald led Wilson's attack with 12 points each. It was the president's second consecutive loss. Roosevelt taking a wide margin last Friday in an interhigh clash.

Jim Braddock May Referee Rassle Bout

Cox Demands 'Neutral' Official for Match With Plummer Here

The idea of getting former Heavyweight Champion Jim Braddock to step in and referee the goings-on in his Fourteenth and W streets wrestling emporium was running around in Promoter Joe Turner's head yesterday as he began studying the pouting expression on the face of Joe Cox, who will cast evil glances at Lou Plummer in Thursday night's feature.

Cox has been disqualified three straight weeks in the arena for roughness and has demanded that Turner import a "neutral" official for this week's business.

"First it was that guy Bortnick, then this bum Berger—can't us wrestlers get a break around here?" Cox brooded yesterday, indicating he is ready to "pull out" unless he gets same.

Braddock told Turner he'd be delighted to referee a local wrestling match when he was here last month to officiate at a boxing show. Mindful of this, Turner began negotiations with Jimmy yesterday for Thursday's dramatic exhibitions.

G.W.'s Frosh Five Defeats Young Terps

Groetzinger, Gallagher Pace Victors With 10 Points Each

The George Washington University freshman basketball team followed in the winning footsteps of its varsity yesterday by defeating the University of Maryland freshmen, 43-33, in Ritchie Coliseum.

Bob Groetzinger and Joe Gallagher, with 10 points each, led the Colonial yearlings to an easy victory. Every G. W. man, with exception of a last-minute, substitution tasted the thrill of points for the alma mater.

The little Terrapins came from behind an 18-10 lead at the half to make a close battle in the final period but could not overtake the flying frosh from G street.

Mar Le Captures Lincoln Purse, Feature at Hialeah Park

Le Mar Farm's Entry Pays $12.70 Ticket With Length and a Half Victory

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 12 (AP).—Seven horses started in the featured Abraham Lincoln Purse of six furlongs here today, three of them named for the $50,000 Widener Challenge Cup of closing day. When the dust of battle had cleared, the four ineligibles had accounted for all the money.

Mar Le, which recently failed to stick it out in a turf course distance affair, carried the LeMar Stock Farm silks first home by a length and a half. The gelding paid $12.70 and finished in 1:11 2-5. Merrill Packer, latest apprentice rider to enjoy a big day, was astride the winner for his third success of the day.

The big shock of the race was the defeat of the odds-on Woolford Farm pair, Joe Schenck and Technician. Joe Schenck managed to earn the place, a length in front of Dewitt Page's Maeline, but Technician failed to show his best form.

Behind Maeline came Count Morse, Technician, Napper Tandy and Sandy Boot, as named. Technician, Sandy Boot and Napper Tandy were the Widener Cup eligibles in the field.

Mar Le took the track at the break and remained in front to the end. He opened up a daylight lead after a quarter mile, but was driven hard through the stretch. Joe Schenck rallied too late to become a real threat. Maeline tired chasing the winner.

An unpleasant note was injected into the day's activities with the running of the fourth dash, for maiden 3-year-olds. Gallant Risk threw Jockey Ronnie Nash when he stumbled at the far turn. Nash seemed badly hurt, but he revived after being taken to the track emergency quarters. The boy complained of some pain in his side and it was deemed advisable to send him to University Hospital for further examination. In the same race, William Woodward's colt, Foxleigh, was reported to have suffered cuts.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SILVESTRA, $19.00, $10.80, $6.90; CLASSIC BEAUTY, $6.20, $4.10; FANTASMA, $3.10.

SILVESTRA broke alertly, but, racing greenly the early stages, dropped back. She then responded to intermittent punishment, came through on the inside to win going away. CLASSIC BEAUTY, a keen contender throughout, took a brief lead through the stretch and held FANTASMA safe in the final drive. FANTASMA swerved in the early stages and Steffen had to straighten her out repeatedly. BELLE TOWN was vigorously ridden, but could not get up.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BALTEE, $8.60, $4.00, $3.00; TAKEITFROME, $3.60, $2.60; PRESS TIME, $3.90.

BALTEE began fast, drew clear at once, set a steady pace until approaching the stretch turn, where he drew out and held sway to the end. TAKEITFROME, on the outside the entire trip, finished gamely to punishment and disposed of PRESS TIME. The latter, a forward contender and saving ground throughout, faltered in the final drive and just lasted long enough to withstand LUCKY ME'S bid. The latter ran an even race.

Daily Double, SILVESTRA and BALTEE, Paid $122.30.

THIRD RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:02. Off at 3:03½. Winner, C. S. Bromley's b. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRESIDENTIAL, $7.80, $4.40, $3.10; RYE GRASS, $4.00. $2.90; SUN MICA, $4.50.

PRESIDENTIAL, slow to settle into his stride, began to improve his position while racing wide in the final half mile and wore RYE GRASS down in the closing strides. He pulled up lame. RYE GRASS held the field safe for speed, opened up what appeared a winning lead entering the stretch, but then weakened rapidly in the final drive. SUN MICA, well up throughout, held the others safe. PAUSE stopped after showing early foot.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For maiden 3-year-olds. Start good from Puett gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:32. Off at 3:32½. Winner, Woodvale Farm's dk. b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—KAYTEEKEL, $6.80, $4.40, $3.80; ARISTOCRACY, $19.80, $11.30; VEILED PROPHET, $7.50.

KAYTEEKEL, a good-looking colt, assumed command at once, held the field safe for speed and was rated in front in the early stages and won as his rider pleased. ARISTOCRACY, a prominent factor all the way, held on tenaciously when the real test came and outlasted VEILED PROPHET. The latter, always well up on the inside, continued with good courage in the final drive. FOXLEIGH raced on his own courage and was taken extremely wide entering the stretch. GALLANT RISK jumped on the heels of BAY JAMES leaving the backstretch, stumbled and fell.

FIFTH RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $1,200. Grade C. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Puett gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 4:01½. Off at 4:03. Winner, J. E. Widener's b. g. TOWN BOY, going forwardly in the early stages, slipped through on the inside rounding the turn, opened up a good lead under pressure and was taken in hand in the final strides. INSCOLAD, on the outside and prominent from the start, disposed of HALCYON BOY in the last sixteenth mile. The latter set a swift pace for a half mile. He bolted out in the run through the stretch, but was quickly straightened out. LIBERTY QUEEN lacked speed and never threatened.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200; allowances. The Abraham Lincoln. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won handily; place driving. Won driving; place same. The latter, nearest in pursuit of the leader in the early stages, faltered in the final eighth. COUNT MORSE closed well. TECHNICIAN was done after going a half mile.

International Adds Week of Playing

Syracuse, N. Y., Feb. 12 (AP).—The International Baseball League finally has adopted its 1940 schedule, calling for an additional week's playing time in September.

Listing 161 games between April 18 and September 15, the schedule was approved by league directors last night after two previous attempts ended in failure.

Frank Shaughnessy, loop president, said the schedule is designed to provide shorter series, quicker turnover and greater interest.

Western Faces Eastern Today and Tech Battles Anacostia

Frank Cady Loses Lead In Scoring

Hard Battles Loom As Inter-High Teams Vie for Higher Spots In Title Chase

Lower bracket scrimmaging features the interhigh basketball schedule today as Western tangles with Eastern on the latter's court and Tech moves out to Anacostia, both games starting at 3:30.

Of the four teams, Western stands highest in the series standings, being deadlocked with Central for third place. Eastern and Tech are knotted in fourth place, and Anacostia is out of the running at the bottom of the list.

Western and Tech victories would please officials of the public school series most, for that would make the first four places clean cut and eliminate a playoff to determine the four teams to compete in the championship round robin.

However, if Tech and Western win, the fourth place will be in the hands of three teams—Western, Eastern and Tech.

Roosevelt, tops in the standings with its regular series finished, makes its second start in two days when it entertains Montgomery-Blair at 8 p. m. Of the four other afternoon games, the Gonzaga-G. W. High battle at Alexandria is probably the high light. Friends and St. Alban's, Interstate Academic League foes, come together at the Saints gym; Rockville and Bethesda, Montgomery County opponents, clash at the latter's floor, and Laurel and Mount Rainier meet at Mount Rainier.

As a result of last week's torrid cage card, Frank Cady, leader in schoolboy scoring in the District since the start of the season, was forced out of the top spot. Bottled convincingly in three games, the St. John's star dropped to third place and Friends' Armand Newmyer and Landon's Paul Baker moved up. Newmyer, with 93 points in seven games, assumed the lead with an average of 13.28 points per game. Baker was second with 13 even.

Best of the interhigh crowd continued to be Roosevelt's Hymie Perlo, whose consistent point-making has given him a 9.64 average. Bob Custer, of Eastern, despite several poor performances and "off" nights, was still second with an average of 8.75.

Three Card Boxing Aces End Careers

Bouts With Lockhaven Saturday Are Last for Bunsa, Stant, Turner

When Catholic University winds up its boxing season against Penn State Teachers, of Lockhaven, Pa., Saturday night at C. U. gym, the bouts will write finis to three of the most spectacular careers in the Cards' history.

Engaging in their final athletic contests for C. U. will be Capt. Joe Bunsa, Fred Stant and Jay Turner. Bunsa, often called the best 155-pounder ever to wear the Cardinal and Black, has had an amazing athletic career.

The quiet, rugged Czech came to C. U. with a brilliant scholastic record. At Staunton Military Academy, Bunsa was undefeated as a boxer. In college competition, Bunsa lost only 2 bouts in 24, and 14 of his 22 victories were knockouts. Bunsa was recently selected on the all-time C. U. boxing team.

Despite his many honors, Bunsa never won a national title. Stant, 165-pounder, has a record equally brilliant. The Norfolk, Va., blond has lost only one fight in his entire college career—a three-round decision to Villanova's John Nojanus three years ago.

Stant climaxed his career by winning the national senior middleweight title from one of the toughest fields in the tourney's history last spring.

Turner, a local boy and product of Eastern High School, has been the most sensational performer of the team. A fighter who knocks out or gets knocked out, Turner has provided more thrills for the spectators than any other member of the team. It was he who put on the heart-gripping finish with Columbus' Abe Cohen a week ago in a bout that had the fans screaming from the first bell to the last. Cohen was floored four times by Turner, who himself was almost knocked out in the first heat.

Willie Tapp And DeChard Bout Tops Card

Plenty of Action Is Promised When Glove Stars Clash Tomorrow

A program that promises to please the most exacting amateur fight fan is on deck for tomorrow night at Turner's arena when Jimmy DeChard, District A. A. U. and Golden Gloves heavyweight championship, and the National Guard's Don Stetson clash in the feature bout of the current gloves tournament finals.

Willie Tapp, last year's bantamweight champion, and one of the most skillful boxers in Washington's amateur fight history, will step up into the featherweight field to try to take the 127-pound crown away from Alexandria's Gilbert Mayo.

DeChard, Mayo and Tapp will be making their first appearance in the current Gloves tournament. Although DeChard's defense of his heavyweight title is cast as the feature bout, Mayo's battle with Tapp promises to hold the main interest. A following of about 500 Alexandrians is expected to jam the arena to cheer their hero on.

The 16 three-round final matches will also see Jim Brady defend his 175-pound crown against the National Guard's Bill Nolan, Billy Kekeris risk his welterweight title with John Mancini and Grover Davis his flyweight championship against Danny Petro, of Metropolitan Police Boys Club No. 5.

Trophies and prizes for the titlists announced yesterday by Chairman James A. Sullivan include golden gloves to novice and senior winners, silver belt buckles to runners-up, gold medals donated by the Sports Center, trophy for the outstanding senior fighter, the Dr. J. Albert Bonnett Cup to the outstanding novice, Tru-Blu trophy to the novice team titlist, Charles Bradley trophy to the Willie-Tapp-Gilbert Mayo winner, Pat Regal trophy to the senior team titlist.

Notre Dame Courtmen Defeat Toledo by 38-30

Toledo, Ohio, Feb. 12.—Notre Dame basketballers bounded back to register a 38-to-30 triumph over the University of Toledo tonight. The victory was the eleventh in 16 starts for the Irish and the fifth reversal in 24 games for Toledo.

The score was tied four times the first 15 minutes, but after that the Irish slowly moved away and held a 17-to-10 lead at the intermission.

On Fishing

In commenting on "Progress in Biological Inquiries," the booklet report of Elmer Higgins, Chief of the Scientific Section, United States Bureau of Fisheries, Division of Information says in a press release, "Highlighted by the report is information, for example, indicating that reactional fishermen are responsible for a catch of almost as many fish as are taken by commercial gear in certain areas."

ACKERMAN

It is misleading to say the least, an certainly not in line with the usual news release of the bureau, to pick out of the entire report, a single species, and because tagging operations in a small area showed nearly as many tagged fish caught by anglers as by commercial men.

The species in question was the flounder, and the area was Long Island and New York waters. A section with a heavy concentration of population, and a fish with a known propensity for running the beaches, inlets, creeks and rivers. A poorman's fish, but only because it travels in waters within his reach.

We cannot question the accuracy with which the Bureau can tabulate the take from tags returned, but we do feel that in this case there would be a greater percentage of tags returned, for the dollar reward to many of these anglers for the table would be as interesting as the actual meat.

We also note that the ambiguity was from the effort to show that sportfishing is on the increase, but we would rather wait for another year or two, see another 2,000 flounders tagged each year, and have them released over a greater part of their range, before believing sportfishing can even approach the take of commercial men.

We do not doubt the possibility, and that if it does prove to be an accurate measurement of the catch of flounders it wouldn't prove the same for other species, and for more than one reason.

The best single one is the fact that while sports anglers are increasing by leaps and bounds, they are also becoming conservation-minded.

Man might point to a great number of white marlin caught off Ocean City, Maryland last season—1,344 to be accurate—and the blue marlin off Bimini, in the hope of proving the sports angler does take more of some species than does the commercial.

But even that wouldn't be true, for the commercial fishermen on the North Cuban coast take many times that number each year of both whites and blues, and probably from the same schools that follow our coasts in the summer. A fishery that has been in existence for over seventy years.

A mere youngster as far as the commercial taking of tuna and swordfish are counted in years; they have been caught for centuries by the fishermen of the southern European countries.

The sailfish is the single species of pelagic gamesters of the sea that have probably been taken more by sports anglers than by commercial men, and adequate laws very effectively govern the impossibility of any other probability.

Miami Return Bout for Louis News to Jacobs

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Feb. 12.—Promoter Mike Jacobs said today he had not been approached regarding a return match in Buenos Aires between Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis and Arturo Godoy, and added that any bout involving Louis would be staged by Jacobs himself.

"That's the first I had heard of it," Jacobs said when informed Argentine promoters had opened negotiations for Godoy, Chilean, who stayed 15 rounds with the titleholder last Friday, to fight the champion again May 25 at Buenos Aires. "I am the only one to trade with where Louis is concerned."

Louis already has been matched with Johnny Paychek, of Des Moines, Iowa, for April 2 and tentative plans have been made for three other title defenses this year. One would send Louis against the winner of the Lee Savold-Bob Pastor bout in June, another against Tony Galento in July, and a third later against the winner of a Billy Conn-Pastor fight.

Eagles Battle Rover Sextet Here Tonight

Washingtonians Hope To Continue Pace at Expense of Leaders

Heartened by the New York Rovers' double defeat by the Orioles Sunday, the Washington Eagles tonight hope to continue their return to a contending position in the Eastern Amateur Hockey League by dealing the pacesetters their third successive setback. The match is scheduled for 8:30 at Riverside Stadium.

The Eagles, their confidence increased by two victories over their nemisis, Atlantic City, over the week-end, will rely on the revised line-up that is credited with snapping them from their recent slump.

Pudgy Les Colvin, by his performance against the Sea Gulls, has earned himself a chance to play regular goalie. Coach Redvers Mackenzie yesterday told the youngster who is playing his first year of senior hockey that the job was his for good barring a relapse of his present form.

The newly formed forward line of Center Ken Partis and Wings Alan Foster and Bill Lahti will be kept intact, though another combination, Roy Covert, Hal Dewey and Bunny McKillop is scheduled to start tonight.

Dewey, despite a strained side received in the tussle with the Sea Gulls Sunday, insisted he'd be ready for the Rovers but Coach Mackenzie last night was undecided whether to risk his ace scorer. A final examination today will decide whether the "Admiral" is to be sidelined tonight.

The Rovers come here as the new championship scoring team of the circuit, having established a record of 200 goals in their Sunday doubleheader with the Orioles. Featured for the New Yorkers will be the top point-making trio of the league, Al Collings, Murdo McKay and Frank Boucher, jr.

"There are any number of instances where Army and Navy air bases have been and are being constructed within a few miles of each other.

"It is my belief that many of the outlandish situations now existing in both departments could be corrected if we would create a department of national defense with a secretary of national defense as the directing head and with assistant secretaries in charge of the Army, Navy, Air Corps and Marine Corps.

"With a view to procuring a thorough study of such a plan I shall soon present legislation to the Congress in the hope of obtaining hearings as to its merits."

Stormy Weather Is Favored In Miami-Nassau Sail Race

Craft, Flying Annapolis Yacht Club Flag, Expected to Get Battle From New Yawl

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Feb. 12.—Facing an arduous 184-mile course, 13 of the country's fastest sailing craft will start tomorrow in the annual Miami to Nassau race.

With fair weather in prospect, it appeared likely a keen three-cornered race would develop out of the sixth renewal of the classic. The 54-foot yawl Stormy Weather was favored, however, to capture the event for the fourth consecutive year.

Owned by William La Brot, Stormy Weather will fly the burgee of the Annapolis (Md.), Yacht Club.

Good News Threatens

Most dangerous contender probably will be the new and potentially faster 64-foot yawl Good News, entered by R. W. Johnson, of Princeton, N. J., who formerly owned Stormy Weather.

Crowding those two entries will be the 70-foot yawl Wakiva, owned by Harkness Edwards, of Lexington, Ky.

Scratch boat in the race will be Harry E. Noyes' 72-foot ketch Tioga from Marblehead, Mass. Having the highest rating, it will have to give time allowances to all other entries, which range in length down to the 35.5-foot yawl race, entered by Everest McDade, of Miami.

Georgian Entered

Another highly rated entry is the Elizabeth McCaw, 63-foot yawl owned by R. J. Reynolds, of Sea Island, Ga.

Ranking high among the smaller entries is the 36-foot sloop Gosling, owned by Frederick Towle, of New Bedford, Mass.

Oklahoma Mates Put Ex-Captain On Spot at Navy

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Feb. 12 (AP).—John (Babe) Harrell, Navy plebe, was really on the spot when the Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College wrestling team met the Navy varsity—Harrell is still captain of the Oklahoma team.

The big plebe was elected captain of the Sooner grapplers last year, when he was intercollegiate heavyweight wrestling champion. Then he was named to the academy. His Oklahoma mates declined to elect another captain, so the Navy plebe is still their captain.

Vander Meer to 'Rebuild' His Mound Career

Holder of 2 No-Hit, No-Run Games Says He'll Start All Over

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Feb. 12.—Johnny Vander Meer, baseball hero and problem-child, is going to start all over again as a rookie.

The smiling Jersey Dutch boy who hurled two successive no-hit, no-run games for the Reds in 1938, then suffered severe reversal of form, said so today.

Headed for spring training at Tampa, Fla., Vander Meer said quietly:

"I'm going down there as a 'busher.' I'll just try to prove to (Manager) Bill McKechnie that I have the stuff. And I'm sure I can make the grade."

Friends of the apple-cheeked portsider, including General Manager Warren C. Giles, are convinced he "has something there"—a sensible, logical approach to a situation that has worried him.

No cranial inflation resulted from his unprecedented feat of two no-hitters in a row within a week, against Boston here, and on Brooklyn's Ebbetts Field. They were just two ball games to Johnny. In fact, he fled public adoration after the first and, incognito, sold tickets that night for a charity ball in Covington, Ky.

He went on to win 15 games and lose 10 in 1938, contributing much of the Reds' spectacular rise from the cellar to fourth place.

Pitcher Vander Meer Doing His Stuff

Last year, his tough luck started in spring training. A belligerent appendix and colds kept him pretty well under wraps and when the future champions started north he was in a hospital.

Vandy's control, never entirely dependable, almost deserted him. Motion pictures were made of his mound stance and delivery; he spent hours lobbing and smoking 'em in—but the end of the pennant year found him with five wins and nine losses.

However, the season before he pitched himself into diamond immortality, he amassed an even worse record—5 and 11, with Syracuse, of the International League.

"He came back once," commented Giles, "and right now we refuse to believe he can't again."

Vander Meer has one hope: That soft-spoken Bill McKechnie will send him against the Yankees during a spring training exhibition game.

"Just about every time I was slated to go against 'em last year," gribbed Johnny, "I turned up on the sick list."

Not only that, but a lot of fans have recollections of 1939's World Series and what the story might have been, had the youngster been in form to go against Joe McCarthy's crew.

Brucie Wins Best in Breed In Westminster

Cocker Spaniel Was Finalist Last Show; Nornay Sadley Scores

New York, Feb. 12 (AP).—One of American dogdom's favorite sons, Champion My Own Brucie, a beautifully coated black cocker spaniel, tonight went best in breed to highlight the night of the Westminster Kennel Club's sixty-fourth annual show.

A crowd of several thousand in Madison Square Garden saw the winner of best in show at the huge Morris and Essex show win his breed easily just as he did here last year. Brucie, owned by Herman Mellenthin, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., was one of the three finalists in last year's show.

That perennial winner, Champion Nornay Saddler, a smooth black and white foxterrier, came through again tonight to win the best of breed among the foxterriers, beating the best of the wirehairs, Champion Fox Hunter Wildoaks in the two-dog final.

Nornay Saddler, winner of 51 best of shows and another 1939 finalist, is owned by James M. Austin, of Old Westbury, Long Island, and Fox Hunter of Wildoaks is the property of Mrs. R. C. Bondy, of Goldens Bridge, N. Y.

Champion Klevin Glorious, from the New York kennels of Felix A. Donnelly, closed the afternoon program of the Westminster Kennel Club's annual dog show by dethroning a defending champion.

The wiry-haired coral-red dog was named best Irish terrier, defeating Ch. Molly Lass, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Coll, of Greenwich, Conn.

Simultaneously, the judging of the well-liked Irish setters was one of the high lights of the opening of the three-day show. The victory finally went to Rosecroft Premier, from the Shrewsbury, N. J., kennels of C. F. Nielson, over a field including last year's winner, Mrs. George B. St. George's Ch. Milson Top Notcher, from Tuxedo Park, N. J.

The first important winner of 1939 to take a beating was the Cairn terrier, Ch. Pimpernal of Mercia, from the Brockville, Ontario, kennels of Mrs. G. W. Hyslop. The Tapscot Kennels' Jere O'Tapscot won.

New champions were crowned in several other divisions, but the beagle, Champion Meadowlark Draftsman, a finalist last year and winner of a special award as the best American-bred dog shown last season, again was named best beagle and Champion Penine Paramount, the handsome pointer, retained the top ranking in his division. Meadowlark Draftsman is owned by Mrs. William du Pont, of Bellevue, Del., and Penine Paramount by Mr. and Mrs. Angier B. Duke, of Tuxedo Park, N. Y.

Other best of breed awards in the afternoon judging went to Remenham Derri, Pekingese recently imported from England by Mrs. Richard S. Quigley, of Lock Haven, Pa.; Jack Shatiuck's German short-haired pointer, Champion Fritz V. Schwareberg from Minneapolis; Kimatik Lobo, a husky owned by Margaret A. Dewey, of Lake Placid, N. Y.; the 1939 champion chow chow, Champion Lie Wol Lah Son, owned by Mrs. A. H. Hallowell, of Philadelphia, and another, Queen of Brum, white bull terrier from the New Haven, Conn., kennels of Mrs. G. W. Mabee.

The black Scottie, Acton Hill's Gold Fairy, owned by John P. Murphy, of Allendale, N. J., won the highly regarded best of breed in one of the most popular breeds in the entire show, as the night session began.

Moran of Ouborough, a magnificent Irish wolfhound, won best of breed in the next major competition. He is owned by Elizabeth B. Morse, of Lake Forest, Ill.

and after the opening minute of play they were never able to tie the score.

West Virginia, a rangy club with three regulars standing better than 6 feet, threw up a 3-2 zone defense which the Hoyas seemed unable to fathom until their last-minute comeback. Then, using a quick break, Georgetown was getting within firing distance of the basket before the Mountaineers could deploy into their defensive formation.

Ruch Scores First

West Virginia opened scoring soon after the start as Ruch leaped high into the air to push in a two-handed snowbird. Center Jimmy Geibel tied the count for Georgetown on a follow shot and, then after Ruch had counted again, he swished through a free throw. Ruch, however, came right back to send the Mountaineers' zooming to the front with another pair of baskets that proved the margin of West Virginia's 23-18 halftime lead.

At one time in the half the visitors were ahead by 21-13 but consecutive baskets just before the intermission gun by Pajak, and Russ miller boosted the Hoyas' hopes.

With the beginning of the second half it seemed as though West Virginia would put the Hilltop five to rout as Rudy Baric and Steve Chepko joined Ruch to slap in nine points while Georgetown was scoreless. Not until the eighth minute of play did the Hoyas hit the hoop, Kiernan dropping one in from the floor.

hold on him, and we're going to try to realize that we (and you, and you) would be yelling just as loud for the dough we thought we were worth if we were in the holdout's shoes.

Here's a note from a prominent convelescent: "Dear Bob: Just a line to tell you and the persons who contributed to my operation, that I heartily appreciated every big and little gift, and that I still get a queer feeling inside when I think of how much it all helped me, and how much it came from people who only knew me through the sports pages.

"I'm up now, taking daily exercises at a local (Los Angeles) health club and feel fit as a fiddle. I've gained weight and am up to 107. Somehow, life seems so much more wonderful to me these days. I'm so proud to possess it, and I feel so grateful that I'm an American and living in a place like our country. I guess I feel, or I really should say I know, I'm one of the happiest girls alive."

Natie Brown Stops Sandy McDonald

start of the seventh, Sandy was still draped limply on the ring stool, his head hanging forward between his legs. He made no move as Natie advanced, and Referee Ray Bowen pranced over and counted the necessary ten over his seated and sagging form.

The blow that sent Sandy groaning to the canvas landed somewhere above his right hip bone. For once Natie was in the clear, and he sat in his corner with tears pouring down his cheeks as he awaited the verdict from McDonald's dressing room.

The five-minute rest granted McDonald was well received by Natie, for he was on the verge of a collapse himself when it came. His only mark was a mouse under his left eye from McDonald's left jabs.

Brown weighed 222, McDonald 207¾.

The night's second eight-rounder, between Johnny Kaplovich, 174, of Baltimore, and Jimmy Webb, 169, of Dallas, stole the show from Brown's heavyweight date with an exhibition of boxing skill and hard punching that saw Webb take a split decision

Kaplovich, floored by a sizzling left hook for a nine count in the third round, came back to stagger Webb repeatedly with a straight right to the jaw. Both boys were knocked dizzy in the sixth, and at the bell they kept plugging away until Referee Bowen stepped in.

Webb opened a cut under the Baltimorean's right eye in the final round and had him in trouble and hanging on most of the round from body punishment. Suffering a disadvantage in height, Webb took straight rights to the jaw one after another but wouldn't go down.

Al Gilbert, 160, of Washington, chased Ralph McGagin, 169½, of Jacksonville, Fla., all over the ring with a wild, two-handed attack which threatened to end the affair in a knockout at any minute but he had to be satisfied with a six-round decision.

McGagin went down for an eight count in the second round, came back to put Al on the canvas with a straight right in the next round and then went down again for eight in the fifth. He took a steaming right under the heart as he went down, but he made it to his feet. Al finished the fight with a slashed and swollen goose egg under his left eye from McGagin's stabbing right.

Typewriters Beat D. & H., 44 to 43

A foul goal by Lenny Mills in the last three seconds of play last night enabled United Typewriters to upset Delaware & Hudson in a second-half Heurich Amateur Basketball League game at Heurich Gymnasium, 44 to 43.

The Jewish Community Center Big Five barely nosed out United Clay Products, 49 to 46, while Federal Bureau of Investigation won handily over Regal Clothiers, 61-41.

Joe Vosmik Signs With Dodger Club

largely on the say-so of Joe McCarthy of the Yankees. The Brooklyn prexy quoted McCarthy as telling him:

"There wasn't a better left fielder in our league last year than Vosmik."

Jimmy Foxx, Red Sox first baseman, also gave Vosmik a big boost which influenced MacPhail in making the purchase.

"I never saw a fellow have more line drives caught on him than did Vosmik last season," said Foxx. "If I'd had as many line drives caught on me as Vosmik did my batting average would have been about .250."

Although Vosmik won't be 30 until April 4, he has spent 10 years in the American League, breaking in with Cleveland in 1930. He was traded to the St. Louis Browns in 1937 and after one season there went to the Red Sox in exchange for Red Kress, Buster Mills and Buck Newsom, on December 2, 1937.

Vosmik led the American League in hits in 1935 with 216 and again in 1938 with 201. His best year in batting was 1935 when he hit .348.

MacPhail refused to say what field Vosmik would play for Brooklyn.

"That's up to Manager Durocher," said MacPhail. "I get the ballplayers for him and that's his job to find their positions."

Sale of Vosmik by the Red Sox means that Manager Joe Cronin had decided to give Dominic DiMaggio, the heralded brother of Joe of the Yanks, every chance to play regularly. It is believed that Cronin will stick DiMaggio in centerfield, and shift Roger Cramer to left with Ted Williams playing right.

After buying Vosmik MacPhail announced the release of four Dodgers to minor league clubs. Outfielder George Stainback, Pitcher Ira Hutchinson and Catcher Charley George, all were sent to Montreal outright and Outfielder Goody Rosen was sold to Columbus outright.

Bridegroom, Late, Gets His Ticket Fixed

Brandeis' Doctor Wins Leniency for Parking In Restricted Place

A bridegroom who "delayed making wedding preparations," a physician attending retired Supreme Court Justice Brandeis, and a father who heard his daughter had jumped from a tenth story window were among the 66 drivers for whom traffic tickets were adjusted last week.

Seven tickets were canceled outright and 59 violators were excused with warnings.

Three escaped through intervention of high police officials. Fourteen pleaded illness and were let off with warnings. Seven were excused with warnings when they told police their cars had been disabled because of snow or cold weather. Six diplomats got tickets canceled

Harry Friedman, 3500 Thirteenth street northwest, parked in a restricted area because he had just received a call that his 20-year-old daughter, Mildred, had plunged to her death from the tenth floor of the Mayflower Hotel.

Robert E. Hefferman, of Arlington, was excused for parking overtime when he pleaded that he had delayed making wedding preparations. He was aided by a letter to Maj. Ernest Brown, Chief of Police.

Dr. Harry A. Fowler, of Stoneleigh Courts, was let off with a warning for parking in a restricted area. He said he was attending former Supreme Court Justice Brandeis. Augustus Webster Hines, 1721 Newton street northwest, was dismissed with a warning after he presented a letter to Inspector Lewis I. H. Edwards from Charles H. Pardoe. Lillian F. Shinn, 1634 Newton street northwest, was excused with a warning as result of a letter to Maj. Brown.

The six diplomats were Meredith S. Watts, of the Polish Embassy; Luigi Centra, of the Italian Embassy; Roger Haussaye, of the Yugoslav Embassy; Ilse Bohnemann, 1439 Massachusetts avenue northwest; Leon Dostart, 3728 Northampton street northwest, and Charles Lucet, of the French Embassy.

N. Y. Taxpayers Storm Albany To Protest Levies

By the Associated Press

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 12.—Nearly 8,000 aroused taxpayers from Wall street, Main street and rural roads joined today in an antispending and "save us from tax ruin" demonstration unparalleled in New York history.

In a fortress-like armory three blocks from the capitol, its 6,300 temporary seats filled most of the time, speakers representing 829 protesting groups strode to a platform hour after hour to urge "drastic" cuts in a proposed $396,700,000 State budget and demand a "breathing spell" from taxation.

A minority—parent-teacher representatives, labor leaders, auto club spokesmen and State workers—countered with pleas to keep the contemplated spending program intact. In some cases expansion to afford greater education facilities, improve highways and continue mandatory increases for State employes was urged.

Opponents of the proposed budget leveled the bulk of their criticism at mounting relief expenditures. They demanded elimination of relief for "persons who can but won't work." Their recommendations for appropriation slashes ranged from $10,000,000 to $50,000,000.

Public Losses In Trust Found $370,000,000

By the Associated Press

The Securities and Exchange Commission estimated in a report to Congress yesterday that the public lost more than $370,000,000 from 1929 to 1935 in the United Founders Corporation group of investment companies when they were taken over by the American General Corporation.

The report, the latest resulting from the commission's three-year study of investment trusts, related that the first of the 13 companies in the United Founders group was started in 1922 with "an initial capital contribution of $500."

"By 1935, the resources of the group were only $50,000,000. If allowance be made for repurchases by the group of its own securities, dividends paid to stockholders and premiums paid on purchases of subsidiaries' stock, the estimated net loss to the public in the group of companies was in excess of $370,000,000, or approximately 35 per cent of the total loss to investors in all management investment companies proper during the period 1927-1935."

Wheat Prices Edge Higher At Winnipeg

Reports From U. S. Unfavorable Crop Help Advance

By the Associated Press

Winnipeg, Feb. 12.—Pessimistic crop reports from the United States winter wheat belt supplied wheat futures prices with a lift on Winnipeg Grain Exchange today. Light offerings and a restricted export demand pared gains to fractions. At the close quotations were ⅜ to ½ cent a bushel higher, with May at 86⅛, July at 87 to 87⅛ and October 88¼ cents.

Severe dust storms in the winter wheat areas, which followed alternate freezing and thawing weather there last week, lowered the estimate of the winter yield.

Export business continued slow with only a few sales reported. Neutral countries were credited with a few loads for shipment from the Eastern seaboard.

World wheat shipments last week were 7,313,000 bushels compared with 13,046,000 bushels the same week last year.

1940 Ice Advertising To Total $500,000

Wichita, Kans., Feb. 12 (AP).—The American ice industry will spend $500,000 in advertising—most of it in newspapers—in 1940, Hurley G. Hust, of Chicago, advertising director of the National Association of Ice Industries, told the Kansas Ice Men's Association today.

"Stress will be placed upon the use of local newspapers by local ice companies, which are expected to use newspapers more freely as basic advertising media," Hust said.

Export Trade At Highest For Ten Years

New York, Feb. 12.—The year 1939 ended with a sharp spurt in the export trade of the United States, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. The value of merchandise exported in December, totalling $368,000,000 as against $269,000,000 in the same month a year ago, was at the highest level since March 1930.

Up to the end of November, the cumulative total for the year had been running below the 1938 level. The expansion in December, however, was sufficient to result in the annual total showing a slight increase over the 1938 figure.

Exports for the full year were valued at $3,177,000,000 in 1939 as against $3,094,000,000 in 1938. With the exception of 1937, when exports were valued at $3,349,000,000, exports in 1939 were the largest since 1930. At the same time, they were far below the pre-depression figure of $5,241,000,000 in 1929.

The annual value of merchandise imported into the United States rose to $2,318,000,000 in 1939 from $1,960,000,000 in 1938. The gain in imports was thus relatively greater than the gain in exports. Consequently, while exports still exceeded imports, the excess dropped to $859,000,000 in 1939 from $1,134,000,000 in 1938.

Gold and Silver Imports

Net imports of gold and silver into the United States rose in 1939 to the record high figure of $3,645,000,000 from $2,197,000,000 in 1938. Imports of gold and silver were thus more than sufficient to finance the export merchandise balance by a far wider margin than in 1938, especially since the export merchandise balance in 1939 was smaller than in 1938.

The accumulation of foreign funds in the United States, which began in 1934, was consequently greatly accelerated in 1939. This is shown by the fact that net gold and silver imports exceeded the amount needed by foreign countries to pay for excess purchases of American goods by $2,786,000,000 as against $1,063,000,000 in 1938 and the previous high figure of $1,840,000,000 in 1935.

Motor Shortage Holds Up Sales Of U. S. Aircraft

Wilmington, Del., Feb. 10 (AP).—A motor shortage is holding up sale and manufacture of American aircraft, stockholders of the Aviation & Transportation Corporation were told yesterday.

L. I. Hartmeyer, of Long Island, N. Y., financial vice president of the corporation said at the annual meeting the demand for some types of American-made airplanes has increased suddenly.

He added that manufacturers have found it so difficult to obtain motors fast enough to keep up with orders that sales have been restricted.

Three new directors were elected. Gene Tunney, former world heavyweight boxing champion; Samuel F. Pryor, jr., and Benjamin H. Namm. Others were reelected.

Officers will be elected at an organization meeting next week in New York City.

Foreign Stock Prices Hold Fairly Steady

London, Paris, Montreal Slightly Lower Firm; Amsterdam

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 12.—Stocks averaged a bit higher today despite profit-taking in some shares. Transatlantic issues eased slightly at the close, and Far Eastern and industrial bonds weakened, but prices in general showed improvement.

Mining shares tilted upward. Oils were quiet but firm and the stocks of rubber companies forged ahead on a sharp rise in the price of rubber.

Industrial shares were firm with trading in shipping and business stocks active. Some rails were active, rising two to three points.

Paris Firm

Paris, Feb. 12 (AP).—Prices were well supported from the opening today with the close slightly below the day's best in most departments.

Electicite Generale was an outstanding feature, closing up 6 per cent on a proposed capital increase from reserves on a basis of one new for two old shares. The volume remained light, however. Egyptian issues, neglected lately, were a little more active and better. Rubber, base metals and oil shares were also firm.

Rentes were steady with the exchange guaranteed issues better. Efforts to bring down the price of the latter in relation to the ordinary rentes do not seem to be meeting with success.

Amsterdam Lower

Amsterdam, Feb. 12 (AP).—Prices sagged quietly in a dull bourse today, partly due to the holiday in Wall Street. Domestic issues were generally lower, with Royal Dutch closing at 246, off 4½ points from Saturday. Sugar shares were adversely affected by the action of the sugar market. Shipping shares, however, were uninfluenced by the sinking of the S. S. Burgerdijk. Dutch Ford was slightly higher, an isolated firm spot.

American shares were dull and rather heavy, after a lower opening, generally closing at the day's lows. In the bond market Roumanian issues improved. Foreign exchange was quiet, with sterling a bit lower.

Montreal Higher

Montreal, Feb. 12 (AP).—Prices edged slightly higher in late dealings on the stock market today. Canada Car and Foundation showed gains of slightly more than a point while Algoma Steel, Canadian Pacific, Industrial Acceptance and National breweries added small fractions. Also up narrowly were International Pete and McColl. Firming minor fractions in the paper section were St. Lawrence Corporation and Bathurst. Steel of Canada, Bell Telephone, St. Lawrence Corporation preferred, Ogilvie Flour and Canada Steamships eased narrowly while Brazilian, Asbestos, Imperial Oil and Canadian Celanese held unchanged.

Boeing and Colgate Plan New Financing

New York, Feb. 10 (AP).—Two new corporate financing plans were reported under discussion in Wall Street today. One was said to be Boeing Airplane Co.'s tentative plan to offer additional stock to present holders to raise about $4,000,000. The other was Colgate-Palmolive-Peet's consideration of a possible refunding of $12,500,000 6 per cent preferred stock.

N. Y. City Bank Stocks Recover in Week

New York, Feb. 12.—New York City bank stocks recovered during the past week and moderate gains were recorded at the close, according to figures compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster, specialists in bank and insurance stocks. The aggregate market value of 16 leading issues on Friday, February 9 was $1,578,361,000 compared with $1,560,850,000 at the close of the previous week, an increase of $17,511,000, or 1.12 per cent.

Insurance stocks in the New York City market also continued higher during the past week. The aggregate market value of 20 leading fire and casualty insurance issues on Friday, February 9 was $653,539,000 compared with $645,062,000 at the close of the previous week, an increase of $8,477,000, or 1.31 per cent.

Failure of Stocks to Respond To Business Puzzles Street

Problematical Roosevelt Third Term, Doubts as to Allied Military Victory Are Factors, Rukeyser Says

By Merrlye Stanley Rukeyser,
Economic Commentator.

New York, Feb. 12.—Recent rubbing of shoulders with business leaders in the Middle West led to oft-repeated inquiries as to whether Wall Street had some secret advance bad news which was not yet visible to the naked eye. There was widespread perplexity over the seeming failure of the speculative markets to take full cognizance of improved corporate earnings.

Returning to New York, I found no important new fears. The old phobias, however, are still operative. First, financiers and corporate leaders are worried by the failure of President Roosevelt, up to this writing, to say or do anything to discourage the organized campaign for a third term. Secondly, men at the financial center are disturbed by the objective recognition that military victory by the Allies is by no means definitely in the bag.

M. S. RUKEYSER

Men are moved by vague imaginings as to what might happen to the world in the event of even a partial totalitarian victory. Moreover, they also are worried about the economic consequences of eve na long-drawn-out stalemate. Thirdly, Wall Street is concerned over deflation of the brokerage and banking business.

Thus our friends in the Middle West should be advised to go back to business and to stick to their knitting.

Wall Street seemingly has no inside information which warrants a departure from the prudent basis for industrial management which has prevailed since the outbreak of the new war in Europe.

War Order Policy

This policy entails favoring normal domestic business to war orders. It also involves full recognition by management of the urgent need for depreciating with the utmost speed special machinery and plant built to take care of war orders. Likewise, prudence calls for setting up special reserves against any abnormal rise in prices of raw materials carried in company inventories. It similarly requires quickly attuning production schedules to orders, instead of making goods for inventory in the hope that something will turn up.

It is a sheer myth that Presidential years are periods of poor business. On the contrary, an analysis of the annals of American business shows that in the past we have witnessed Presidential years of full prosperity, of mediocre business and of depression. Out of 36 Presidential years, 14 were years of clear-cut prosperity, 12 years of depression and 10 years of irregularity and uncertainty.

However, it must be recognized that business attaches more significance to politics this year than in the ordinary Presidential election. Certainly the economic issues at stake are seemingly more important than in any Presidential election since 1896. And in '96 the late William Jennings Bryan was proposing only to change the relationship between silver and gold. This time the broader question of whether our economy is still capable of normal growth is at issue.

Price Structure

And yet the total volume of business and employment in 1940 will be conditioned by other factors besides those commonly discussed. A fundamental determinant will be the state of balance of equilibrium within the internal price structure.

If war buying and crop conditions, for example, should result in a further closing of the price gaps between farm products and industrial goods, then the economy will be ripe for expansion. Correction of this major maladjustment of the depression would bring widespread reemployment. And to the extent it occurred, it would enable private employers to relieve the Government by absorbing to private pay rolls those now carried on relief rolls. Such a development would relieve business of the deadening hand of confiscatory taxation.

Thus, in forecasting conditions for the coming months, it will be more helpful to watch commodity price relationships than to focus attention on the stock ticker. The stock market is not directly synchronized with business changes, and at present the persistent foreign liquidation makes the stock market even less reliable than normally as a business barometer.

$90,000,000 Produce Bought By A. & P in Year

New York, Feb. 12.—American farmers moved 11 per cent more fresh fruits and vegetables into consumption through the retail stores of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. last year than in 1938, it was indicated today in a company survey covering 17 major commodities.

Total A. & P. purchases of all fresh fruits and vegetables amounted to approximately $90,000,000 last year, the report showed, an increase of about 20 per cent in the cash amount paid by the food chain for these products, according to estimates of the A. & P. buying affiliate, the Atlantic Commission Co.

"These purchasing gains reflect the company's consistent efforts to increase consumption of all fresh fruits and vegetables," the A. & P. said. "They can be attributed in part to active participation in chain stores' producer-consumer campaigns to move surplus crops, and also to the company's effort to boost general non-relief consumption of products listed under the Government's food stamp plan. During the last six months of 1939, when operations of the stamp plan became more extensive, our purchases of various Government-listed surplus commodities rose as high as 25 per cent over the corresponding period of 1938."

Aluminum Output Last Year Sets New Record

Virgin aluminum production in the United States last year was the largest on record, the Bureau of Mines reported yesterday.

Despite the drought, which curtailed hydro-electric power development in the South, the plant at Alcoa, Tenn., produced 41 per cent of the total output, with 35 per cent being made at Massena, N. Y., 13 per cent at Badin, N. C., and 11 per cent at Niagara Falls, N. Y.

The 1939 output amounted to 327,090,000 pounds, valued at $64,600,000. For 1938, the 286,882,000 pounds produced were valued at $56,659,000.

"The largest increase in demand for aluminum was caused by national preparations for defense and by war abroad," the bureau reported. "In 1939 the aircraft industry consumed twice the amount of aluminum that it did in 1937, the previous record year."

Despite the demand, however, the domestic price remained unchanged throughout the year, and the Aluminum Co. of America announced there would be no increase in the basic ingot price of 20 cents a pound during the first quarter of 1940.

The Aluminum Co. of America announced a $30,000,000 expansion program to begin this year, including an $18,000,000 plant at Vancouver, Wash., and additions to the Alcoa plant.

Caravan Club Backs Sen. Radcliffe

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Walter Bauer conducts the Department of Agriculture Orchestra Monday evening in the South Building auditorium. Soloists: Irving Ginberg, violin; Benjamin Levenson, violoncello. Program: Overture, "Hiawatha" (Kroeger), "Hymn to Nefertiti" (Crist), Double Concerto in A minor (Brahms), Overture, "Mountains of the North" (Tregina), Symphony No. 5 in D major (Mendelssohn).

With his customary zeal in providing unhackneyed programs, Dr. Walter Bauer conducted the Department of Agriculture Orchestra last evening in three American compositions, the double concerto of Brahms, which has not been heard here for a long time, and Mendelssohn's "Reformation" symphony, which cannot be considered an overdone work these days. Those who for various reasons could not attend the concert will have another opportunity tonight, when the program will be repeated.

The American composers honored on this occasion were the late Ernest Richard Kroeger, of St. Louis; Bainbridge Crist, of South Yarmouth, Mass., and the late Charles L. Coy, of Washington, who wrote under the pen name of Arthur Tregina. Kroeger's work was his symphonic overture, "Hiawatha," which is virtually a tone-poem based on Longfellow's verse narrative.

Bainbridge Crist was expected to conduct his "Hymn to Nefertiti," but was unable to come to Washington because of illness. The hymn has a symbolic character indicative of the composer's knowledge of mysticism. Nefertiti was the queen of Pharaoh Amenhotep IV of Egypt, that remarkable ruler who tried to establish monotheism in the valley of the Nile before Moses led the Hebrew people into the wilderness of Sinai to worship but one God. Mr. Crist's tonal invocation may be taken as a hymn to the unity of mankind in peace and comity. The music is grave at the outset and grows in fervor as it approaches a triumphant climax, and the work is skillfully constructed both in its technical details and in the cumulative force of the musical ideas.

Arthur Tregina's "Mountains of the North," a tribute to the Green Mountains of Vermont, where he lived his boyhood, is colorful description of natural scenes, fresh and glowing in spirit and filled with emotional verve. The instrumentation is particularly effective in the woodwind and brass with which the composer had long experience as a member of the United States Marine Band until his retirement in 1919.

Irving Ginberg and Benjamin Levenson, concertmaster and first violoncellist of the orchestra, gave an excellent account of themselves as soloists in two movements of the Brahms double concerto, a work which makes exacting demands on the interpreters. The composition is one of the finest that Brahms penned, rich in texture and beautiful in the melodic designs. The second half of the program was devoted to Mendelssohn's fifth symphony known as the "Reformation" because of the use in the last movement of the Protestant chorale, "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God."

George F. Ross presents Harriet Payne in a viola recital Sunday night in the Roosevelt Hotel, Program of compositions by Handel, Brahms, Ravel and Harriet Payne. Assisting artist: Margaret Besler.

Several string players of the National Symphony Orchestra enjoyed the same kind of a busman's holiday as this reviewer by joining an audience in the Roosevelt Hotel late Sunday evening to hear a recital by Harriet Payne, first viola of the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra. Margaret Besler, who is rapidly achieving distinction here as a soprano, was responsible for the pleasurable occasion. A friend and former fellow-student of Miss Payne, she induced her to make a plane flight to Washington, and assisted her at the piano.

Despite limited time for rehearsal, the two young artists displayed notable collaboration in a Handel concerto, a Brahms sonata, and a group of short compositions. Miss Payne is an admirable player of the viola, an instrument which few women have mastered. She draws a firm and beautiful tone, and she has a technical ease that showed itself in the perfection of her intonation and the skill of her fingering.

Her indubitable artistry and musicianship were evident not only in her interpretation of the music of others but also in her own compositions: a nocturne, a burleska and two excerpts from a "Lullaby Suite." Her writing reveals imagination and finesse, melodic invention and a knowledge of the proper use of modern idioms in harmony.

Contract Bridge

An unusual end-play appeared recently.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	2 ◇	2 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: K ◇.

West opened the king of diamonds and followed with the ace and queen. East discarding the nine of spades. West then led the singleton spade, deuce. East won with the queen and returned a trump: declarer took the king and ace, leaving the queen a winner in West's hand.

But there was a chance of end-playing West with the heart queen.

Declarer took the king and ace of clubs and led the spade jack to dummy, to win the ace in the event that West held two spades. The opponent paused before discarding West correctly discarded a club: declarer took the spade ace and led a heart. West stuck with the lead, chose a diamond, on which declarer discarded dummy's losing spade, trumping in his hand. He made two hearts, losing three diamonds, a heart and a spade.

Double-dummy defense will defeat the contract. If West plays only one round of diamonds and shift to a spade, declarer must duck and East wins. Now East reads his partner's deuce as a singleton and plays a spade, for his partner to ruff.

West then takes the ace of diamonds, and on his next play, the queen. East must ruff with his lone trump and return a spade for his partner to ruff. This will give the adversaries two diamonds and a diamond ruff, a spade and two spade ruffs to defeat the contract one.

Glenn Miller's unusual arrangement of "Tuxedo Junction," Erskine Hawkins' swing tune inspired by mill hands dancing in shag palaces near Birmingham, Ala., railroad junction, is winning listeners' enthusiastic approval from coast to coast.

Requests have prompted him again to feature it on tonight's program over WJSV at 10 o'clock.

The Andrews Sisters—Maxine, Patty and LaVerne—tonight sing "Got No Strings," hit tune of Disney's "Pinocchio" film. Wednesday, they revive the 25-year-old favorite "Down by the Ohio" and Thursday repeat by request "Little Red Fox."

LATEST ADDITIONS to the ranks of radio stars commuting between Miami Beach and New York are Andre Kostelanetz, conductor, and Tony Martin, singing master of ceremonies of Columbia's "Tune Up Time." Tony is featured as the singing star of the Royal Palms Revue at the Royal Palm

AL PEARCE, CBS comedian, just returned from a hunting trip in Mexico with the legal limit of duck and quail and at the actual limit of his endurance. It seems that 38 miles south of Mexicali, the automatic clutch in Al's car "froze" and the car would operate only in reverse. He drove backward toward Mexicali. Mexican police got curious. Pearce had to explain why he was driving backward and why blood covered his clothes—blood from the game. The Mexicans were looking for an escaped murderer. Pearce finally made Mexicali, but by then his good humor—like his car—was in reverse.

THE DRAGON'S TEETH
By ELLERY QUEEN

Chapter 31

"I DON'T WANT to interrupt," murmured Kerrie, "but I—thought pretty much the same thing once."

"Yes, Beau is a secretive individual. Seems tough. Not really, though. I hope you'll apologize, too!" Kerire flushed and lowered her gaze. "I'm sure you will, to Mr. Rummell's complete satisfaction. Now where was I?

"Oh, yes! That makes two of our four possibilities. The remaining pair are Messrs. Goossens and De Carlos, the trustees of the Cole estate. The evening Mr. Rummell and Miss Shawn registered at the Villanoy as man and wife, the evening of the murder, Mr. Rummell deserted his 'wife' almost as soon as they had checked in. Quit her cold, the softie. A gentleman beneath it all, you see. Wouldn't take advantage of an innocent girl——"

"Get on, get on," snapped the Inspector.

"Your wish is my command. At any rate, driven to the outer world by his conscience, Mr. Rummell thought of how he might occupy his time. He decided to occupy it usefully. He went up to our office and wrote two letters identical in content—one addressed to Mr. Goossens, one addressed to Mr. De Carlos.

"The letters informed these gentlemen, as co-trustees, that the marriage was a hoax, and begged the recipients to keep this intelligence confidential. Beau wrote only because, had he not informed the trustees of the true state of affairs, they would have had to take immediate steps to cut her out of her uncle's will. Being in fact unmarried, Miss Shawn was still entitled to her inheritance.

"My partner sent these two letters by special delivery. It was late at night, so of course the letters must have been delivered early the following morning. By the morning after the crime, then, two people more knew that the marriage had been a hoax—the aforesaid Messrs. Goossens and De Carlos. Theoretically, then, either of you two gentlemen," and Mr. Queen addressed himself with a smile to the two trustees, "could have sent the anonymous tip to the police."

"I didn't!" cried De Carlos.

"Nor I," said Goossens.

"Wait a minute," barked the Inspector. "You've mentioned four, Ellery. There are really five. You're forgetting this phony Justice of the Peace who performed the fake marriage ceremony. He certainly knew!"

"Now, dad," said Mr. Queen sadly, "Must you steal my thunder?"

"Five."

"Four." Mr. Queen shook his head. "I said four, and I still say four. Acrobatic mathematics, really."

"Rummell, Goossens, De Carlos, you, and the phony justice—that makes five!"

"This pains me," murmured Mr. Queen. "I must dissent: four. Because, you see, I was the phony justice."

He grinned at Kerrie, who stared back, with parted lips. The inspector could only wave his fragile hand feebly.

"Go on," said Lloyd Goossens, lighting his pipe. "It seems Mr. De Carlos and I are to be eliminated by some logical process. I'm curious to hear how you do it."

"I don't want to hear," yelled Mr. De Carlos. "I'm getting out of here. I've had enough of this——"

"Not quite enough, Mr. De Carlos." Ellery eyed him and De Carlos collapsed in his chair in a sort of agony. "And since you're so reluctant to hear, you shall. We must pay special attention to you, Mr. De Carlos. You've caused more trouble in this case, I'm sure, than you're worth! You've been a confuser of issues, a brilliantly red herring, from the very first. And yet, oddly enough, for all the sleepless nights you've given me, I must confess this case would never have been solved had you not been a factor in it."

"I must say," began De Carlos helplessly, "I must say——"

"I'll say it for you, shall I?" Mr. Queen smiled. "You see, you're the man who, in the guise of Cole, brought that blessed, significant, colossal fountain-pen into my life. Did that pen belong to you? Did it?"

"I told you it didn't!" cried De Carlos. "It didn't!"

"Oh, I know it didn't. Not because you say so, however. It can't be your pen because of your teeth, you see."

"Certainly, certainly," said De Carlos with eagerness, "As you know—I have false teeth—"

"Nonsense. A man with a plate in his mouth might have made those identifying marks on the pen. But not a man with your plate, Mr. De Carlos. You should send your dentist an extra fee; he's really a very bad dentist, for which you should show your gratitude. Because when I examined your plate—remember the incident, Mr. De Carlos? when Mr. Rummell converted you into a human cocktail-shaker and your plate flew out of your mouth?—when I examined it, as I say, I saw that it was a genuine old-timer . . . one of those hideous plates with inhumanly regular teeth, so regular, so perfectly aligned, that they simply could not have made those deep dents in the pen.

"No, those dents could have been made only by a canine out of line, and longer and more pointed than normal. So I knew the pen wasn't yours."

"Now, then, I asked myself, how did Mr. De Carlos get hold of that pen? Well, the reasonably assumptive source would have been Cole, the man De Carlos was impersonating at the time I first saw the pen in his possession. Was the pen Cole's?

"It might have been at that time, for all I knew; but Capt. Angus scotched that theory last night, and the photographs he produced supported his story: Cadmus Cole didn't have a tooth in his mouth, and moreover never wore a plate.

"SO THE PEN wasn't Cole's. If it wasn't Cole's, and it wasn't yours, Mr. De Carlos, then you must have got hold of it by accident or taken it by mistake, believing it to be yours. A mental leap in the dark—but the gap could be supported by a solid confirmation.

"I knew you were bady myopic. In impersonating Cole three months ago, you had been forced to put aside your spectacles, since Cole didn't wear any. As a result you were badly handicapped: your vision was blurred, you bumped into the door-jamb twice, you squinted and strained—in fine, exhibited every evidence of acute near-sightedness.

"Now a man who could mistake a door-jamb for empty space might easily mistake one fountain-pen for another. So, I reasoned, if you had visited some one just before coming to our office that day, you might have picked up the wrong pen there. Did you visit some one else before you appeared in our office that day? Oh, yes, indeed. You told us so yourself. You even told us whom you had visited. You had visited Mr. Goossens, for the purpose of delivering into his hands Cadmus Cole's sealed will.

"Just a moment," said Mr. Queen swiftly, at the gasp and lightning movement before him, "I'm not finished. Was it Goossen's pen De Carlos left behind in our office? Let's see. If De Carlos took Goossen's pen by mistake, then he probably left his own pen behind in Goossen's office."

He darted forward and flipped back the attorney's coat. Goossens was so astonished his pipe almost fell out of his mouth. Mr. Queen snatched an ordinary black fountain pen out of the man's vest-pocket and held it up. There were a few scratches and dents on the cap.

"Still up to your old biting tricks, eh, Goossens?" said Mr. Queen. He turned and held the pen up before De Carlos's nose. "Mr. De Carlos, is this your property?"

De Carlos pointed with a shaking finger at the tiny initials, E D C, on the body of the pen.

"Then I think it high time, Mr. Lloyd Goossens," said Mr. Queen in a curt voice, whirling about, "that you stopped play-acting and confessed to the murder of Ann Bloomer!"

INSPECTOR QUEEN and District Attorney Sampson jumped up, and Sergt. Velie moved quickly towards them from the door. But Mr. Queen waved them back.

Goossens stared up at him. Then he shook his head, as if in bewilderment. Finally, he took his pipe out of his mouth and chuckled. "Very amusing, Mr. Queen. A little grisly in its humor, but I'm one man who appreciates a joke."

But when he saw how those about him were, in a rising horror, pushing their chairs imperceptibly away from his vicinity, he lost his smile and shouted: "You're mad! Do you think you can get away with this?"

"To the bitter end," said Mr. Queen reflectively. Then he sighed. "Very well, we'll go on." The inspector, the sergeant, and Sampson remained standing, however, their eyes on the attorney.

"Mr. De Carlos! You'll swear, if necessary, that this pen I just removed from Goossens's pocket belongs to you?"

"Yes, yes," said De Carlos excitedly. "I'll tell you just how it happened. While I was in Goossens's private office delivering Cole's will, I took out my own pen to write a list of ports we expected to stop at during the coming West Indian cruise. I laid the pen down on his desk. When I left, I must have picked up Goossens's pen by mistake, because I recall when I came in that he was writing. Neither of us noticed what I did. When your messenger delivered the other pen to the yacht, I received it; I knew it wasn't mine, and saw what must have happened. But we were sailing and it was too late to do anything about returning it. Later, I forgot the whole incident."

"And so, I fancy, did Mr. Goossens," remarked Mr. Queen dryly, leaning against a table and folding his arms on his chest. "Your first mistake, Goossens: not getting rid of De Carlos's pen. A trivial mistake, but then you didn't realize the significance of those teeth-marks on your own pen, or that they tied up with the marks on the pencil of your set which you dropped in Room 1726. And since then, falling into your old nervous habit of chewing on the caps of pens, you've been maltreating De Carlos's pen in the same way . . . Let me see your pipe, please."

He said it so casually, and walked towards Goossens so idly, and took the pipe from the man's mouth so very swiftly, that the lawyer was caught unprepared. When he realized the significance of Ellery's action, he sprang to his feet.

But it was too late. Mr. Queen was examining the stem of the pipe intently, and Goossens's arms were pinned immovably back by the iron hands of Sergt. Velie.

"Proof number two," observed Mr. Queen, nodding with satisfaction. "If you'll compare the end of this pipestem with the caps of the fountain-pen and pencil, dad, you'll find all three bear the identical impressions of his teeth. Beau told me that he never saw Goossens without a pipe, and on the few occasions of my own meetings with him, I remarked the same thing. The habitual pipesmoker is so accustomed to gripping a pipestem with his teeth that even when he isn't smoking his pipe he'll unconsciously try to compensate for the lack by biting on something else. A laboratory examination will prove that Goossens made the same marks on the stem of his pipe as appear on the pen and pencil. Well, Goossens have you anything to say for publication now?"

AND GOOSSENS said quietly: "It's really all right, sergeant. You don't have to keep holding on to me as if I were a . . . criminal." He laughed at the absurdity of the notion.

Sergt. Velie glanced at Inspector Queen, who nodded. The sergeant held on to Goossen's wrists with one hand and with the other swiftly searched him. When he was satisfied his prisoner was unarmed, he stepped back.

Goossens shook himself. "Do you believe this nonsense, Inspector Queen? Or you, Mr. Sampson? I hope you both realize what a beautiful suit for slander you're setting up!"

"Not to mention," drawled Mr. Queen, "one for false arrest. Oh, quite beautiful——"

There was an altercation in the corridor. Sergt. Velie hurried to the door and opened it.

"Oh, there you are!" said Beau Rummell cheerfully. "Velie, tell this floogie I'm one of the best people."

"Come in, Beau, come in!" called Mr. Queen. "You couldn't have timed your entrance more dramatically."

Beau ran in and sopped short when he saw Goossens, on his feet and pale with anger, in the center of the room. "Oh," he said. "The third act, hey? Well, here's curtains!"

Long Advocates Extension Of Trade Agreements Act

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Feb. 12.—Extension of the Trade Agreements Act to meet conditions resulting from the European war and to ease the disruption of trade which will follow the end of the war, was advocated today by Assistant Secretary of State Breckinridge Long.

Long said that "in the coming three years we shall need the flexibility which the trade agreements program affords as greatly as, if not more than, we needed it in the emergency of the great depression."

Pointing out that "the countries constituting our greatest markets have become engaged in war," the Assistant Secretary of State said that "while we cannot foresee all the changes" likely to result in world trade, "we can foresee the inevitable fact of rapid change in the nature and direction of the world's trade and in the trade controls and trading agreements adopted by both belligerent and neutral nations."

Extension of the Trade Agreements Act, he said, would:

1. Permit the United States "to resist discrimination against its commerce, to insure that unreasonable quota and exchange restrictions will not be placed abroad on our exports, and to shield, as far as possible our domestic economy from the disruptive effects of war abroad.
2. Help to ease trade "adjustments which will in any event be difficult enough when the war ends."
3. Contribute "to a more stable peace than that which followed the last war," keeping alive the principles embodied in the trade agreements program.

Long said agreements entered into with 21 countries under the present act have resulted in a decided recovery for American exports "without material injury to any group of producers in this country."

The United States Marshal's office yesterday announced the arrest in San Antonio, Tex., of William J. Dixon, 29, of Silver Spring, whose automobile, containing a purported "suicide note," was found parked here last June.

Dixon was indicted here on a charge of attempted rape made by a 15-year-old girl who said she accepted a ride in his car.

Deputy United States Marshal James A. Quinn traced the man for eight months.
